STORY OF THIS BOOK

As the result of a vote passed by the Town, at its Town Meeting of March 18, 1919, a committee was appointed to consider the advisability of preparing, and publishing a history of the Town of Wakefield with reference to Wakefield's part in the World War. The committee was composed of:

|----------------------------|----------------------|
| Ashton N. Thayer, Chairman |                      |
| Gardner E. Campbell        | John A. Maloney      |
| Harry E. Clemons           | Col. John H. McMahon |
| A. Leon Cutler             | Michael Roach        |
| Riberot Dutton             | Ellen White          |
| Gertrude Lee               | Carrie Wiley         |

The recommendations of the committee were accepted and adopted at the adjourned Town Meeting of June 10, 1919 and the Town voted to raise and appropriate the sum of two thousand dollars to carry out the work

In the fall of 1919 Miss Emma Florence Eaton, daughter of the late Chester W. and Emma E. Eaton, formerly of 328 Main Street, Wakefield, was selected to write this history, because of her well known work in the writing of literature. In July 1921 she was taken ill, and further progress in the work was delayed. Her illness continued over a long period, and finally resulted in her death July 6, 1933. Miss Eaton was loved by all who knew her for her kind and loving personality.

In December 1935, the work was again resumed under a W.P.A. Project, sponsored by the Town Fathers and Project Supervisor Mr. J. Theodore Whitney. A Staff of fourteen employees continued the tremendous task of securing the Service Records and data of more than one thousand Veterans, required for the completion of this work. Only those who have actually been engaged in the work itself, can realize the difficulties which had to be overcome in securing adequate and reliable records. In a work of this sort there must necessarily be some inaccuracies, but no effort has been spared to keep them down to the minimum.

The Town is grateful to the Veterans, Military, Patriotic, Civil and Spiritual Organizations, and also to the Citizens for their co-operation in connection with this work.

This book is dedicated to the Soldiers and Sailors, of the World War. A reminder to the generations that are to follow, of the sacrifices made by the heroic men and women and patriotic citizens of the Town of Wakefield, Massachusetts.

P R E F A C E

It is hoped that posterity will receive beneficial information from the historic work in recording the tremendous consequences of armed conflict between nations. The causes that lead to the enormous destruction of men, wealth, property, and material of every description; the degradation, the destitution and diseases that always follow wars waged upon one pretext or another must be revealed.

Higher institutions of learning should concentrate their intellect in a determined effort to expose the facts and causes that lead to war, because the modern implements of destruction are so devastating that civilization will be greatly retarded if not destroyed.

History repeats itself in the effort to arouse enthusiasm and to develop emotions justifying the people of a nation to enter armed conflict. The World War drew America into the "Inferno", and she emerged from the conflict confident of the fact that she left nothing undone in her effort to win with honor, and save the "World for Democracy."

IN FLANDERS FIELD

In Flanders Field the poppies blow
Between the crosses, row on row,
That mark our place; and in the sky
The larks, still bravely singing, fly
Scarce heard amidst the guns below.

We are the Dead. Short days ago
We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow,
Loved and were loved, and now we lie
In Flanders Field.

Take up your quarrel with the foe.
To you from falling hands we throw
The torch; be yours to hold it high.
If ye break faith with us who die
We shall not sleep, though poppies grow
In Flanders Field.

ON

WAKEFIELD IN WAR TIME.

It is to the honor of the Town of Wakefield that during the long and trying days of the World War, her records was a noble one, of faithfulness to the obligations and restrictions incident to the war, and of alert response to every call. Nine hundred men and women were enrolled in the different branches of the Service and there were many men and women engaged in hazardous occupations such as gas and munition plants.

Forty one gave their lives to the cause and, ninety seven were gassed or wounded; twenty seven received decorations for valor. Three received the Distinguish Service Cross; four the Silver Star decoration; two the Navy War Cross; one the French Legion of Honor; twelve the French Croix de Guerre; one the Italian Silver Medal; two the Polish Medal of Honor, and two the Polish Cross of Honor. Thirty seven were also cited for gallantry in action. One hundred and four received Officer's Commissions in the Army, Navy and Marine Corps.

Not only did hundreds of our young men serve bravely, and many dieing in the line of duty, but there was also no lack of devotion among those who waited at home.

As we recall that unreal April 1917, and the many succeeding months of anxious apprehension, there come back to our minds the events of those not-to-be forgotten days.

With pride we remember the lavish expenditure of time and thought on the part of the business men and professional workers who served on important committees; of the quick answer to the constant needs for money by the thousands of men, women and children who helped to make the Liberty Loan Drives and the War Chest Fund, and all other necessary campaigns so universally successful.

We recall, too, the spiritual support and the steady cooperation given by the Pastors of all Churches; the enthusiastic help that came from many fraternal and patriotic organizations, as well as the assistance of the various Clubs and Societies.

WAKEFIELD COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC SAFETY

Early in the Spring of 1917, the town took steps to have a definite committee appointed to look after the soldiers and sailors who were in service, and the families dependent upon them. At the town meeting held March 26, 1917, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:-

RESOLUTIONS:

In view of the probability of the calling out of the entire military and naval organizations in Massachusetts, including many Wakefield men, representing all branches of the government service, and as a further evidence of the consistency of the town of Wakefield in having already approved the course of President Wilson, and the patriotic service of Congressman Frederick W. Dallinger, it is hereby

RESOLVED: That the Town of Wakefield in town meeting assembled, authorizes the Moderator to appoint a committee to be known as the Citizens' War Relief Committee to have full authority and power to add to its number and appoint necessary sub-committees, and raise funds by public or private subscription for the benefit of Wakefield men enlisted in the military service of the United States, and for the benefit of persons dependent upon said enlisted men in cases wherever needed.

RESOLVED: That the officers and members of Company A, 6th Infantry Regiment, Massachusetts National Guard, be heartily commended for their activity and readiness for service in the defense of our country, as already amply exemplified in decades past during the Civil War and Spanish War; also, that all Wakefield members of other military and naval organizations be likewise commended for their proffered services.

RESOLVED: That in order to avoid unnecessary delay and to systematize the relief work that may be necessary in Wakefield in the present crisis, it is suggested that the Citizens' War Relief Committee hereby appoint a meeting on Tuesday evening, March 27, at the State Armory in conjunction with a meeting called by the Fine Members of the Richardson Light Guard, and it is suggested that all work along those lines be done as representing the town of Wakefield, and that an appeal is hereby made to the Wakefield public, generally to co-operate with the Wakefield Citizens' War Relief Committee, and such sub-committees as may be appointed as an evidence of Wakefield's patriotism and loyalty.

RESOLVED: That these resolutions be spread upon the records of the town.

Solon O. Richardson    Honorary President
 Charles E. Walton, President
 Dr. J. William O'Connell, Vice President
 Harris M. Dolbeare, Secretary
 Fine Members' Association

In accordance with the above resolution, Moderator Eaton appointed the following committee to act as the Citizens' War Relief Committee:

|                          |                     |
|--------------------------|---------------------|
| Eden K. Bowser           | John J. Round       |
| J. Warren Poland         | Stanley B. Dearborn |
| Samuel K. Hamilton       | Charles N. Winship  |
| Francis H. Marion        | William F. Barrett  |
| Thomas E. Dyer           | George E. Walker    |
| Michael H. Low           | Edwin C. Miller     |
| Col. John H. McMahon     | Raymond H. Pierce   |
| Henry A. Feindel         | Arthur H. Thayer    |
| Dr. Solon O. Richardson  | Charles E. Walton   |
| Dr. J. William O'Connell | Harris M. Dolbeare  |

During the adjournment of the meeting, the Citizens' War Relief Committee met for formal organization. Mr. John J. Round was elected chairman of the committee, and Town Treasurer George E. Walker, Secretary. It was voted that the Citizens' preliminary War Relief Committee approved by the town join with the War Relief Committee of the Fine Members' Association, and of Company A, Sixth Regiment, Massachusetts National Guard, thus making one permanent War Relief Committee.

At a later meeting of the town, April 2, 1917, it was voted to change the name of this committee to the Wakefield Committee on Public Safety, and resolutions were unanimously adopted by the town, an abstract from these resolutions being as follows:

WHEREAS, the town has voted to uphold President Wilson and the administration in dealings with the government of Germany, also in taking steps toward creating a Citizens' War Relief Committee to meet emergencies incident to the calling out of the National Guard, and the enlistment of Wakefield soldiers and sailors, and

WHEREAS, a request has been made by the Committee on Public Safety, representing the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, to the Town of Wakefield, that the town should organize a committee on Public Safety to work with other Committees representing cities and towns in the State in conjunction with the Massachusetts Committee on Public Safety, it is

RESOLVED: That the Citizens' War Relief Committee be officially designated as the Wakefield Committee on Public Safety, to continue in the work already inaugurated, and that besides the members already named, the new committee shall include the Board of Selectmen, the town treasurer, town counsel and chief of police. Also RESOLVED: That the Wakefield Committee on Public Safety be authorized to add to this number and to appoint such sub-committees as may be necessary.

The Committee on Public Safety thus organized had a long and splendid record of patriotic service throughout the months of the great conflict.

Among the forms of service carried on by this committee was the affording relief to needy families in the town, securing trucks and motor cars for use in cases of emergency, and in purchasing an auto truck for the use of Company A before the departure of the members for overseas. A sub-committee was appointed on Food Production and Conservation, consisting of:

|                         |                   |
|-------------------------|-------------------|
| John J. Round, Chariman |                   |
| Philip Bruorton         | Edwin C. Miller   |
| Joseph L. Gooch         | George M. Poland  |
| J. Lowe McMahon         | William C. Strong |
| Townsend F. Meriam      | Edson W. White    |

This committee was very active and helpful throughout the whole time of its existence. Arthur C. Verge was elected local merchant representative to act in conjunction with the State and Federal Food Administrators in securing co-operation, and seeing that instructions of the government for retail stores were thoroughly carried out in Wakefield. Money was also appropriated for the use of Company A while the men were in camp before going overseas, with the understanding that the money might be expended for necessary medical supplies. A committee on health was appointed by the President Charles E. Walton, consisting of:

|                          |                |
|--------------------------|----------------|
| Doctors Curtis L. Sopher |                |
| Frank T. Woodbury        | Elwin H. Wells |

the committee later being increased by the addition of:

|                             |                      |
|-----------------------------|----------------------|
| Doctor J. William O'Connell |                      |
| Doctor T. Fulton Parks      | Doctor John W. Heath |
| Augustus D. Jenkins         | David Taggart        |

A committee on horses, consisting of George A. Cowdrey, Samuel T. Parker and George W. Killorin was also appointed by the president. The committee was interested also in the recruiting committee as announced by President Walton, consisting of Lt.-Col. J. H. McMahon, Captain George M. Thompson, Frank H. Hackett, George E. Walker, and Edgar O. Dewey of Reading, chairman of the Board of Selectmen of that town. The Relief Committee was assisted in its work by a committee from the Special Aid Society, consisting of:

Mrs. Ida Farr Miller

Mrs. Eva Gowing Ripley      Bertha M. Taylor

Mrs. Jennie P. Locke.

Charles W. Hodgdon, George E. Walker and Harris M. Dolbeare were members of the publicity committee. A very cordial interest was taken in the public farewell demonstration for Company A in August, 1917. A committee of five was appointed by Chairman Charles E. Walton to prepare a definite program for the consideration of the general committee. This sub-committee of five consisted of:

Dr. Curtis L. Sopher

Charles N. Winship      John J. Round

Warren Poland      Captain George M. Thompson

The program suggested by this Committee was carried out in a very enthusiastic manner and included a reception at the Armory, and a brief address by Rev. Florence J. Halloran, followed by a dance, and on the following day a parade in which the Grand Army, Spanish War Veterans, Company H, State Guard and Company A took part. Much interest was taken also, in the matter of procuring fuel, and a fuel committee to represent to town of Wakefield was appointed by James J. Storrow, the fuel administrator of Boston, the committee consisting of:

George H. Taylor      J. Warren Poland

Another of the committees was the one appointed by President Walton, to confer with other organizations regarding the Soldiers' benefit proposition. This last Committee consisted of:

Christopher F. Collins

Thomas A. Lane      Daniel F. Regan

The Stamp Saving project was endorsed by the committee and the most enthusiastic co-operation and help was given to the efforts made by Wakefield Liberty Loan Committee in endeavoring to secure Wakefield's share in this extremely important patriotic movement. Among the manifold interests of the Public Safety Committee, was the active part taken in canvassing the town for funds for war purposes in connection with the Wakefield Liberty War Fund. There was a joint committee appointed representing the Public Safety Committee and the Red

Triangle Executive Committee. The matter of giving employment to the returning soldiers was discussed earnestly and frequently, and the matter of having a suitable soldiers' memorial was taken up by this committee, it being voted that the chairman confer with the Board of Selectmen in regard to the whole project, and also the subject of preparing the history of the town of Wakefield's share in the war. Engraved testimonials were presented by the Public Safety Committee to the families of the Wakefield soldiers and sailors who lost their lives in the war. It was not until April, 1919, that the affairs of the committee on Public Safety were practically closed except in the expenditure of funds on hand, and in responding to legitimate calls from time to time. The expenditures for relief were made without any publicity, and known only to the Relief Committee and letters of the sincerest appreciation were received from the recipients of this relief fund. The expenses were kept down to the very lowest, and no permanent headquarters were maintained as in many other cities and towns. The final report of the treasurer Harris M. Dolbeare, was made September 18, 1920

THE WAKEFIELD WAR CHEST

The work accomplished by the Liberty War Fund or Wakefield's War Chest had a distinct and very important place in the general campaign for securing necessary funds for the various war needs.

In the early part of April, 1918, the appeal was made, and the statement of the scope and proposed methods was given. The plan was to consolidate the various forms of relief work into one single organization, so that further campaigns for war funds might be unnecessary. The common fund which would be established would make it possible to disburse the money systematically wherever it might be deemed wise or necessary "for the relief and comfort of all the enlisted men or objects incident to the work of relief in any calamity where immediate assistance should be required."

A board of eleven governors were appointed by the Wakefield committee of Public Safety, consisting of Harry I. Thayer, Chairman, Alfred L. Gooch, Secretary, Harris M. Dolbeare, treasurer, Arthur G. Walton, Charles N. Winship, Junius Beebe, Arthur L. Evans, Townsend S. Meriam, Dr. J. William O'Connell, Thomas Hickey, Charles E. Walton.

The town was divided into districts, each with a team or district captains as follows:

District No.

|                       |                        |
|-----------------------|------------------------|
| 1 Dr. T. Fulton Parks | 10 Fred I. Stone       |
| 2 Percival B. Evans   | 11 Seldon W. Tyler     |
| 3 Jesse E. Harrison   | 12 Thomas A. Lane      |
| 4 Adelbert L. Murrant | 13 William T. Curley   |
| 5 George H. Taylor    | 14 Frank M. McIntire   |
| 6 Lauren L. McMaster  | 15 J. Theodore Whitney |
| 7 Edward L. Hill      | 16 William E. Arnold   |
| 8 Joseph Fazio        | 17 Arthur S. Hill      |
| 9 W. Carlton Rich     |                        |

The whole amount received for the War Chest Fund was $ 47,257.86 with disbursements as follows:

$ 20,000.00 to the United War Work.

11,350.00 to the Red Cross.

5,363.00 to the North Middlesex Chapter, American Red Cross.

4,500.00 to the Wakefield Branch American Red Cross.

2,500.00 to the Salvation Army Home Service.

230.00 to the Contingent Fund Y.M.C.A. work at Camp Plunkett.

200.00 to the Lady Associates of Company A.

After paying for the necessary supplies and expenses in connection with the organization there was a balance of $2,067.38, and it was voted that this balance be turned over to the Wakefield Trust Company to hold in trust until the proper organization might be instituted to receive such funds for hospital purposes as provided by the by-laws of the Wakefield Liberty War Fund.

LIBERTY BONDS

The story of Wakefield's part in the World War would not be complete without mention being made of the splendid response of its citizens, old and young, alike, to the Nation's call for funds to carry on the war. In the four Liberty Loan Drives, which was country wide, Wakefield subscribed to two and three quarter million dollars in Liberty Bonds. This spirit of patriotism was not confined to any branch of the populace, but was shared in by its citizens as a whole.

Early in the campaign the Board of Selectmen called the attention of the citizens to the urgency of subscribing for the Liberty Loan Bonds. A Committee was formed consisting of:

Junius Beebe, President of the Wakefield Trust Company.
 Arthur H. Boardman, Wakefield Savings Bank.
 Richard Britton, Treasurer of the Wakefield Saving Bank.
 Frank C. Carter, Wakefield Trust Company.
 Fred M. Cleaveland, Heywood Brothers and Wakefield Company.
 Harris M. Dolbeare, Publisher Wakefield Daily Item.
 Thomas E. Dwyer, Lead Lined Pipe Company.
 Arthur L. Evans, Evans Sons Company.
 Rev. John F. Meheran, Assistant Rector St. Joseph's Church.
 John J. Round, Chairman Board of Selectmen.
 George H. Taylor, Board of Selectmen.
 Charles E. Walton, Tax Collector.
 George E. Walker, Town Treasurer.
 Charles N. Winship, Winship Boit and Company.

The campaign was carried on in a systematic manner. Crews were formed, Captains appointed for each group, and the town was divided into districts, each group having a definite section to cover.

A thorough canvas was made, and the result was most gratifying. The Churches, Schools, Clubs, and Organizations, co-operated whole heartedly in the movement.

Mrs. Arthur G. Walton assisted by Mrs. Carrie C. Fuller and Mrs. Mabel M. Sweetser perfected the womens organizations, which at one period had 24 Captains, with their many assistants, who labored persistently among club and fraternal organizations in a very systematic way, and much of this labor was performed during the period when the scourge of influenza was at its height.

The women of Wakefield were responsible to a very high degree for the wonderful enthusiasm displayed in every call for funds, their total representing one half of the 10,849 known subscribers, and by the diligence of their organizations they were credited one half of the total subscription to the Bond issues. The record made by them ranks favorably with any community in the Metropolitan District.

The spirit of patriotism was highly aroused in the school children and the pupils of the High School voted unanimously to buy a $ 50.00 bond from a fund which they accumulated from the proceeds of prize drills.

Wakefield Boy Scouts were responsible for the purchase of $8,300 denoting how thorough and efficient the sub-committees functioned in the effort to comply with the slogan of President Wilson "Give until it hurts".

Each Bond Issue was over subscribed. The total oversubscription amounting to three quarter of a million dollars. The actual figures of the four Liberty Loan Drives are as follows:

|          | Quota               | Value sold          | No. Sub-scribers | Oversubscribed |
|----------|---------------------|---------------------|----------------------|--------------------|
| 1st Loan | $ 260,000          | $ 455,000          | 2,700                | $ 195,000         |
| 2nd Loan | 505,000             | 908,900             | 1,500                | 403,900            |
| 3rd Loan | 401,700             | 492,850             | 2,981                | 91,150             |
| 4th Loan | 719,000             | 871,600             | 3,793                | 152,600            |
|          | $ 1,885,700 | $ 2,728,350 | 10,974        | $ 842,650  |

The following table shows the results of the experiments conducted on the 15th of May 1900. The experiments were conducted in the laboratory of the University of Cambridge, and the results are given in the following table.

ACTIVITIES OF THE VARIOUS WAR RELIEF COMMITTEES

The Kosmos Club took its place as one of the very earliest organizations to have a deeply enthusiastic and active part in the war activities. On the first Friday in November 1914, it was voted that a committee be appointed to undertake some form of war relief work. The President Mrs. Edith Montague, appointed as chairman of the committee, Mrs. Etta Fish Tingley. In the course of the following week, Mrs. Tingley called together representatives of all the women's organizations in town, - social, fraternal and philanthropic, as well as the different societies in the churches. These women to the number of about twenty-five met in a classroom of the Congregational Church to discuss plans for relief work. As the result of this meeting, over which Mrs. Tingley presided, definite work was soon begun in the Congregational Chapel, with one hundred women present at the first session.

The money for the purchase of supplies was donated from time to time by private individuals and by the various organizations and Clubs,

The first work of the Society was in the making of garments for Belgian refugees, who were the earliest to require immediate assistance, because of the German invasion and atrocities. Simultaneously with these efforts to help refugees in Belgium went the work for local relief, as a serious strike in Wakefield had brought many families to real want. This splendid work on the part of the women stopped in May, 1915 for the Summer, but was resumed in October of the same year when the Kosmo Club began its meetings for the new season.

In January, 1916, the making of surgical dressings was added to the sewing. Workers were taught by nurses from the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital and many who found the sewing difficult were glad to have a chance to help with the surgical dressings. The group assisting the chairman, Mrs. Tingley, became known as the Surgical Dressings Committee, and was affiliated with the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital as a unit. All-day meetings were held once a week for sewing and for the production of surgical dressings, the place of meeting being either in the Congregational Chapel or downstairs in one of the classrooms. Mrs. Tingley was untiring in her efforts, not only to secure supplies at the best prices, but to add new workers and to enlarge the scope of the work. She imparted to others her own enthusiasm and kept the meetings largely attended month after month. Various efforts were made to earn money for the needs of the committee, and the different methods for raising money were heartily endorsed by the public. Some of those who especially assisted Mrs. Tingley were Mrs. Edith M. Montague, Mrs. Carrie W. Wiley, Miss Ida Skinner, and Mrs. Grace S. Thwaites. The committee continued its existence as a separate organization until just before the United States entered the war.

On the 15th of March, 1917, the Wakefield branch of the Special Aid Society for American Preparedness was formed, and the Surgical Dressing Committee became a department of the new Society and was to a considerable degree financed by it, while retaining its status as a unit of the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital.

On March 27, 1918, the Wakefield Branch of the North Middlesex Chapter of the American Red Cross was formed, and the production of surgical dressings continued as a department of the Red Cross. A meeting of the various organizations engaged in War Relief Work was held in the Armory, including members of the Public Safety Committee, the Special Aid Society, Chairman of the North Middlesex Chapter attended and gave permission to those present to form a branch. The election resulted in the following officers and Board Members: Chairman, Harry I. Thayer, Vice Chairman, Charles N. Winship, Secretary, Mrs. Eva G. Ripley, Assistant Secretary, Miss Mary Lions, Treasurer, Harris M. Dolbeare, Assistant Treasurer, Mrs. Jennie P. Locke and members Charles E. Walton and Rev. Florence J. Halloran, Townsend Meriam, Mrs. Ida Farr Miller, Mrs. Etta Fish Tingley, Miss Margaret English, Miss Sadie Sliney. Mr. Thayer added Frank H. Hackett, Mrs. Mary K. Hall, Mrs. Edith M. Montague to the Board. On August 25, 1918, Mrs. Mildred Pierce, active chairman of the Junior Red Cross in Wakefield, was made a board member, and at the annual election on March 26, 1919, Mrs. Kathryn Connelly and Rev. Warren S. Perkins were elected board members also.

In the week following the organization of the branch, the Wakefield mansion was fitted up for the war relief work, permission to use it having been secured from the Selectmen. On the 5th of May work was begun in the different rooms of the mansion, continued for many months after the war had actually ended. At the annual meeting on the 26th of March 1919, reports were made by officers and committees, from which the following figures were taken: Thirty one thousand five hundred and eighty two articles were made, including compresses, cotton pads, packet bags, bed socks, and various other articles of use in Hospitals. Five hundred women enrolled for knitting, and five thousand one hundred and fifty seven knitted articles were completed, Mrs. Edith M. Montague being faithful and enthusiastic chairman of this department. Five thousand six hundred and seventy one articles were made for soldiers, sailors and refugees in the Department of sewing in charge of the efficient chairman of this committee, Mrs. Mary K. Hall. These articles included hospital shirts, convalescent robes, pajama suits, property bags, Italian kit bags, dresses, suits, underwear, aprons, clothing for boys and girls, and infants' layettes.

In the work done in home service and civilian relief, Frank H. Hackett chairman, seventy investigations were made for other Red Cross branches and chapters, and for the Army, Navy and War Risk Bureau; assistance and allotments were given in 132 cases; there were nine disbursements of aid; there was also help given in preparing papers for compensation, in securing employment, in visits to sick soldiers, and in sending letters in regard to soldiers' bonuses.

The total receipts according to the figures of Mrs. Jennie P. Locke, assistant treasurer, were $ 10,906.25, the disbursements ammounting to $ 6,897.55, leaving a balance in the treasury, March 26, 1919, of $ 4,008.70. Interesting statistics of attendance, etc., were furnished by Miss Mary Lyons, assistant secretary, who reported that out of 173 working days there was an attendance on May 6, 1918, of 260, the largest monthly attendance being 2539 during May, the smallest attendance being in December, when the number present was 344. The total registered attendance for the eleven months was 9568. The number of " Work room pass Cards " was 848. The statement was made by the secretary that 1428 enrollement cards were signed.

Among the special activities noted were two nursing surveys, a foreign communication service, a drive for used clothing in which 1225 pounds of clothing were collected; a second drive for used clothing in which 725 pounds were secured; the matter of seeing that the oath was administered to the workers; the assistance of three units, consisting of the Montrese Unit, Mrs. Robert Reid chairman, the Greenwood Unit, Mrs. Elmira Bears, chairman, the Patriotic Knitting Club, Miss Lucia Beebe, president, and the Motor Corps, Mrs. Sally Cowdrey, chairman, was gratefully received.

In other special branches of the work there should be included the preparation of Christmas parcels, Mrs. Ida Farr Miller, chairman, 323 being packed and shipped by this committee. The production of the Junior Red Cross, Mrs. Mildred F. Pierce, chairman, amounted to 47,291 different articles, including comfort pillows, property bags, crutch pads, pin balls, handkerchiefs, sling bandages, cot and crib quilts, bath towels, operating cloths, infants' jackets and many other articles. The receipts were $ 1,668.12, expenditures, $ 1,144.67, leaving a balance in the treasury, March 26, 1919, of $ 523.45.

THE RED CROSS AND SPECIAL AID SOCIETY

No work of a patriotic nature throughout the war was more splendidly executed, and effectively carried out, than that done by the Special Aid Society and the Red Cross organization, with which it was afterward merged.

On the 15th of March 1917, in response to an appeal issued at the State House, from the Department of Home Relief for the organization of a branch of the Special Aid Society for American preparedness, Mrs. Ida Farr Miller called a meeting at her home of all women interested in the plan. The following representatives of town and church organizations and societies responded to the appeal:

After stating the purpose of the society, namely, "to encourage and promote patriotic sentiment and service, and to aid in the establishment of national defense", Mrs. Miller outlined the various lines of work that might be done in Wakefield. It was voted unanimously to organize a local branch, and on motion of Mrs. Whitten, Mrs. Fuller was elected permanent Chairman, Mrs. Ripley was elected vice-chairman, Mrs. Locke, treasurer, and Miss Taylor, secretary. The chair appointed the following as chairman of various committees: Membership committee, Mrs. Rose N. Whitten and Mrs. Albert R. Perkins; Food production supply and conservation, Mrs. S. H. Bouve, Mrs. Roland B. French; Surgical dressings, Mrs. Charles E. Tingley; First aid, Mrs. Fannie E. Roach; Garments, Mrs. Mary K. Hall; Wireless and telegraphy, Mrs. Denis Lyons, and Mrs. Edeard J. Connelly; Stenography service, Mrs. Eva G. Ripley; Boy scouts, Mrs. Andrew Fuller; Campfire girls, Mrs. John Garniss; Motor Service, Mrs. Bartlett Walton; Publicity, Mrs. Eva G. Ripley. Mrs. Carrie W. Wiley served temporarily as Chairman of the Knitting department, Mrs. Charles E. Montague, becoming Chairman of the committee, June 28, 1917. An office in the Miller Piano factory was offered generously to the society, and weekly meetings were held there on Thursday mornings until June 21, when for convenience, the meetings were transferred to the Y.M.C.A. hall. On August 6, the board voted that the meetings be held on the second and fourth Thursday of the month.

On the evening of March 28, a preparedness meeting was held in the Town Hall, when Mrs. J.J. Storrow, State Treasurer, Charles L. Burrill, members of the Public Safety Committee and Town officials were speakers.

Still further interest was stimulated in the work of the Special Aid Society by a lecture, June 5, by Miss Esta Mae Barrfield, and in November, Miss Mabel Blake, Executive Secretary of the Women's Patriotic League of Massachusetts spoke to the Board on the constructive work being done by the committee of Girls' Activities of the Women's Council for National Defense.

Shortly after organization of the Branch, units for making hospital garments were formed in Greenwood under the supervision of Mrs. Bears, by the Rebekah Lodge, Mrs. Edward H. Pendergrace, Chairman, and by the ladies of the Montrose Chapel, Mrs. John Reid, Chairman. There was also a unit specializing in bed socks and mittens, made from webbing, the meeting of this unit being held at the home of Mrs. Harold C. Ormsby, Eustis Avenue.

During the summer of 1917, there was a further expansion of the work and opportunities for service of the society, and it seemed advisable to reorganize the Board. Additional Committees were appointed, Mrs. French becoming Chairman of the Social Welfare committee; Mrs. W. P. Shepard, Chairman of the Ways and Means committee; Mrs. Raymond H. Pierce, Chairman of the Junior League; Mrs. Garniss, Chairman of Junior work; Mrs. Connelly "In the service" correspondent; Mrs. Marie E. Dellinger was appointed Chairman of the Home Economics Committee of the Middlesex County Farm Bureau, and she also worked co-operatively with Mrs. Bouve of the Food Supply Committee.

The women in the various committees of the society labored unceasingly, and gave unselfishly of their time and strength to make the organization prepared to do its full patriotic and civic duty. All kinds of calls were responded to from the Liberty Loan Committee, from stricken Halifax, or any other of the many needs that were constantly arising.

The membership of the Wakefield branch of the Special Aid Society was 194. Under the splendid and indefatigable efforts of Mrs. Tingley, Chairman of the Surgical Dressing Department, 113,224 of these dressings were made; 1500 garments were made under the special direction of the efficient chairman of the committee, Mrs. Mary K. Hall; 2042 knitted articles were completed by Mrs. Edith M. Montague's faithful and enthusiastic committee. Ninety one women were enrolled in the First Aid Classes of which Mrs. Roach was Chairman, and in the Junior League, with its 100 members, fine work was done by the girls, Mrs. Mildred F. Pierce, being the Chairman; $5,033.77 was received by the treasurer, contribution coming from many different sources, including $5.00 from the children of the Franklin School, which was presented in April 1917, and $100 from the club of Girls in the telephone office, who gave a dance in order to raise funds, also gifts from many different clubs and organizations of the town, as well as from generous public-spirited citizens.

THE WORK OF THE PATRIOTIC KNITTING CLUB

There was scarcely a club of any nature in Wakefield that did not have a part in the great united work for the men in service. Among the social organizations the Patriotic Knitting Club accomplished much. It was formed in January, 1918, for the purpose of outfitting the boys in the service, both in this country and overseas, particularly, those who had no one at home to knit for them. During that time the fourteen members of the club raised $ 1,500.00 practically all of which was expended for wool. About one thousand pairs of socks, seven hundred-fifty sweaters, and many helmets, wristers, and scarfs were made.

In the summer the club became a unit of the Red Cross, and in addition to its work took five per cent of the monthly knitting quota of the town. They took charge of the clothing drive for the Belgian refugees in which Wakefield had the highest standing of any branch in the North Middlesex Chapter, in spite of the influenza epidemic which raged at that time. Later they knit fifty caps for the French layettes. At one time they outfitted the Wakefield firemen who went into service with mittens and they supplied the greater part of the draftees of the town with sweaters.

The very able and faithful president of the club was Miss Lucia Beebe; Mrs. W. Carlton Rich was the treasury, and Mrs. W. Raymond Emerson, the secretary. The other members were as follows:

SCHOOL GARDENS AND FOOD CAMPAIGN

---

Shortly after this country's entrance into the war it became apparent that a Nation-Wide Movement would be necessary to encourage production, and to control the distribution and consumption of foodstuffs. Our country was soon to experience, such as never before in its history, the most closely directed supervision of these three essential branches of basic industry, and no part of the country experienced more rigid restrictions than New England. Owing to the immense quantities of foodstuffs shipped across to feed our own soldiers, and the vast amounts purchased by the Allies, a food shortage in this country naturally resulted. This situation required a system of the strictest food conservation, and the maximum production of farm and garden products, foodstuffs being the prime requisite of human life. It was evident early in the war that not only was the farmer, and the market gardener to play a big part in the winning of the war, but the home gardener was to become a factor not to be overlooked. It was realized that every person who raised only a small amount of garden truck was of great importance in the aggregate.

Early in the Spring of 1917, local committees were formed in Wakefield and a comprehensive campaign was begun to enlist the support of its citizens in the raising of garden products. Foremost among the organizations which lent valuable aid to the Garden and Food Campaign were: The Middlesex Farm Bureau Committee, Committee of Food Production and Conservation and the Central School Garden Committee. The Achievement Club, Wakefield Improvement Association, Wakefield Business Men's Association, Department of Retail Merchants, The Board of Health, Wakefield Grange, the Various Women's Clubs and several Committees more or less tied in with those listed above.

In the second year of our entry into the war there was a large increase in the community gardens, about thirty acres being divided up into plots, and sub-divided into fifteen different tracts, the response from owners of land being very generous.

In 1918 about 550 grade school children planned for gardens, and the number of high school gardens was doubled over the previous year. The work on canning assumed an important place in the food campaign. A community canning kitchen was opened at the Wakefield Estate under expert supervision. A school garden was run in connection with the kitchen, and a good supply of vegetables was thus procured. Poultry and pig raising was also encouraged, and the value of these products together with the canned goods put up was valued at over $ 1,150.

Without proper publicity much of the work would have been greatly hampered. The Daily Item lent valuable assistance to the campaign by printing daily a series of lessons prepared by the National Emergency Food Garden Commission which proved a wonderful incentive in inducing hundreds of thousands of Americans to take up gardening in an effort to cut down the cost of food.

Public spirited citizens of Wakefield helped the cause by donating the use of their land for Community Gardens through the offices of the Food Committee.

The National Food Administration began functioning in the Spring of 1918 and the local Board in Wakefield was organized in April of that year. The administration consisted of the Department of Food Production, and the Department of Food Conservation; and the local Board did its work well. A census of flour on hand in the homes of the town was taken and met with co-operation on the part of the citizens as a whole. The card system of sugar distribution was tried here with good results. It assured each family of an opportunity to secure its allowance. The storekeepers and townspeople as a whole manifested hearty co-operation with the various Boards in their efforts to lighten the stress of wartime regulations.

Y. M. C. A.

The Y.M.C.A. was active in different kinds of war work from the outset. One of the most appreciated forms of service was that done in connection with the Bay State Rifle Range. This Range was taken by the United States government soon after our entrance into the World War as a station for newly enlisted men in the Marine service, also for groups of men from the battleships which put into Charlestown Navy Yard for repairs. These men remained at the Range for rifle practice usually for a period of ten days, the number of men at the Range at any one time varying from 300 to 1800. As their practice took place altogether in the daytime, many of the men were given "shore leave" for the evenings. Some of the marines went to Reading, but the majority came to Wakefield for their free hours. Indeed, so many of them came to the Y.M.C.A. that the rooms there were crowded every night, so that at last the Board of Directors decided to fit up the assembly hall for the exclusive use of the service men. On Saturday evening, July 20, 1918, the hall was opened in this way for the first time, and the men thoroughly enjoyed the privilege of using the piano, the pool table, various games, including checkers and backgammon, as well as opportunities to write at the long table where there was free stationery and a chance to buy souvenir postal cards and stamps at a desk in the room. There was also a large reading table supplied with all the popular magazines and daily papers, as well as a library of about 150 volumes of excellent books. The hall was open every evening from 6.30 to 10 and all day Sunday. These activities were continued until March 31, 1919.

The Wakefield Y.M.C.A. took a spirited part in the nationwide campaign to raise $ 35,000,000 to carry on the Red Triangle War Work of the organization. This began November 11, and continued through November 19, 1917. Wakefield's allotment in this great drive was $ 10,000 and Harry I. Thayer, the executive chairman of the Wakefield committee to raise this amount, with his customary enthusiasm and executive ability, and with the aid of his splendidly efficient committee, carried the campaign through in most effective and triumphant fashion. At the initial meeting of the committee and teams of the Y.M.C.A., $ 212.50 was raised, and there was no slacking of interest as the days went by. The special method used in obtaining subscriptions was to have ten teams each one consisting of ten men, the plan being to have each man solicit at least ten persons. This arrangement was remarkably well systematized, and the results showed its effectiveness. The women's Auxiliary of the Y.M.C.A. helped in their usual spirited way, and their part was an extremely important factor in the success of the whole drive.

The boys exhibited ardent loyalty during the drive, Raymond P. Dellinger being in charge of Wakefield's part of the general campaign to secure subscriptions from one hundred thousand boys.

In Wakefield there were two divisions among the boys, the army section under the direction of John McLaren, and the navy in charge of Cyrus M. Dolbeare as captain. A great many boys of the town signed the following pledge to the National War Work Council of the Y.M.C.A. of the United States:

" I hereby agree to be one of the one hundred thousand boys who will earn and give $ 1,000,000 towards the work among prisoners of war or American soldiers or soldiers of our allies."

As was demonstrated, every time Wakefield was called upon to respond to some fine patriotic appeal, the town during this national campaign over-subscribed the quota by at least twenty five per cent.

BOY SCOUTS

The work done by the Wakefield boys during the months of the war should not be omitted.

The national contest of the Boy Scouts of America was participated in by three troops of Wakefield. Sales of United States Liberty bonds to ten individual purchasers entitled a scout to a medal furnished by the government and to additional bars for similar sales in succeeding loans. As all of these sales came during the last week of the great drive after the solicitation of the general committee had been finished, splendid results were gained, a total of about $ 100,000.00 in bonds being sold by the scouts during the five loans, and about fifteen medals were won, several receiving bars in succeeding loans.

Another form of activity in which the Boy Scouts were helpful was in the distribution of government publications in house to house delivery, the name given to scouts who thus canvassed the town with these pamphlets being " Dispatch Bearers for Uncle Sam ". Several such distributions were made covering the entire town. Each scout was furnished a special identification card in this connection.

On the Red Cross " Drives " scouts acted as messengers for officials and helped in the collection of funds.

The Wakefield Boy Scouts participated also in the national contest for the sale of War Saving Stamps, and merit buttons were won in several instances by securing at least twenty-five individuals to purchase these stamps.

Ernest L. Brown was the scoutmaster in Wakefield, and he was indefatigable and enthusiastic in his interest in this work with the boys.

WAKEFIELD RIFLE RANGE

In 1917 the Navy Department rented from the Bay State Military Association the Rifle Range at Wakefield for the period of the war and it became known as Camp Plunkett. It was used extensively for instruction of men from the ships at the Navy Yard, Boston, Massachusetts, and men of the Navy and Marine Corps at the training stations and instruction camps near Boston, Newport, Rhode Island, and Portsmouth, New Hampshire. In addition to these contingents men were brought from training camps in other parts of the country.

At one time a company of 125 men were transferred from the Great Lakes Training Station, Great Lakes, Illinois, for rifle practice and Military instruction.

The Wakefield Range became one of the principal Naval Ranges in the country. Naval recruits after completing a course at the Wakefield Range were sent to stations at Cape May, Virginia, Virginia Beach, Virginia, Charleston, South Carolina, and at other places where the Navy had established Naval Stations.

In addition to the Navy's activities, Members of Rifle Associations were allowed to practice at the Range, Saturday afternoons being set apart for their use. Expert officers were assigned to give them individual instructions, and they were furnished a rifle and all of the necessary shooting paraphernalia, except ammunition, without charge. The State took over the Range in 1926 and it has since become known as Camp Curtis Guild.

WAKEFIELD HIGH SCHOOL

Our town is justly proud of the spirit shown by the six boys of the High School, who on the threshold of manhood, offered their services to the cause of patriotism. The group included:

|                            |                                  |
|----------------------------|----------------------------------|
| James G. Brown, W.H.S. '17 | John Mortimer Butler, W.H.S. '18 |
| Roy Luken, W.H.S. '17      | Dudley Sargent, W.H.S. '17       |
| Isa Jacobs, W.H.S. '18     | Robert Gibbs, W.H.S. '18         |

When it is recalled that some of these boys returned home at the end of the war, to graduate from Wakefield High School, the spirit which animated them may be more fully appreciated. Young Brown was promoted to 2nd Lieutenant. He was twice wounded at Verdun, France. Mortimer Butler received a Citation from General Edwards and General Pershing. He, also, was twice wounded. Robert Gibbs was lost at sea when the United States Tug Cherokee foundered off the American coast in February 1918. This splendid youth scarcely eighteen years old, upheld the traditions of the Navy. As wireless operator he continued to send out calls for help until his message was picked up by the rescue ship. Only ten of the crew were rescued, young Gibbs, however, went down with his ship.

A beautiful silk flag with six stars was presented to the School by a member of the faculty in commemoration of these splendid youths who so willingly gave their services to the cause of humanity.

BEEBE TOWN LIBRARY

During the war considerable activity was shown by the various libraries, and the Beebe Town Library took its place in a very creditable manner.

In May, 1917, the Secretary of War requested the American Library Association to raise a million dollars to be used for the erection of buildings and the purchase of books for libraries in the cantonments and concentration camps of the country. The amount to be raised in each town and city was based on five per cent in money of the population. Wakefield's share was $ 650.00 In accordance with this request the Board of Trustees and the library site committee met in the reading room on the evening of September 20, and appointed a committee Dr. T. Fulton Parks, Chairman, and Miss Gertrude Lee, Treasurer, to carry on the campaign. So successful was this campaign that as usual Wakefield went " Over the Top " and Miss Lee was able to send to Washington $ 760.33. In addition to the money raised 380 books and many magazines were contributed for the camp libraries 135 of these books were sent to Camp Plunkett, United States Naval Rifle Range, Wakefield, the remainder being sent to Camp Devens, Ayer, Massachusetts.

During the year 1918, 741 books were contributed for distribution, the remainder to Widener Library, Cambridge, the overseas dispatch office. All of these books were labeled and book cards were inserted ready for circulation before they were sent from the Town Library.

The English department of the High School raised $ 40.00 for relief work, $ 25.00 of which was spent for books for camp libraries and for a daily paper at Camp Plunkett. The library maintained a food bulletin board in the reading room, displayed war posters of all kinds during the drives, distributed garden, food and war bulletins, insert War Savings, Liberty Loan and War Fund campaign slips in circulating books, and started a card file of war time recipes, and even in 1919, books and magazines were contributed by citizens and forwarded to the Boston Public Library for distribution to sailors and hospitals.

From the very beginning of the war the librarian Miss Lee, showed the keenest interest in all kinds of war work, and enthusiastically collaborated with other organizations of the town in every way conceivable.

THE HISTORY OF THE CITY OF BOSTON

The history of the city of Boston is a subject of great interest and importance. It is a city of many centuries, and its history is a record of the growth and development of one of the most important cities in the world. The city has been the seat of many great events, and its history is a record of the progress of the human race. The city has been the home of many great men, and its history is a record of the achievements of the human mind. ## THE FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH

---

The First Baptist Church, one of the oldest churches in the town of Wakefield, Massachusetts, rallied to the support of our Government at the outbreak of the War.

Rev. Frederic S. Boody, Pastor of the Church, immediately organized and supervised the activities of the parishioners, who gave generously of their time and effort to the support of the Liberty Loan Drives, War Chest Fund, Red Cross work and the various other war activities of the town.

The women devoted many all-day sessions to the making of surgical dressings and hospital garments, at the local Y.M.C.A. and at the Old Mansion of the late Cyrus Wakefield, which was then located on the site where the High School now stands.

A flag-raising exercises was held in honor of those who entered the service of the United States Army, Navy and Marine Corps, and the parishioners who gathered were justly proud of the "Service Flag" bearing sixty-three stars, five of which were gold stars, in honor of our brave men who made the supreme sacrifice.

The following is a list of the young men who died while in the service for their Country:

Corrado Assenza, Private
Paul Cartwright, Lieutenant
David Guillow, Sergeant
Sebastiano Lupo, Private
* Harry E. Nelson, Corporal

* Corporal Harry E. Nelson, Company A, 6th Regiment Infantry, Massachusetts National Guard, was the first soldier from the town to be killed in action in France. He was awarded the French Croix de Guerre, and a citation for gallantry in action at Apremont, France, April 13, 1918.

Cited for gallantry in action:

Herbert E. Partridge, Sergeant
102nd Machine Gun Battalion,
26th Division, cited for meritorious service in the second battle of the Marne, July, 1918.

Below is a roster of the young men who wore the Allied wound chevron:

Ernest Fairbanks, Private 1st Class
Frank Gammons, Private
Charles Jeffrey, Private 1st Class
Gaetano Lisi, Lieutenant
Felice Pasqualino, Sergeant.

Commissioned Officers:

Carroll T. Bonney, Lieut. Comm. U. S. N.
Kenneth Cartwright, Lieutenant
Paul Cartwright, Lieutenant
Paul K. Guillow, Ensign U. S. N.
Carl Holmberg, Lieutenant
Robert E. Jackson, Lieutenant
Rev. Gaetano Lisi, Lieutenant
Winfield L. McNeill, Lieutenant
Dr. Stanley P. Oliver, Lieutenant
Russell B. Perkins, Ensign U. S. N.
Walter Phelps, Lieutenant
Rev. Albert Thomas, Captain

Two women acted as Nurses during the war:

Miss Helen M. Cook
Miss Nellie B. Russell, A. E. F.

Religious services, recreational programs, entertainments etc., were conducted for the soldiers and sailors stationed at the local Rifle Range, and they were very successful and gratifying. The community spirit and enthusiasm which prevailed in those exciting days will long be remembered.

THE FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH
AND SUNDAY SCHOOL IN THE WORLD WAR.

---

Immediately upon the entrance of the United States into the World War on April 6, 1917, young men of the Church, the Parish, and the Sunday School began to enlist in the service. By the 8th of July, thirty-six present or former members of the Sunday School were enrolled under colors. The Sunday School presented to each young man a New Testament. By the middle of December, this number had been increased to sixty-two and the first service flag presented by Mr. and Mrs. Samuel K. Hamilton carried sixty-two stars. At the time of the Armistice, November 11, 1918, the list numbered 110 men. These names were printed in the church calendar of November 10, 1918 and were later inscribed on an illuminated roster which now hangs on the east wall of the church vestry.

All branches of the Army and Navy service were represented in this list, together with the Red Cross and the Y.M.C.A. Four made the supreme sacrifice:

WOMEN'S WORK

From the entrance of the United States into the World War the women of the church engaged in various community activities which loyal patriotism prompted. Meetings for the production of garments for local needs, and for Belgian and Polish refugees, had been held in the vestry of the Congregational Church from the Autumn of 1914. From April, 1917, hospital garment making and the preparation of surgical dressings for our men at arms were carried out continuously and for months in the vestry. With the organization of a branch of the Special Aid Society the women of the Congregational Church and Parish worked with others at the Y.M.C.A. and later, at the Wakefield mansion, which became the headquarters of the Wakefield Branch of the American Red Cross, following its organization in March, 1918. Knitting was done in the homes.

Many women of the church held responsible executive positions in the various organizations which worked for men in the service, at home or abroad. Because work of this sort was carried on as community work, no figures of garments made and knit, or surgical dressings prepared, can be set down, but that there was long sustained and faithful work on the part of many women of this church, Red Cross records amply prove.

In the Four Liberty Loans, in the Red Cross Drives, in the Wakefield War Chest, and in various special and local efforts for money raising within the church and parish, the men at home and the women did their honorable part.

The late Mrs. Arthur G. Walton was chairman of the Women's committee for the Third Liberty Loan, and spoke several times at public meetings during the campaign conducted to raise it.

Rev. Austin Rice, D.D., by his sermons, his welcome to enlisted men, on behalf of the church, and his sympathy for families bereaved of their brave sons, was inspiring in his endeavors to promote efforts of the men and women of the church and the parish for its 110 young men who were given everything "for God and country."

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH

The Methodist Episcopal Church of Wakefield, Massachusetts, through the members of its congregation, displayed great efforts in its enthusiasm to assist in all patriotic movements for the prosecution of the war, and occupies a favorable position in comparison with other activities of the town, in every movement to prosecute the war to a successful end.

Members of the Methodist Episcopal Church who served in the United States Military Forces during the war are as follows.

Ervin E. Laughton, Supply Sergeant
 Thomas L. Thistle, Sergeant
 Cecil L. Gratton, Private 1st Class
 Joseph W. Phinney, Sergeant
 Harry R. McIntosh, Sergeant
 Charles R. Oxley, Gunner
 Milton B. Ryder, Corporal
 Charles R. Stephens, Private
 Frank O. Oliver, Lieutenant
 Charles L. Whidden, Cook 1st Class

EMMANUEL EPISCOPAL CHURCH

The Reverend James J. Cogan, Pastor of the Church, called his parishioners together in support of the Government during the World War.

Various committees were organized in support of the Liberty Loan Drives, War Chest Fund, Red Cross work, and various other war activities of the town.

Much spiritual, and social work was carried on among the men in the Service who were stationed at the Rifle Range, for training during the war.

Fifty-five young men entered the service of the Army and Navy.

DIED WHILE IN THE SERVICE:

Private Herbert E. Biggs      Private Bert Johnson
 Lieut. Willard J. Freeman      Private Alvin Gordon
 Lieut. William N. Hewitt

ST. JOSEPH'S PARISH

In writing the annals of the work done during the war by the various churches of the town, an honorable place must be given to St. Joseph's Parish, and particularly to the earnest and capable efforts of Rev. Florence J. Halloran, Pastor and his assistants Rev. John F. Meheran and Rev. William H. Flynn, who, as soon as war was declared, organized the activities of the parish in support of the government, and in every way showed themselves most loyal and enthusiastic in supporting every form of work planned and carried out by the town during the period of the war. The Pastor served as volunteer chaplain to 1200 Catholic troops while they were in camp in Lynnfield, and also aided in the religious work in other cantonments. With real eloquence and fervor he gave the farewell address to the members of old Company A in the Armory on the eve of their departure for the front, and he also gave the inspiring address of welcome to the men on their return.

The number of enlistments in the active service of the Army and Navy was a matter of much justifiable pride to all the parishioners. On one of the Sundays in October, 1917, there was an impressive flag-raising in the presence of 1500 people, and even at that early date the parish could already boast of a service flag of 145 stars. By the end of the war there was an honorable record of 350 young men in the Army and Navy. Twelve gold stars are on this flag, ten men being killed while fighting bravely in action in France, one killed by accident in airplane duty, two dying in France of pneumonia, and one losing his life from pneumonia in this country.

Following is the list of these men who died during the war:

The parish was well represented in the local company of the State Guard which was organized by Lieutenant Colonel McMahon, who later became Major of one of the Battalions of the 12th Regiment, State Guard, Captain John Downing succeeding to the command of the local company. Dr. J. William O'Connell rendered valuable service as adjutant to Major McMahon during the war.

Various committees of the parish were organized to direct the work of food conservation among the parishioners, to co-operate in the drives for Liberty Bonds, and to work in conjunction with the War Chest Committee of the town.

The parish claimed with particular pride one of its favorite sons, Rev. Edmund C. Sliney, who acted as chaplain of the 38th United States Regiment.

The work of the women of St. Joseph's parish during the war was splendidly faithful and executive. Almost immediately after war was declared the Pastor, Rev. Father Florence J. Halloran, called a meeting of the women of the parish to discuss measures that might be undertaken to help the boys in service and to assist the general war activities in any way possible. There was a gratifying representation of women in answer to the call of the Pastor, and the St. Joseph's War Relief organization was formed, the following officers being chosen: Miss Margaret English, president; Rev. Florence J. Halloran, treasurer; Miss Sadie E. Sliney, Secretary.

The first meeting of the society was held on the first Monday in May 1917, and the meetings were held weekly in St. Joseph hall until May 1918, when the women of the parish co-operated with the Red Cross Society at their headquarters on Main Street. The membership numbered about 250 women. Most of the work was done in the homes, weekly returns being made. Among the most active members of St. Joseph's War Relief Society were two trained Red Cross Workers. Miss Margaret English, a Red Cross Nurse of some years' standing and Miss Mary Lyons, who received her certificate from the College of Notre Dame of Maryland in May, 1917, while a student at that institution. There were other Red Cross nurses also. Miss Margaret Dinan and Miss Elizabeth Murphy, and four Yeomen (F), Miss Ethel Hickey, Miss Catherine Corcoran, Miss Genevieve Lane, and Miss Agnes O'Connell. Miss Margaret Dinan served not only as a nurse in the camps in Europe, but also in Siberia. The women worked incessantly and ardently, knitting many sweaters, stockings, wristers, scarves, helmets, caps, bed-socks and face cloths, and also making hundreds of hospital shirts, bandages of all size and kinds, compresses of various descriptions, wicks, and many other articles. They labored untiringly toward equipping Carney Hospital with necessities that would be required for the sick and wounded men, Carney Hospital being taken early in the war by the government as a Naval Hospital.

Generous donations were made to many relief committees such as those that were organized to help people of Poland, Lithuania, Italy, Belgium and Armenia, and help was given also to the sufferer's in Halifax, as well as to the Italian Red Cross Society., The Chaplains' Aid, etc. One of the ways in which funds were raised to help the constant demands during the war was a large and successful lawn party. Among the many contributions made was the gift of two chaplain's Mass kits, costing $ 100 each. Many of the women were prominent in making a success of the various drives such as the War Chest, War Saving Stamps and Liberty Bond Campaigns.

Great interest was taken also in assisting the Lady Associates in their untiring efforts to provide for the needs and comforts of the Wakefield boys who left with Company A. On the Civilian Relief Committee there were five members of St. Joseph's parish, these being Miss Margaret English, Mrs. Edward J. Connelly, Miss Mary Lyons, Mrs. James Cotter, and Miss Sadie E. Sliney. When the Red Cross branch was organized in the Spring of 1918, the St. Joseph's War Relief organization voted unanimously to join this branch. Many other parishioners also joined in the work at this time, and efficient help was given constantly to the various departments of the Red Cross in Wakefield. St. Joseph's Parish was represented by five members on the executive board of the Red Cross.

The reception and banquet given by St. Joseph's parish to those of its members who had served in the Great War occurred on the evening of February 10, 1920. It was an occasion long to be remembered. There were Veterans of three wars present, all members of St. Joseph's parish and the program was a particularly interesting one.

At the banquet Dr. J. William O'Connell was toastmaster, and presided with much dignity and effectiveness. Among the speakers were Charles H. Winship, who extended the greetings of the parish; chairman John J. Round, who spoke for the Town congratulating the members of the St. Joseph's Parish upon the splendid reception. "Sandy" Chapman, a Knight of Columbus secretary in France, related some of his experiences, and Colonel Edward J. Gihon and Lieutenant Colonel John H. McMahon also gave brief addressess. Major Connelly was then introduced and was given a most unrestrained demonstration. Among other speakers were Dr. J.A.O'Leary, Rev. Father William H. Flynn, Rev. Father Edmund C. Sliney, Lieutenant Chaplain U.S.A., Rev. Father John E. Meheran and the pastor, Rev. Father Florence J. Halloran, all of whom spoke with much felicity and to the keen pleasure of everyone.

The executive committee who had charge of the arrangements comprised Frank McIntyre, Chairman, James Burke, Michael Roach, J. Lowe McMahon, John Glynn, Roderick McGilvray, William H. Butler, Amos Gates, Patrick J. Lally, Leonard De Marco, Matthew Burns, and D. Thomas Dinan.

GREENWOOD UNION CHURCH

The parishioners of the Greenwood Union Church worked faithfully in support of the Government during the war, making generous contributions to the Liberty Loan Drives, War Chest Fund and various other war activities of the town.

The Ladies Society, conducted many all day sewing sessions in the Chapel in aid of the Red Cross. Many garments were made, as well as bandages, dressings, knitted sweaters, socks, helmets and scarfs.

The young men and women of the parish who enlisted in the various branches of the military service are as follows:

UNIVERSALIST CHURCH

The Rev. Warren S. Perkins, pastor of the Universalist Church, together with the parishioners, played a very important part in the war activities of the town during the period of the World War.

Like other denominations at that time, they were active in the work in connection with the Liberty Loan Drives and War Chest Fund.

The women of the parish formed a sewing circle, working in co-operation with the Red Cross in supplying knitted sweaters, stockings, helmets, bandages, etc., for the comfort of the men in the service.

Many of our young men entered different branches of the United States Military Service. Three making the supreme sacrifice, namely:

- * Corporal John C. Brockbank, Co., A, 104th Inf.
- * Lieut. Clark R. Lincoln, Co., A, 108nd M.G. Batt.
- ** Private Albert R. Townley, 7th Co., 152 Depot Brigade

The following men were wounded in action, on the battlefields in France:

Capt. Frederick A. Simonds, M.D. Medical Corps.
 Lieut. Gray B. Brockbank, Co., A, 104th Inf.
 Private Norman Singer, Co., A, 104th Inf.

Miss Elsie A. Anderson, a Red Cross Nurse, served at home and overseas.

Commissioned Officers:

The Rev. Warren S. Perkins, the Pastor, was chosen as the principal speaker for the first Welcome Home Celebration which was held in the Town Hall, February 26, 1919.

* Killed in action, France. ** Died of Pneumonia.

A F T E R M A T H

Can it be they are forgotten
 Whom we yesterday thrilled to see?
 Can it be that we pass them by
 They who fought to keep us free?

Can it be that the waving of flags
 The blare of trumpets and drums
 Mean more than the dripping of blood
 Than the slaughter of smoking guns?

O "ye of little faith"!
 Of memory short and weak—
 Beware lest the day shall come
 When these souls shall rise and speak!

Lest you hear on that Last Day
 When justice shall be fulfilled
 "What have you done, you who lived,
 With the laurels of us, who were killed?"

ROBERT FITZ BAKER

ROBERT FITZ BAKER, Corporal (108,042), came to Wakefield, Massachusetts as a boy, to live with David Merrill, Lowell Street. On the death of Mr. Merrill, he made his home with Mr. John G. Reid, through his friendship with the boys of the family. Enlisted with the United States Marine Corps, May 21, 1917, being assigned to the 81st Company, 6th Machine Gun Battalion, 2nd Division; received training at Fort Royal, South Carolina, and at Quantico, Virginia; sailed for foreign service, December 31, 1917; and was actively engaged in the Aisne Defensive, Chateau Thierry, Aisne-Marne Offensive, Meuse-Argonne (Champagne) and Toul sectors. He was in the 81st Company, 6th Machine Gun Battalion, 2nd Division, as Corporal, from October 18, 1918, to his death, which occurred November 2, 1918. Corporal Baker was instantly killed in action by shell fire, two weeks after his promotion to Corporal, while advancing to Fosse, France. This maneuver was made during the last few days of fighting, previous to the signing of the Armistice. The following letter received from the Captain of his Company is of interest:

"Corporal Baker was instantly killed on the morning of November 2, by shell fire. He had been promoted to Corporal only a short time before, and his enthusiasm in the tasks set before him and his manner of doing his duty without regard to his own safety, had won the admiration of his comrades, and his death was mourned by all who knew him. Corporal Baker was buried one thousand meters north of the town of Sommedieue, by the Chaplain, and was given as honorable a burial as is permissible on the field of battle. He met his death like a true marine, making the supreme sacrifice in the most glorious cause in the history of the world."

With deepest sympathy,
Respectfully yours,

J. S. Hart. (Capt.)

Until 1921, Corporal Baker's body was buried in a small village at the edge of the Argonne Forest, and later brought to New York. Funeral services were held August 11, 1921, from the home of his half-brother, Charles Moore, in North Troy, New York.

HERBERT EDGAR BIGGS

HERBERT EDGAR BIGGS, Private, son of Edward Edgar and Jennie (Murdock) Biggs, was born in Wakefield, Massachusetts, September 1, 1889. At the age of three, he made his home with an aunt, Miss Esther F. Biggs, of whom he was very fond. He was educated in the Grade Schools, and also attended Wakefield High School; was mechanically inclined and became head Motor Tester for the Pierce-Arrow Motor Company, Boston, Massachusetts. Enlisted in the United States Army at Fort Slocum, New York, December 15, 1917; assigned to the 2nd Training Brigade at Kelley Field, San Antonio, Texas; was transferred, January 9, 1918, to the 35th Squadron, 3rd Provisional Regiment, Aviation Section, Signal Corps, Camp McArthur, Waco, Texas. His service was brief, however, for on January 13, 1918, he died of lobar pneumonia, in a hospital at Camp McArthur, Texas. Simple funeral services were held from the home of his aunt, Miss Biggs, on Fairmount Avenue, Reverend J. J. Cogan officiating. Presence of relatives, friends and representatives of Civic and Fraternal organizations testified to the esteem in which the young man was held. The body was escorted to Lakeside Cemetery, Wakefield, Massachusetts, by a delegation from Company H, 12th Regiment, Massachusetts National Guard, and there final military honors were accorded.

He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. Biggs, 5 Byron Street; an aunt, Miss Esther F. Biggs, 14 Fairmount Avenue; a sister, Mrs. Mabel Shaw, 5 Byron Street, all of Wakefield, Massachusetts; a sister, Mrs. Edith Gilman of Reading, Massachusetts; and a brother, Charles Biggs, of Salem, Massachusetts.

LEON LOUIS BOUDREAU

LEON LOUIS BOUDREAU, 1st Lieutenant, son of Louis C. and Ada A. Boudreau, was born in South Framingham, Massachusetts, January 12, 1883. When a boy his parents moved to Marlboro, Massachusetts. Was a graduate of Marlboro High School, class of 1906; attended Boston Art School and later graduated from the Massachusetts Vocational School of Boston, class of 1916. Served at the Mexican Border, and was Sergeant of Company B, 5th Regiment of Charlestown, Massachusetts, at the outbreak of the World War. At that time he was a resident of Wakefield, Massachusetts. Called into active service from Plattsburg Training Camp, Plattsburg, New York, as 1st Lieutenant, Infantry Officers Reserve Corps, August 15, 1917, and was assigned to Company I, 303rd Infantry, 76th Division. Sailed for foreign service from Boston, Massachusetts, July 8, 1918; arrived in London, England, July 22, 1918; transferred to the 2nd District Headquarters, 3rd Depot, Division of Sales Commissary, and to Company E, 303rd Infantry, 76th Division. Sailed from Nazaire, France, with the remainder of the regiment, December 22, 1918; landed at Newport News, Virginia, January 3, 1919; assigned to Detached Casual Officers, 151st Depot Brigade, January 11, 1919, and to Headquarters Convalescent Centre, Camp Devens, Ayer, Massachusetts. Lieutenant Boudreau contracted pneumonia in July, 1919, and died from complications, March 12, 1920, at General Hospital No. 41, Staten Island, New York. Funeral services were held on Sunday, March 14, 1920, at the Methodist Episcopal Church, Wakefield, Massachusetts, attended by many friends and delegations from civic and fraternal societies. Reverend B. C. Seaboyer, Pastor, conducted the services and paid fitting tribute to the young man's service to his country, to his character and personality, which made him so well liked and respected. Commander Poland of Post 12, Grand Army of the Republic, placed a small American flag on the casket as a tribute from the older Veterans. Full military honors were accorded, and the firing squad was a detail from Fort Strong, Boston Harbor. The body was placed in the receiving tomb in Lakeside Cemetery, Wakefield, Massachusetts, for interment at a later date.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Harry W. (Boudreau) Beers, Hampton, New Hampshire; four sisters: Mrs. Kenneth Shaw; 655 Main Street, Mrs. Willard Whitney, R.F.D.#1, Mrs. Fred Reid, 212 Salem Street, all of Wakefield, Massachusetts, Mrs. Ralph H. Whitman, 89 Greenwood Street, Marlboro, Massachusetts; two brothers: Ralph L., 1140 Mile Square Drive, Yonkers, New York; James C., 303 Manor Road, Douglas Manor, Long Island, New York.

JOHN CARROLL BROCKBANK

JOHN CARROLL BROCKBANK, Corporal (71,035), son of Harvey G. and Anna Brockbank, was born in Springfield, Massachusetts, April 2, 1894. He attended Wakefield High School, and at the time of his enlistment was an apprentice printer. Like his brother, Gray B. Brockbank, he had prior service in the National Guard. Corporal Brockbank enlisted, May 17, 1912, in Company A, 6th Massachusetts Infantry, National Guard. Reported for duty March 30, 1917, and entered into Federal Service, April 6, 1917, when war was declared; received training at Fort Revere, Hull, Massachusetts; Camp Darling, Framingham, Massachusetts; Camp Devens, Ayer, Massachusetts, and Camp Bartlett, Westfield, Massachusetts. Corporal Brockbank was transferred from Company A, of the 6th Massachusetts Infantry, National Guard, to Company A, of the 104th United States Infantry, 26th Division, August 26, 1917. Sailed from Montreal, Canada, October 6, 1917; arrived at Liverpool, England, and later went to Le Havre, France; stationed in the Neufchateau Training Area; experienced active service at Chemin-des-Dames, (Ile-de-France); Champagne-Marne; Toul-Boucq, (Lorraine); Pas Fini, (Ile-de-France); Rupt, (Lorraine); Troyon, (Lorraine) Defensive sectors; Aisne-Marne; St. Mihiel, and Meuse-Argonne Offensive sectors; was wounded in the back by shrapnel at the Marne Salient; received gunshot wounds in the chest and right arm, in the St. Mihiel Offensive, July 10, 1919. He was Acting Sergeant of the 2nd Platoon when he met his death, October 17, 1918, in the great Meuse-Argonne Offensive. Corporal Brockbank was buried at Romagne Village, in the United States Meuse-Argonne Cemetery, the largest United States Cemetery in France. A memorial service was held in memory of Corporal Brockbank at the Universalist Church, Wakefield, Massachusetts, December 15, 1918. Reverend Warren S. Perkins, D.D. paid tribute to the young man who was third soldier from the Universalist Society to lose his life; Lieutenant Clark R. Lincoln, and Private Albert Ray Townley being the others, Doctor Perkins spoke of the deep regret felt by all, upon hearing of

JOHN CARROLL MURPHY

JOHN CARROLL MURPHY was born on May 11, 1891, at River St. and Anna Murphy. He was educated at the University of Notre Dame, where he received a Bachelor's degree in 1913. He then served in the United States Army from 1914 to 1918, during which time he was promoted to the rank of Captain. After his military service, he returned to the University of Notre Dame and completed his Master's degree in 1920. He then spent several years working for the Catholic Church in various capacities, including as a chaplain and administrator. In 1925, he was appointed as the first Bishop of the newly created Diocese of San Jose, California. He served in this capacity until 1935, when he was transferred to the Diocese of San Francisco. He continued to serve in this role until his death on October 10, 1945. Bishop Murphy was known for his strong leadership and his commitment to the Catholic faith. He was also a dedicated educator and a skilled administrator. His tenure as Bishop of San Francisco was marked by significant growth and development for the diocese. He was a respected figure in the Catholic community and his legacy continues to be felt today.

JOHN CARROLL BROCKBANK (Continued)

these deaths which occurred just prior to the great victory, and with characteristic eloquence, paid a tribute to the memories of Wakefield's soldiers, who have made the supreme sacrifice. A large delegation from Post 12, Grand Army of the Republic, his fraternal organizations, and representatives of the Wakefield Committee on Public Safety attended.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Anna Brockbank, 16 Chestnut Street; a sister, Mrs. Charles (Myra B. Brockbank) George, 32 Lake Street, both of Wakefield, Massachusetts; two brothers: William Brockbank of Baltimore, Maryland, and Gray B. Brockbank, 16 Chestnut Street, Wakefield, Massachusetts.

THE HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES

The first of the great principles of the American Revolution was the right of the people to alter or to abolish their government, and to institute a new one, when it becomes destructive of the ends for which it was established. This principle was the foundation of the Declaration of Independence, and it was the basis of the American Revolution.

The second of the great principles of the American Revolution was the right of the people to be governed by laws made by themselves, or by their representatives. This principle was the foundation of the Constitution, and it was the basis of the American Revolution.

JOSEPH JEREMIAH BUCKLEY

JOSEPH JEREMIAH BUCKLEY, Cook, (1,227,339), son of Patrick B. and Honora Buckley, was born in Boston, Massachusetts, April 13, 1887. Enlisted as Cook in Company A, 6th Infantry, National Guard, June 6, 1914. Reported for duty March 30, 1917, and was mustered into Federal Service, April 6, 1917. Trained at Fort Revere, Hull, Massachusetts; Camp Darling, Framingham, Massachusetts; Camp Bartlett, Westfield, Massachusetts; transferred to Supply Company, 4th Pioneer Infantry, August 1, 1918; and sent to Camp Greene, North Carolina; and Camp Wadsworth, South Carolina. Sailed for foreign service, September 23, 1918; landed at St. Nazaire, France, and died of pneumonia, October 11, 1918, three days after his arrival. Sergeant Daniel Galvin, says in connection with his death:

"The most trying detail, was that of burying our Cook, Joseph Buckley, and not knowing until I nailed his identification tag to the marker over his grave, that it was him. He was buried directly west of the flagpole in the cemetery at the rear of the Hospital at St. Nazaire. Twelve men died on our Transport, on the way over."

While in Wakefield, Massachusetts, he made his home with Mrs. John Horrigan, 13 Highland Street.

JAMES PATRICK BURNS

JAMES PATRICK BURNS, Private (4,189), son of James and Mary Burns, was born in Wakefield, Massachusetts, January 6, 1894. When but a baby, he was taken to Ireland by his mother, and there he remained until he was eight years old. On his return to his native town, he attended the Hamilton School, for about two years, and again went to Ireland. In August, 1912, at the age of eighteen, enlisted in the Irish Guards, at Ballycotton, Ireland. The Irish Guards were known as a crack regiment; one had to be six feet or over, in order to have the honor of joining. The fact that his entire battalion was destroyed is proof that he was in the very thickest of the fighting. Private Burns was killed in action at the battle of Mons, September 4, 1914. The Germans buried him at a little place called Rond de la Reine, in the forest of Villers, Colterets, France, approximately three and one-half miles north of Villers, Colterets, which is about fourteen miles southwest of Soissons.

The King and Queen of England sent messages of sympathy to the bereaved parents. Lord Cecil, who represented the British Red Cross, assured the parents that their son's grave would be carefully and sacredly preserved.

Prayers for the repost of the soul of the deceased, were said in St. Joseph's Catholic Church at Wakefield, Massachusetts.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Mary Burns and a brother Florence of 21 Lake Street, Wakefield; two brothers: William of Greenwood and Robert of Lynn; two sisters: Mrs. Margaret Croghan of Quincy, Mrs. Helen Marchetti of Reading; all of Massachusetts.

The first of these is the fact that the government has been unable to raise the necessary funds to meet its obligations.
 This is due to a number of factors, including the fact that the government has been unable to collect the necessary taxes, and the fact that the government has been unable to borrow the necessary funds from the international market.
 The second factor is the fact that the government has been unable to implement the necessary reforms to the economy. This has led to a number of problems, including inflation, unemployment, and a general decline in the standard of living. The third factor is the fact that the government has been unable to maintain a stable political environment. This has led to a number of problems, including corruption, and a general lack of confidence in the government.
 These factors have all contributed to the economic crisis that the country is currently facing. The government must take immediate action to address these problems, or the crisis will continue to worsen.

[illegible]

1. The first step is to identify the problem or question that needs to be answered. This involves understanding the context and the specific requirements of the task.

JOHN T. BURNS

JOHN T. BURNS, Private (62,672), son of Patrick and Catherine Burns, was born in Wakefield, Massachusetts, June 16, 1896. Educated in the Wakefield Public Schools. He had completed all but one month of his apprenticeship as a plasterer, under the able direction of his father, when he enlisted in Company A, 6th Regiment, Infantry, Massachusetts National Guard, May 23, 1917. Trained at Fort Revere, Hull, Massachusetts; Camp Darling, Framingham, Massachusetts; Camp Devens, Ayer, Massachusetts; Camp McGuinness, Framingham, Massachusetts. Transferred from Company A, to Headquarters Company, 101st Infantry, 26th Division, September 4, 1917. Sailed from Hoboken, New Jersey, September 7, 1917; arrived at St. Nazaire, France, September 21, 1917; was billeted in the Neufchateau area for further training; experienced active service in the Chemin des Dames and Toul sectors, at Chateau-Thierry and St. Mihiel. Private Burns went through all the engagements in which the Yankee Division participated, during the spring and summer of 1918, and came through without a scratch. He died of pneumonia, September 28, 1918, while in one of the French hospitals. The first body of a Yankee Division soldier to arrive in Wakefield, Massachusetts, was that of Private Burns. The flag-draped casket rested in the home of his parents on Lake Street for one night; from there it was taken to the Armory, where it lay in state. On Saturday, July 30, 1921, the body was escorted from the Armory to St. Joseph's Church, where a Solemn Requiem Mass was celebrated by the Pastor, Reverend Florence J. Halloran. Committal services were conducted at the grave by Father Halloran. Taps were sounded and the customary salute of guns was given by Company K, 9th Infantry. Burial was in St. Patrick's Cemetery, Stoneham, Massachusetts.

He is survived by two sisters: Catherine and Mary Burns of 23 Lake Street, Wakefield, Massachusetts; and brother, Matthew Burns of Shirley, Massachusetts.

PAUL CARTWRIGHT

PAUL CARTWRIGHT, Lieutenant, son of Walter O. and Abbie N. Cartwright, was born in Harwich, Massachusetts, February 3, 1895. Attended the Wakefield Public Schools and was graduated from High School in the class of 1912; the Huntington School, Boston, Massachusetts, in 1913. and a student at Brown University for two and one-half years. At the time of his enlistment, he was employed, as a Civil Engineer, by the Boston and Maine Railroad. He enlisted in the Reserve Corps at Cambridge, Massachusetts, September 12, 1917; was called into Federal Service December 1, 1917; studied at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology Ground School, Cambridge, and at the Princeton Aviation School, from where he was sent to Camp Dick, Texas, and then went to Chanute Field, Illinois, where he received a commission as 2nd Lieutenant, May 29, 1918. He was then transferred to Dallas, Texas; sent to Payne Field, West Point, Mississippi, where he qualified as a Pilot. Lieutenant Cartwright sailed for France from Hoboken, New Jersey, September 26, 1918, and while en route, he was stricken with pneumonia, and died in Base Hospital No. 1, at Brest, France, October 8, 1918. He was buried in Grave No. 8, Row No. 1, in the American Expeditionary Forces' Cemetery at Iambezellec, Finistere, France; later, in July, 1920, the body was brought to Wakefield, Massachusetts. Private funeral services were held Wednesday, July 21, 1920, from the home of his mother, Mrs. Abbie N. Cartwright, 24 Park Street, Wakefield, and conducted by Reverend Frederick S. Boody, Pastor of Baptist Church. The flag-draped casket was escorted from the home to Lakeside Cemetery, Wakefield, by a Guard of Honor from Corporal Harry E. Nelson Post 63, American Legion. Public committal services at the cemetery followed. Reverend Mr. Boody and Commander Poland of Post 12, Grand Army of the Republic, spoke in terms of appreciation of such a noble young man. Customary salute was fired and taps sounded.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Abbie N. Cartwright, 24 Park Street, Wakefield, Massachusetts, and a brother, Kenneth Cartwright of New Haven, Connecticut.

WILLIAM H. CARTLAND, Jr.

WILLIAM CARTLAND, Jr., Sergeant (127,229), son of William H. and Helen E. (Gibbs) Cartland, was born in Wakefield, Massachusetts, December 29, 1895. Attended the Wakefield Public Schools, the Huntington School, Boston, Massachusetts, and was employed as a salesman by a New York house, at the time of his enlistment, April 12, 1917, at Fort Slocum, New York; trained at Fort Bliss, Texas; Camp Robinson, Wisconsin, and was attached to the famous First Division, which served so gallantly throughout the war; was connected with the 8th Field Artillery, but from July, 1917, to the end of his service, he was with the 7th Field Artillery, Battery B, 1st Division. Promoted to Corporal, July 1, 1917, and to Sergeant, July 23, 1917. Sailed for foreign service, November 1, 1917, from New York, arriving in France, and while there, he was in constant and dangerous action, and known as a courageous and faithful soldier. After the German drive in March, 1918, General Pershing moved his regulars near Amiens, and on May 13, 1918, in front of Cantigny, a few days before the great battle, Sergeant Cartland was killed, while on his second trip as runner, having volunteered for this service. He was on duty at the observation post, locating German batteries, and just as he was coming from the post along a woodland path, a shell suddenly burst, killing him instantly. Private Cartland was the sixth Wakefield boy to die in service, and the third killed in France. The Chaplain who buried the brave young man, in the woods near the ruined Chateau de Broyes at Bois de Villers, France, wrote:

"It was the most terrible place I was ever in during the war. In those woods, my hair turned gray."

Many appreciative words have been said of this splendid young man. One of his close comrades in the Headquarters Company wrote:

WILLIAM H. CARTLAND, Jr. (Continued)

"He died like a true soldier, for the honor of his country. He was loved and respected by all who knew him, for his gentlemanly conduct and unselfishness. He was always willing to help others, no matter what the cost to himself."

Citation: (posthumous)

General Orders #1 Headquarters, 1st Division, January 1, 1920:

"For gallantry in action and especially meritorious services."

Signed:

Colonel Stephen O. Fugua,
Chief Staff,
Headquarters, 1st Division.

Sergeant Cartland is buried in Boni Cemetery, in Northern France, twelve miles from San Quentin, in Somme District. An impressive memorial service was held, June 2, 1918, in the Congregational Church, Wakefield, Massachusetts, Dr. Austin Rice, Pastor, officiated.

He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Cartland, 294 Main Street, Wakefield, Massachusetts; three sisters: Mrs. Gerhard K. (Doris Cartland) von Klock, 23 Salem Street, Wakefield, Massachusetts; Mrs. Otho (Eleanor Cartland) Wiggs, Beaufort, South Carolina; and Mrs. John (Olive Cartland) Tennant of West Chicago, Illinois.

NICOLA DE FELICE

NICOLA DE FELICE, Private (1,686,418), son of Francesco and Maria Paola (Martella) De Felice, was born in Rodi, Foggia, Italy, August 14, 1895. As a young man, he was a member of the Merchant Marine Department of Ancona, Italy; came to America in May, 1912; was a student at the Wakefield High Night School; a chair-maker by occupation, and a member of the Sons of Italy Lodge, of Wakefield, Massachusetts. He entered the United States Army at Melrose, Massachusetts, March 28, 1918; assigned to the 9th Company, 3rd Battalion, Depot Brigade, at Camp Devens, Ayer, Massachusetts, for training; transferred to Battery C, 306th Field Artillery, 77th Division, April 18, 1918. Sailed for oversea service from New York, April 24, 1918. Experienced active service in the Oise-Aisne Offensive sector; Baccarat (Lorraine) defensive sector and in the Vesle (Champagne) sector; where he was killed in action, August 20, 1918, two days after the death of his mother in Italy. Private De Felice was buried with military honors in the Oise-Aisne American Cemetery, Grave #23, Row 4, Block C.

He is survived by his father, Francesco De Felice, who still resides in Italy; two brothers: Michael De Felice, 13 Wakefield Avenue, and Leonard De Felice, 106 Water Street, both of Wakefield, Massachusetts.

JOHN P. DONEGAN

JOHN P. DONEGAN, Private 1st Class (71,147), son of William and Catherine (Kelliher) Donegan, was born in Wakefield, Massachusetts, March 4, 1896. Educated in the Wakefield Public Schools, and was employed by the Heywood-Wakefield Company, Wakefield. He enlisted in Company A, 6th Regiment, Infantry, Massachusetts National Guard at Wakefield, June 4, 1917; trained at Camp Darling, Framingham, Massachusetts; Camp Devens, Ayer, Massachusetts; Camp Bartlett, Westfield, Massachusetts; transferred to Company A, 104th Infantry, 26th Division. Sailed from Montreal, Canada, October 3, 1917; arrived at Liverpool, England, October 22, 1917, and later sailed for Le Havre, France, where he was billeted in the Neufchateau area for further training. Private Donegan experienced active service in the Champagne-Marne, Chemin-des-Dames (Ile-de-France); Toul Boucq (Lorraine); Pas Fini (Ile-de-France); Rupt (Lorraine); and Troyon (Lorraine), defensive sectors; in the Aisne-Marne; St. Mihiel Offensives, and was killed in action, October 16, 1918 (in Bois d'Haumont), Meuse-Argonne Offensive. Private Donegan was buried in the Meuse-Argonne American Cemetery, Grave No.27, Row 24, Block A.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Catherine Donegan, 13 Fitch Court, Wakefield; three sisters: Mrs. Daniel C. (Mary Donegan) Creedon, Wakefield; Mrs. J. H. (Catherine Donegan) MacClellan, Belmont; Sister Cosmos, (Margaret Donegan) Order of St. Joseph, Watertown; six brothers: George, Jeremiah, Maurice and William of Wakefield; Patrick of Gardner, all of Massachusetts, and Timothy, of the United States Navy, now stationed at San Pedro, California.

JOHN P. DUGGAN, Corporal (71,079), son of Timothy and Catherine Duggan, was born in Wakefield, Massachusetts, October 4, 1893. Educated in the Wakefield Public Schools, and at the time of entering service, was a shoemaker at the L. B. Evans' Sons Company, Wakefield. Enlisted in Company A, 6th Regiment, Infantry, Massachusetts National Guard, May 23, 1917; trained at Camp Darling, Framingham, Massachusetts; Camp Devens, Ayer, Massachusetts and Camp Bartlett, Westfield, Massachusetts; transferred to Company A, 104th Infantry, 26th Division, August 5, 1917. Sailed from Montreal, Canada, October 4, 1917; arrived at Liverpool, England, October 22, 1917; later went to France; billeted in the Neufchateau area. Promoted to Corporal, April 24, 1918; experienced active service at Apremont, Chemin des Dames, St. Mihiel, Chateau-Thierry and Verdun. At Chateau-Thierry on July 20, 1918, was slightly wounded on the arm and chest. Corporal Duggan was killed in action October 17, 1918, at Haumont in the Verdun sector. His parents were not officially notified of their son's death until February, 1919, and during this period entertained the hope that he might be held a prisoner and unable to write of his plight. On February 10, 1919, a solemn high mass of requiem was celebrated in the St. Joseph's Catholic Church, Wakefield. Father Halloran paid a high tribute to the excellent life and noble death of the deceased. In September, 1919, the parents received a memorial certificate from General Pershing, commendatory of the Corporal's deeds in action while a member of the famous "Death Platoon" of the 26th Division. Corporal Duggan was buried in the Meuse-Argonne Cemetery, Romagne Village, France, but later his body was brought to Wakefield, where the flag-draped casket lay in state at the Armory. On Sunday, August 14, 1921, funeral services with full military honors, were held at St. Joseph's Church, Wakefield. The church was filled with relatives, friends, and representatives of fraternal and civic organizations. The Pastor, Reverend Florence J. Halloran, delivered an impressive eulogy, saying in part:

"The lapse of time and the fading of war memories should not lessen our appreciation of the greatness of these sacrifices."

The body was borne on a caisson to St. Patrick's Cemetery, Stoneham, Massachusetts, where a bugler and firing squad performed final military rites.

He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Duggan, and a brother, Thomas, all of 8 Bennett Street, Wakefield, Massachusetts; brother, Dr. D. Joseph Duggan of Malden, Massachusetts, and a sister, Mrs. James E. Crosby of Medford, Massachusetts.

EDWARD M. FAY, Private 1st Class (64,396), son of Michael J. and Mary L. Fay, was born in Wakefield, Massachusetts, December 4, 1898. Attended Wakefield Public Schools and Wakefield High School. At the time of his enlistment was employed in a paper mill at Springfield, Massachusetts. Enlisted in Company A, 6th Regiment, Infantry, Massachusetts National Guard at Wakefield, May 20, 1915; was called into active service at Wakefield, March 30, 1917; trained at Fort Revere, Hull, Massachusetts; Camp Darling, Framingham, Massachusetts; Camp Devens, Ayer, Massachusetts, and Camp Yale, New Haven, Connecticut; was transferred to Company D, 102nd Infantry, 26th Division. Sailed for oversea duty from Hoboken, New Jersey, September 9, 1917; arrived at Le Havre, France, September 25, 1917; billeted in the Neufchateau area for further training. Experienced active service in Champagne-Marne; Chemin-des-Dames, (Ile de France); Toul-Boucq, (Lorraine); Pas Fini, (Ile de France), defensive sectors, and the Aisne-Marne offensive sector. He was wounded at Seicheprey, in the Chemin-des-Dames sector, April 20, 1917. Private Fay was killed in action, July 21, 1918, near Epieds, during the Chateau-Thierry drive. The 26th Division reached the Chateau-Thierry-Soissons Road on July 21, and late in the day advanced on Trugny and Epieds, which was not taken until July 23, 1918, when heavy artillery supported the brigade in its objective. It was in this engagement that Private Fay, Corporal Fish, and Roy P. Stone of Stoneham, Massachusetts, were killed. On August 16, 1918, a letter was received by the parents of Sergeant James G. Brown, containing news of the death of Private Fay, and on September 3, 1918, official notification was received from the War Department. Learning of the death of Private Fay, his Pastor, Father Florence J. Halloran, celebrated a Memorial Mass as a tribute to the young man, who was known to be especially upright and faithful, and was greatly liked by all who knew him. Later the body was brought home, and funeral services were held at St. Joseph's Church, Wakefield, on Sunday, July 31, 1921. The large attendance testified to the esteem in which the young man was held. Requiem Mass was celebrated the following day by Father Halloran, assisted by Father John F. Meheran and Father William Flynn. The flag-draped casket was escorted to St. Patrick's Cemetery, Stoneham, Massachusetts, by a guard of honor, where burial was in the family lot. The usual military honors of volley and taps were accorded.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Mary L. Fay; a sister, Bessie Fay; two brothers: John J. and George J. of 69 Cedar Street, and sister Mrs. John G. (Julia Fay) Cowie, 19 Lake Street, all of Wakefield, Massachusetts.

CROWELL G. FISH

CROWELL G. FISH, Corporal (71,029), son of George D. C. and Mary J. (Hatch) Fish, was born in Marlboro, Massachusetts, June 14, 1885. Enlisted in Company A 6th Regiment Infantry, Massachusetts National Guard, at Wakefield, Massachusetts, April 9, 1914, and was a member of the Massachusetts State Rifle team at Jacksonville, Florida, in 1915. As a Private, he was called into active service March 30, 1917, at Wakefield; trained at Fort Revere, Hull, Massachusetts; Camp Darling, Framingham, Massachusetts; Camp Devens, Ayer, Massachusetts; Camp Bartlett, Westfield, Massachusetts; and was promoted to Corporal, April 28, 1917. Corporal Fish was transferred to Company A, 104th Regiment, Infantry, August 5, 1917. Sailed for oversea service from Montreal, Canada, October 5, 1917; arrived at Liverpool, England, October 22, 1917; later sailed from Southampton, England, and arrived at Le Havre, France, October 29, 1917, and was billeted in the Neuf-chateau area for further training. He experienced active service in the Chemin-des-Dames; Champagne-Marne defensive sectors, and died of wounds received in action near Belleau Wood, July 20, 1918. He was killed when the Company emerged from Belleau Woods for the first big drive. Only seventy-six of the two hundred fifty of Company A, 104th, reached the first objective. The hillside was strewn with bodies of comrades and enemies. In those five days it was always "forward" with the 26th Division. When Company A, was sent to the rear for rest, but five or six Wakefield boys out of half a hundred, were still in the ranks. The body of Corporal Fish was brought home, and on Sunday, July 17, 1921, services were held in the State Armory at Marlboro, and conducted by Reverend William H. Osmond, Pastor of the Holy Trinity Church of that city. A large delegation of comrades from Wakefield attended. Burial was in the family lot at Marlboro, Massachusetts.

He is survived by his parents: Mr. George D.C. and Mrs. Mary J. Fish; two sisters: Annie Fish (Mrs. Charles H. Faulk), and Agnes Fish (Mrs. Frank D. Woodbridge, all of Lynn, Massachusetts.

MICHAEL JOSEPH GIBBONS

MICHAEL JOSEPH GIBBONS, Private (2,719,681), son of Thomas and Mary Gibbons, was born in Wakefield, Massachusetts, June 2, 1893. Educated in the Wakefield Public Schools, and was employed by the Heywood-Wakefield Company, Wakefield, at the time he entered the United States Army at Melrose, Massachusetts, April 28, 1918. He was assigned to the 4th Company, 1st Battalion, 151st Depot Brigade, at Camp Devens, Ayer, Massachusetts, for training; transferred to Company I, 301st Infantry, 76th Division, May 23, 1918. Sailed for oversea duty July 6, 1918. On his arrival in France, he was transferred to Company C, 163rd Infantry; and later to Company D, 168th Infantry, 42nd Division, known as the famous "Rainbow Division" of the American Expeditionary Force, in France. Private Gibbons experienced active service in the St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne sectors. He was continuously at the front from the time of his arrival in France until he was killed in action, October 10, 1918, in Bois de Romagne, in the Meuse-Argonne Offensive, while he and sixty others were doing scout duty. It was a particularly dangerous mission, and the boys had to dig trenches in order to escape the shower of shells. It was here that Private Gibbons was killed. A letter from the Chaplain, referred very feelingly to the young man, and brought comfort to the parents in his statement that everything had been done in regard to the final rites and burial, which was in the National Cemetery in France. Later, on November 4, 1921, the body of Private Gibbons was brought to the home of his parents in Wakefield, and was taken next day to the State Armory, where he lay in state, guarded by a detail of veterans from the American Legion, and on Sunday afternoon was escorted to St. Joseph's Church, Wakefield, where military services were held. Reverend John F. Mehern spoke intimately of the young soldier and brought much comfort to the bereaved family. He said in part:

"If it be a noble thing, and it is, to live a good citizen for one's country, it is trebly noble to die a good soldier for one's country. Greater love than this no man hath, than to lay down his life for others."

Burial was in the family lot, in St. Patrick's Cemetery, Stoneham, Massachusetts, with the customary Military Honors.

He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Gibbons; and four brothers: John C., Thomas L., Arthur F., all of 223 Vernon Street, Wakefield, Massachusetts, and Edward P. of Hartford, Connecticut.

ROBERT GIBBS

ROBERT GIBBS, Radio Electrician (125-66-29), son of George E. and Armande A. Gibbs, was born in Roxbury, Massachusetts, September 18, 1899. He was only a boy of seventeen when he left the Wakefield High School to enlist in the United States Navy at Boston, Massachusetts, May 19, 1917, and he is remembered with great affection, because he was one of Wakefield's boys who fought and died for his country. He was assigned for duty on the United States Ship, Virginian, at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, New York; transferred to Columbia University, New York, for training; to Pelham Bay Training Station, New York; to the Brooklyn Navy Yard; and then assigned to the United States Naval Tug, Cherokee; promoted from Apprentice Seaman to Radio Electrician 3rd Class. It was on the Naval Tug, Cherokee, that this young man lost his life, February 26, 1918, when the Cherokee foundered in a 50 mile northwest gale off the American coast, with many lives lost, the body of Electrician Gibbs being recovered. Beautiful and touching tributes to Robert Gibbs were received by his parents, among them being a letter from his close friend on the Cherokee, Frank Brumfield, who wrote: Robert Gibbs was always ready and willing to help with anything about the ship, and, although only a boy of 18 years, with less than six months' experience, he stood at the key as steady as an older and more experienced man." On March 8, 1918, a funeral service with full Military Honors, flags at half-staff, tolling of bells, and every mark of respect that a town and sorrowing community could show, was held in the Greenwood Union Church, Wakefield, Massachusetts. Dr. F. T. Kenyon, Pastor, delivered an eloquent eulogy, saying in part:

"Greater love hath no man than this, that he lay down his life for his friends."

A Guard of Honor from H. M. Warren, Post 12, Grand Army of the Republic, escorted the body to Lakeside Cemetery, Wakefield, Massachusetts, where final Military Honors were accorded.

He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George E. Gibbs; two brothers: George Edward and Joseph Leonard, of 33 Madison Avenue, and two sisters: Mrs. Walter F. (Edith G. Gibbs) Carley, 21 Pine Street, and Mrs. Earl L. (Ethel G. Gibbs) Bears, of 7 Greenwood Avenue, all of Wakefield, Massachusetts.

ALVIN W. GORDON

ALVIN W. GORDON, Private 1st Class (109,357), son of Alvin J. and Katherine (Bailey) Gordon, was born in London, England, November 30, 1894. Educated in the Wakefield Public and High Schools, Wakefield, Massachusetts. Enlisted in Troop A, 1st Separate Squadron Cavalry, Massachusetts National Guard, July 2, 1917, at Boston, Massachusetts, and was called into active duty, July 25, 1917; received training at Camp Darling, Framingham, Massachusetts, where he was transferred to Company A, 102nd Machine Gun Battalion, 26th Division. Sailed for oversea duty from Hoboken, New Jersey, September 23, 1917; arrived at St. Nazaire, France, October 5, 1917, and was billeted in the Neufchateau area for further training. He experienced active service in the Chemin des Dames (Ile-de-France) and Toul-Boucq (Lorraine) Defensive sectors. Private Gordon was killed in action at Seicheprey, in the Toul-Boucq sector, April 20, 1918. The following is an extract from a letter written by Private Ralph D. Phinney of Company A, 102nd Machine Gun Battalion, published in a recent issue of the Transcript, giving a vivid picture of the fighting at Seicheprey, in which Jack Gordon was killed:

"The shells were falling like hail all around our emplacement. Suddenly I felt a heavy blow on my back, which hurled me through the air into the trench. Our Sergeant dragged me around a corner of the trench and left me there. Back I rushed to the gun and took up my old place again. How dear old Jack Gordon, the gunner, did grin when he saw me. Poor Jack, they fatally wounded him three hours later. About 6.30, Jack and I were in one traverse, cleaning our ammunition (the Boche shells were landing so close that they had covered our ammunition with mud), and we were presented with a couple of cigarets by another lad named Sutermeister. Jack said "I will step around the first traverse and get a light from Corporal Havlin." About five minutes - and no Jack came back. Suddenly Elliott, another of our crew, came around the trench, and there, in front of our gun pit, lay Jack. He lived four hours or so. We were ordered into our dug-outs at seven, and two hours later our trench was blown to pieces. The very morning he was killed, he, personally, had fired 27,000 shots, before his machine gun was put out of commission."

He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alvin J. Gordon of 132 Lexington Avenue, Cambridge, Massachusetts.

REPORT

The purpose of this report is to provide a comprehensive overview of the project's progress and results. The project was initiated in January 2023 and has since been a continuous effort to develop and implement a new system. The initial phase involved a thorough analysis of the requirements and the selection of the appropriate technology stack. This was followed by the design and development of the system, which was completed in June 2023. The final phase of the project was the deployment and testing of the system, which was completed in August 2023. The results of the project have been positive, with the system being successfully implemented and tested. The project has also provided valuable insights into the challenges of developing and implementing a new system, which will be used to inform future projects.

The project was completed on time and within budget. The system has been successfully implemented and tested, and the results have been positive. The project has also provided valuable insights into the challenges of developing and implementing a new system, which will be used to inform future projects.

HENRY J. NASELLA

HENRY J. NASELLA, Private (218,255) son of Michael and Maria (D'Arcangelo) Nasella, was born in Monicillione, Campobasso, Italy, March 2, 1899. He was educated in the Wakefield Public Schools, Wakefield, Massachusetts, and at the time of his enlistment was employed by the L. B. Evans' Sons Company of Wakefield. Enlisted into the United States Army at Boston, Massachusetts, August 18, 1917; transferred to Fort Slocum, New York; was assigned to 302nd Supply Company, Quartermaster Corps; trained at Madison Barracks, New York. Sailed for over-sea service from Hoboken, New Jersey, November 25, 1917; arrived at St. Nazaire, France, December 8, 1917, and was billeted in Caserne Pite, France, for further training; experienced active service at Montdidier and Amiens, in the La Reine and Boucq Defensive sectors. Private Nasella was killed during an enemy air raid while on guard duty at Railroad Station La Roe, St. Pierre (Oise), France. Montdidier was a strong railroad centre of supply for the French Army, and was constantly under heavy bombardment. A vivid description of how Private Nasella met his heroic death is described by his "Buddy" Thomas DeLeo, as follows:

"We were ordered to the Picardy (German Offensive sector) for patrol duty, and were under heavy air raids continually, and on May 31, 1918, a call was made for volunteers to go on patrol duty. Private Nasella, who was injured a few days previous, volunteered, altho excused because of his injury, insisted to be permitted to share in the dangerous service. About 8.30 in the evening a barrage of the enemy began, with shells falling in every direction. Suddenly a German Air Fleet was sighted and Nasella gave the alarm. After he had fired two shots, the enemy airplanes were at once close above them, their machine guns and bombs being used at close range. As Nasella attempted to fall flat on the ground at the Railroad Station at La Rue, St. Pierre (Oise) on June 1, 1918, a small air torpedo exploded under him.

HENRY J. NASELLA (Continued).

Private John T. Murphy, who was close by, bravely tried to save Nasella, and carried him, under heavy fire, until he reached the road, where a French truck took them both to Clermont. There was however no hope for Nasella, he had been killed instantly. He was a young man greatly liked by his comrades and was always ready for any service, no matter how hazardous it might be."

He takes his place worthily as one of the group of our Wakefield men whom we honor. Private Nasella's body was brought to the United States, April 1, 1921. Funeral services were held at the home of his parents, 209 Vernon Street, Wakefield, Massachusetts, April 2, 1921, and on the following day the body was taken from his late home to the State Armory, Wakefield, by a Guard of Honor from the Corporal Harry E. Nelson Post No. 65, American Legion, where it lay in state. On the morning of April 4, 1921, the body was escorted to the St. Joseph's Church, Wakefield, where a Solemn High Mass was celebrated by Reverend William H. Flynn. Delegations representing the Police Department, American Legion, Company K, 9th Regiment, Infantry, National Guard, Horace M. Warren Post No. 12, Grand Army of the Republic, Board of Selectmen and several Fraternal Organizations attended. Burial was in the St. Patrick's Cemetery, Stoneham, Massachusetts. The Nasella Playground, Water Street, Wakefield, was dedicated in his honor on October 20, 1921.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Maria Nasella, and a sister, Mrs. Josephine (Nasella) Sardella, both of 16 West Water Street, Wakefield, Massachusetts.

HARRY E. NELSON

HARRY E. NELSON, Corporal (72,518), son of Emil and Nellie (Nygren) Nelson, was born in Wakefield, Massachusetts, November 17, 1895. Educated in the Wakefield Public Schools. Enlisted in Company A, 6th Regiment, Infantry, Massachusetts National Guard, at Wakefield, November 23, 1916; called into active duty, March 30, 1917; trained at Fort Revere, Hull, Massachusetts; Camp Darling, Framingham, Massachusetts; Camp Bartlett, Westfield, Massachusetts; and Camp Devens, Ayer, Massachusetts; promoted to Corporal, August 23, 1917, and was transferred to Company G, 104th Regiment, Infantry, 26th Division. Sailed from New York, October 2, 1917; arrived at Southampton, England, October 18, 1917; later crossed to Le Havre, France, and was billeted in the Neufchateau area for further training. He experienced active service in the Chemin des Dames and Le Rein (Boucq) sectors. Corporal Nelson died, April 13, 1918, of wounds received in the engagement at Aprement, in the Le Rein (Boucq) Offensive. Corporal Nelson was awarded the Croix de Guerre (Posthumously), with the following citation:

"Remarkable coolness and courage in the command of his squad under violent fire; was mortally wounded, April 13, 1918."

The French Croix de Guerre was sent to Corporal Nelson's father, with the following letter from the commanding officer of the 104th Infantry, Colonel H. Shelton:

"My dear sir:

In action with his company of this regiment, Corporal Nelson was mortally wounded on April 13, 1918.

I hope it will be a lasting consolation to you, as it will be an inspiration to the comrades here, to know that he died only after displaying fine soldierly qualities and great moral and physical courage. For his gallant action he had been awarded the Croix de Guerre, and I take pleasure in sending you this cross as a permanent mark of the recognition in his courage and devotion to duty."

A letter from Major Charles R. Pierce, American Quartermaster, United States Army, expressed sympathy to the bereaved family and stated that the body of Corporal Nelson was buried in a cemetery at Sebastopol, France, to which the Major added:

HARRY E. NELSON (Continued)

"The service which I command, will guard this spot, his sepulcher, and we shall try to care for it as you would wish. This will be our sacred trust. He has gone from us into immortal life through the martyrdom of service, and in defense of the principle of liberty."

Upon learning of his death, private services were held at his late home, 49 Pleasant Street, Wakefield. On Sunday, April 21, 1918, a fitting tribute to the memory of Corporal Nelson, was paid by Reverend F. S. Boody, Pastor of the Baptist Church, Wakefield, at the morning service. His subject was "Our First Dead in France" and the sermon was based on the significance of the soldier's death. He spoke of the consecrated service of this young man, whose upright career, steadfast faith and fortitude might well be a noble example for others to follow. He was the first Wakefield soldier to be killed in the World War, as well as the first Company A man. It was in his honor that the local Corporal Harry E. Nelson Post, No. 63, American Legion, was named, May 28, 1919. Corporal Nelson's body was brought to the United States, arriving in Wakefield on Saturday, August 13, 1921, and was taken to the State Armory, where it lay in state until the following day, Sunday, when the flag-draped casket was borne upon a four horse caisson, to the Baptist Church, escorted by a Guard of Honor from the Corporal Harry E. Nelson, Post No. 63, American Legion. Reverend Mr. Boody paid the following touching and eloquent tribute to this young soldier:

"When all the records of the World War have been analyzed, nothing will be found to exceed the bravery, the superb energy and limitless sacrifice of the American soldiers. The flag looks more beautiful to me since these boys have given their lives for it."

Burial was in the family lot in Lakeside Cemetery, Wakefield, Massachusetts.

He is survived by his father, Mr. Emil Nelson of 49 Pleasant Street; four sisters: Miss Mary Nelson, Mrs. Martha N. Schulman, both of 49 Pleasant Street, Mrs. Edward E. (Ellen A. Nelson) Eaton, 28 Park Street, all of Wakefield, Massachusetts, and Mrs. Winfield McNeill of Summit, New Jersey.

C O M P A N Y "A"

The history of Wakefield's share in the greatest war of all the centuries cannot be written without including the part played by Company A, 6th Regiment, Infantry, Massachusetts National Guard. This now famous company, so dear to our ancient town from the date of its charter in 1851, when the name of the Richardson Light Guard was given it in honor of Dr. Solon O. Richardson, who had been so generously and keenly interested in the formation of the company, has always had a peculiarly vital place in the life of the town. It has been composed almost wholly of the citizens of Wakefield, and its successive commanders have maintained the notable efficiency down through the years. The list of these commanders comprises the following names:

|                             |                          |

| Capt. James F. Emerson      | Capt. Fred W. Hentz      |
| Major Geo. O. Carpenter     | Capt. Roger Howard       |
| Col. John W. Locke          | Capt. Charles A. Cheney  |
| Capt. Henry D. Degen        | Major Geo. H. Taylor     |
| Capt. Samuel F. Littlefield | Capt. Clinton H. Stearns |
| Capt. John M. Cate          | Col. Edward J. Gihon     |
| Capt. George K. Gilman      | Lt. Col. John H. McMahon |
| Capt. Albert Mansfield      | Maj. Edward J. Connelly  |

From the ranks of the Richardson Light Guard, Wakefield men went forth to fight with distinction during the stirring days of the Civil War. When the call came in the trying period of the Spanish War, and whenever there was an appeal for any kind of patriotic duty, it was, therefore, only a matter of course that when the United States took her place with the allies in April 1917, that Company "A" should, without any hesitation, prepare to follow the colors wherever the call might lead. For many months before the actual declaration of war on the part of our country, there had been a feeling that it was only a question of time before definite entrance into the arena of war should be made. On the last day of March, there was a short parade of the Company to stimulate recruiting, with Harper's Band and a fife and drum corps. A large crowd gathered, and there was a demonstration of much interest, many being reminded of those tense days in 1898 when Company "A" was called to the front.

On March 30th, Captain Connelly received a telephone call from Colonel Sweetser of the 6th Regiment, notifying him the regiment had been called out. On the 6th of April, the Company was formerly mustered into the Federal Service under the direction of Captain Golderman. That night Captain Connelly received orders to have the company held in readiness to leave the first thing in the morning. Although no public announcement had been made by eight o'clock on the morning of the 7th, the Armory was crowded with the relatives and friends of Company "A" soldiers. There were many affecting scenes. The mothers and wives realized that the dread meaning of the war actually to be experienced now. The boys, however, were full of confidence and hope, and most of them could hardly wait for the actual departure. The interest throughout the town increased daily. The physicians of Wakefield offered their services free to dependents of soldiers, and local dentists also were glad to give free treatment. At nine o'clock, the Company left for guard duty at Fort Revere, Hull, Massachusetts, departing amid the cheers and tears of over a thousand people who had gathered at the Armory. The automobile transportation committee of the Public Safety Committee had arranged for the transportation of the men in motor trucks. Large trucks owned by H. F. Miller & Son Piano Company; G.E. Moncrief, H. A. Feindel, and the Morrison-Skinner Company were used for the purpose, besides the truck recently presented to the Company by the Town.

May 19th, 1917, Captain Connelly received orders from the 6th Regiment Headquarters, to recruit Company A from 100 to 150 enlisted men, and on May 20th, Lieutenant Rogers was sent to the Wakefield Armory to take charge of the recruiting, assisted by Corporal Edward F. Better and Private Gray B. Brockbank. On June 3, 1917, Lieutenant Rogers with 50 recruits, under his command, left for training at Camp Darling, Framingham, Massachusetts. On June 30th, Captain Connelly received orders for the 6th Regiment to mobilize at Camp Darling, and Company A left Fort Revere, Hull, Massachusetts, July 6, 1917.

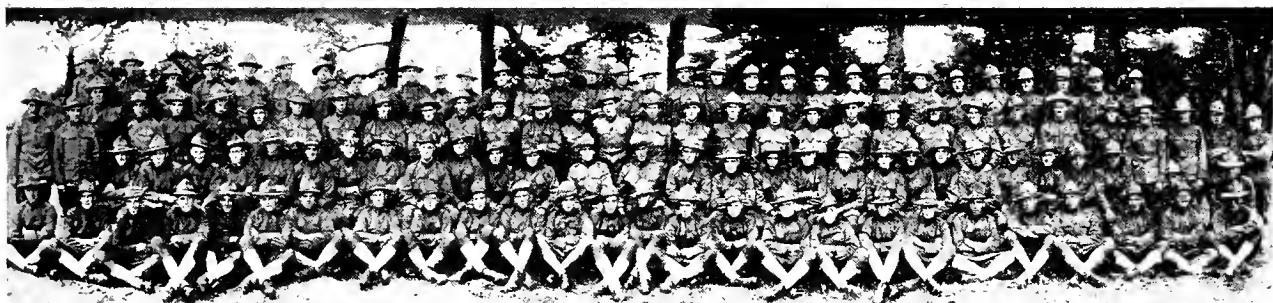

Upon arrival at Camp Darling, Captain Connelly reassembled the Company, and with the new recruits, went into vigorous training. On July 21, 1917, the Regiment was ordered to Camp Devens, Ayer, Massachusetts, and after a three day march, by the way of Sudbury and Boxboro, arrived at Camp Devens, after a long and tiresome hike. The National Guard, although in the United States Service was "inducted", in conformity with the new laws, into the service of the Regular Army, August 5, 1917. Company "A" was no longer a Massachusetts Company, but became a part of the 26th Division of the United States Army.

It soon became known that the local Company was not to be kept intact. This was a matter of general regret, since the Old Richardson Light Guard had so many cherished local associations. Realizing that the separation was inevitable, Captain Connelly obtained permission to bring the Company to Wakefield for a farewell visit before the change occurred. One of the most affecting scenes was the arrival of the Company on Saturday afternoon, August 25, 1917. Residences, stores, and public buildings were adorned with flags and bunting in honor of the occasion. Thousands of the townsfolk gathered on Main Street, the Square, Water Street, and at the Center Station, to give the boys a hearty welcome. Between loudly cheering lines of men, women and children, and the waving of "flags", the Company marched to the Armory where the boys were dismissed for their last evening at home. In the evening, there was a reception held in the Armory for the soldiers and sailors, and festivities continued for about four hours. Captain Connelly with Lieutenants Creedon and Hickey, newly commissioned officers returned from Plattsburg, New York, and who were chosen from the ranks of Company A, were at the head of the receiving line. Members of the Public Safety committee were active in directing the affair, and representatives of the Lady Associates of Company "A", including Mrs. Connelly, President, and Miss Marjorie D. Hawkes, Secretary, supervised the serving of punch. The tables were presided over by eight mothers of young men in Company "A": Mrs. Annie Brockbank, Mrs. Catherine Duggan, Mrs. Norah F. Butler, Mrs. Julia Thompson, Mrs. Catherine Barry, Mrs. Katherine M. MacMahan, Mrs. Anne Holden, and Mrs. Amy Davis. A moving address was given by Reverend Florence J. Halloran, a portion of which follows:

"I appreciate the privilege of voicing the sentiments of the people of this town on this notable occasion. I shall not detain you with many words, because not many words are needed. The occasion itself is eloquent, and more effective than any speech in the presence of you soldiers who have dedicated your rich young lives to your country's cause. Wakefield calls you back for a brief hour before your departure, to tell you that she is proud of every man of you, and to wish you God speed in the arduous mission that confronts you. Wakefield is proud of you in the hour of your Country's need. You sprang forward at her call, and for her defense you make that offering which is the highest test of devotion, the offering, it may be, of your very lives. Life is as sweet to you as to others. The World holds for you as many pleasures and rewards as for others, but thank God, there is something you value more than pleasure, and that is "Right". There is something higher for you than satisfied ambition, and that is your country's honor. There is something you prize even more than life itself, and that is the safety of your native land, and the triumph of the ideals for which she stands.

In the name of the people of the town, I congratulate you, men of Company A, for the quick and eager generosity with which you have come forward to your country's aid. I congratulate the fathers and mothers of these sturdy soldiers, that the teaching and example of their lives have borne such noble fruitage. Parents have an intimate share in the sacrifice which their sons are making, and surely, God will give them a generous share in the reward. You go into this conflict, soldiers, in the strong conviction that you are fighting for the "Right"; and "thrice is the armed who hath a quarrel just." Your country has not called you to put your lives in peril for the acquisition of territory, or for commercial advantage, or for any material or selfish gain to herself whatever. She has drawn the sword first of all to protect herself, because her own rights have been frequently assailed; because her own honor has been impugned; because she must defend herself by force, or forfeit her rightful place among the nations of the earth, and, unsheathing the sword, she will not use it in an ignoble way. She fights not only for her own safety, and for the security of her free institutions, but she fights for the high interests of the human race as well. She fights that "right" may prevail in the world, that the weak may not be crushed by the strong, that the dominating idea which ruled mankind may not be the mailed fist and militaristic aggression, but the even scales of equal justice to nations and to individuals.

Men of Company "A", America puts her flag into your hands, that starry banner which has never known defeat, the emblem of freedom for all. Your townspeople are confident that you will never let it fall. Carry it high, that blessed flag of the noblest nation of earth. Wherever it shall float on the breeze, it will bring hope to the oppressed and the suffering. It will speak of the final victory of liberty and justice for all mankind. That you may worthily and victoriously carry that flag, men, be true to the God who through all our History has been our refuge and our Protector. Walk unfalteringly in the way of His commandments, and He will support you in every vicissitude.

And now, from full hearts, we pray that the God of our fathers may have everyone of you in His holy keeping. We pray that He may give you strength of body and strength of soul; fortitude to endure, and unflinching courage to do and to dare, and in His own day, May God in His Infinite goodness and loving kindness, bring all of you back to your own, with Victory in your hands, and peace to a weary World.

On the following Sunday morning, August 26, 1917, there was an even greater demonstration in the town. Main Street was crowded on both sides from the Armory to the Common. About half past ten o'clock, there was a formation at the Armory of Company "A", the Grand Army Veterans, and the Spanish War Veterans; Lieutenant Colonel John H. McMahon was chief Marshal of the parade, and with him, marched Captain Samuel H. Brooks, Lieutenant J. E. Creedon, and Lieutenant Edward E. Hickey, Lieutenant F. Manning Hartshorne, Lieutenant Paul H. Taylor, Lieutenant Edward O. Proctor, and Lieutenant E. Hazen Walton, all of whom had recently won Officers' commissions at Plattsburg. Lieutenant John H. Downing commanded the State Guard Company, Commander J. W. Poland led the Grand Army of the Republic, while Commander F. H. Marion headed the Spanish War Veterans. Chief Pollard and a platoon of Police, and Lurvey's Lynn Cadet Band, were at the head of the procession. The men of Company "A" were in fine condition, being tanned and sunburned from their weeks of outdoor life.

The various services in the churches of the town closed early, that all might share in the last goodbyes. After a short parade through the square, around the Common, and down Chestnut Street, the members of the Company stood in the rear of the Upper Station, making their final farewells to the relatives and friends who saw the boys leaving, perhaps for the last time. It was indeed a sad and pathetic scene. The men themselves felt the gravity of the moment, and some broke down completely. Just before the train pulled into the station, the call to "fall in" came from Captain Connelly, and the last moments were filled with hurried words of goodbye, waving of flags, eager cheers, music from the band, and last of all, the boarding of the train and the final waving of hands. It was a scene that is not likely to be forgotten. The weather was particularly pleasant, and everything about the common, the park, the buildings, so brilliantly decorated with the national colors, the responsive and deeply moved expressions of the ten thousand people that thronged the streets, the very sight of the familiar figures of the boys in Khaki moving gallantly along, their heads erect, the consciousness in every heart of the uncertainty of future days, and the grim, sinister reality of war itself, all gave a solemnly impressive tone to all the exercises, and to the entire day.

On August 28, 1917, fifty men were transferred to the 104th Infantry; thirty, to the 101st Military Police; four, to the 101st Engineers Train, and all were mobilized at Camp Bartlett, Westfield, Massachusetts; fifteen to the 102nd Infantry, which were to assemble at Camp Yale, New Haven, Connecticut.

There was much sadness at the parting, for naturally there was a strong bond among the Wakefield boy's in the Company, and it was hoped even until the last that the Company might be sent in a body to whatever division it might be assigned. No one felt more sorrow for the military necessity that compelled this splitting up of the Company "A", than did Captain Connelly, since he had put so much affection and interest into the work of training the fine organization which constituted the local company. Just before the men left, and after their last "roll call" as members of the old Richardson Light Guard, Captain Connelly spoke a few words to the boys. In a voice shaken with emotion, he urged the men never to forget that once they had been members of Company "A", and to make it their ideal always to bring credit to their beloved company, wherever they might be. The men were much affected by Captain Connelly's simple address, and gave him three hearty cheers at the conclusion.

During the first week of September, the remaining members of the Company, not already at Westfield, left for the camp, including Captain Connelly, six of his Sergeants, four Corporals, two cooks, one bugler, one mechanic, and twenty-nine privates. The transfers and changes in the Company went on continually, and when Company "A" reached Westfield, orders were given transferring the twenty-nine privates to Headquarters Company, 101st Infantry at Framingham, Massachusetts. Captain Connelly was assigned as Depot Quartermaster in Brigadier General Cole's Brigade, and with him went the remainder of the Company, consisting of seventeen men. Of the fifty Company "A" men who joined the 104th Regiment, forty-two were assigned to Company A of that regiment, five to Company G, and three to Company K. On the 27th of September, Captain Connelly was assigned to command Company G, 104th Infantry, at Westfield; this new Regiment was made up chiefly of the 2nd Regiment. The seventeen members of Company A who were left at Westfield went with the 6th Regiment in November 1917, to Camp Greene, Charlotte, North Carolina, where the old designation of the regiment was changed to the 4th Pioneers. In February 1918, the troops moved to Camp Wadsworth, Spartanburg, South Carolina, and remained there until late in August, when they finally embarked at Newport News, Virginia, September 23, 1918 for France, and arrived at St. Nazaire, October 6, 1918. The regiment was later sent to Le Mans, and broken up, and men were used as replacements to various divisions.

The local Company had a remarkable record of service in the World War. Its members took part in every battle of the American Army, and served in many sectors, offensive and defensive. Its three original officers earned promotion in France; nine of its non-commissioned officers were made Commissioned Officers; fourteen men died in France, eleven killed in action, or died from wounds, three from disease. Forty-two men were authorized to wear a wound chevron for gas, gun shot or shell wounds received in action, and these men were all later eligible to the Purple Heart emblem. Six men received both French and American Decorations, including one Legion of Honor, two Distinguished Service Crosses, six Croix de Guerre, four Silver Star Decorations. In addition to these, there were a number of Citations by the French Army, as well as American Divisional and Army Citations.

The history of the 26th (Yankee) Division must in part be a history of the Old Richardson Light Guard, as most of the 150 men of Company A, had been transferred to this Division. The 101st and 102nd Regiments became the 51st Brigade; the 103rd and 104th, the 52nd Brigade of the 26th Division. The 101st Regiment assembled at Camp Darling, Framingham, Massachusetts, and sailed for foreign service from New York, September 7, 1917, and landed at St. Nazaire, France, September 21, 1917. The 102nd Regiment assembled at Camp Yale, New Haven, Connecticut, and left New York, September 19, 1917, arriving at St. Nazaire, October 9, 1917. Company A, and the First Battalion of the 104th left Westfield for France, by way of Montreal, Canada, sailing from Montreal, October 10, 1917. Company G, 104th Infantry, with the 2nd Battalion, left Westfield, October 2, 1917, sailing from Hoboken, New Jersey, October 3, 1917, for Halifax, Nova Scotia. Upon arrival at Halifax, they were joined by the rest of the 104th Regiment from Montreal, where a convoy of ten ships were assembled, and they sailed for overseas, arriving at Liverpool, England, October 17, 1917, where they remained a short time at a rest camp. There were many annoyances during those early days after landing. There were all kinds of blunders, and a deplorable lack of necessary equipment and utensils. The men had only two meals a day.

The Regiment later sailed from Southampton, crossing the channel to Le Havre, France, and then by train to Neufchateau, the training area of the 26th Division, located near the front line.

The Yankee Division was the first complete division to reach France, and the first to take over a division front in the line. It has a record of 212 actual days at the front, and ground gained in action of 37 Kilometers.

THE LADY ASSOCIATES OF COMPANY "A"

One of the organizations to be established almost immediately after the declaration of war by the United States, was the Ladies' Auxiliary or, as it was later called, The Lady Associates of Company "A", comprising the wives, sisters or friends of members of Company "A". This association was organized at the State Armory, April 14, 1917, and Mrs. Edward J. Connelly was chosen president, Mrs. F. H. Rogers, treasurer, and Miss Marjorie D. Hawkes, secretary.

The object of the organization was to send comforts of all kinds to the boys of Company "A", and to consider matters of interest to members of the company, and in every way possible to be of real assistance and cheer to the men in service. At the first meeting it was voted to send a box of good things to the boys every month, and the first shipment was made April 20, 1917 to the company, which was then stationed at Fort Revere. Company "A" at this time numbered one hundred men, later the number being increased to 150.

As it was imperative that all addresses be absolutely correct in mailing the boxes to the boys, the work of the Lady Associates was rendered very difficult, because the members of Company "A" were scattered among fifteen different units, the sixth Regiment, of which Company "A" was a part, being broken up and all the men transferred to various camps, with the exception of twenty, who were sent to Camp Green, Charlotte, North Carolina, and later to Camp Wadsworth, Spartanburg, South Carolina, before going overseas. Owing to postal regulations it was possible to send but three shipments while the boys were in France. The first box was sent November 15, 1917, and arrived about Christmas time. The present of a Christmas package for each boy was a great delight to the recipients. The second shipment was mailed January 20, 1918, and the third March 21, 1918. The boxes contained knitted articles, cigarettes, candy, toilet articles, etc., and were keenly appreciated by the boys, as was evident from the many grateful letters received by the President of the Associates.

The funds necessary to carry on the work of the organization were obtained from various sources, the proceeds of a tag day, July 21, 1917, and a dance on January 1, 1918, helped to swell the treasury, and checks were received from many citizens who were heartily in sympathy with the plan and work of the Association. The young Ladies of the local telephone exchange, also, in a very generous way helped along the cause by donating the proceeds of several dancing parties given under their auspices.

The activities of the Lady Associates were brought to a close by a grand banquet to the boys of the former Company "A", September 30, 1919, at the State Armory, a most enjoyable occasion in every way, and on the following evening there was a military ball to which all the Wakefield veterans of the World War were given a cordial invitation.

After all bills had been paid there was still a considerable sum in the treasury, and at the meeting called November 25, 1919, it was voted to divide this sum equally between the Corporal Harry E. Nelson Post 63, American Legion and the new company then forming to replace the former Company "A".

The work of the Lady Associates being now fully completed, it was voted to disband the Association.

MILITARY HISTORY OF
MAJOR EDWARD J. CONNELLY, 1st BATTALION, 104th Inf. A.E.F.

Of all the nearly eight hundred men who represented Wakefield in the World War, the outstanding figure, undoubtedly, is Major Edward J. Connelly. He served faithfully in the Spanish American War as a Private, and gave long service as an enlisted man, and as an officer in the Massachusetts Volunteer Militia and National Guard.

Wounded in action in the World War leading his men, twice decorated for gallantry by the French Government, twice decorated also by the United States, cited a number of times, in both French and United States Army orders for gallantry in action, selected for special work and promoted for efficiency and leadership, his is a record of which the Town of Wakefield is justly proud.

Although of a quiet and unassuming manner in civil life, when the emergency arose in military service, he exhibited surprising qualities of leadership under the most trying conditions. Displaying unusual courage, dash and alertness, he inspired those who were under him and won the respect of his superior officers. Seemingly immune to severe mental strain and physical fatigue, which wore down younger officers during over two years of World War work, eighteen months of which were spent in France, he took an important and prominent part in the long and strenuous combat activities of the fighting 26th (Yankee) Division.

As an Officer, he was always solicitous of the welfare, comfort and health of his men, at the same time insisting on a firm, but humane discipline so necessary in Military life in war service, and, as a result, gained the confidence and loyalty of his comrades.

His military career and training being linked with his service in Company A, 6th Massachusetts Infantry, National Guard, Wakefield's famed military unit, a brief outline of that service previous to the World War may be of interest.

Edward J. Connelly, son of Thomas and Elizabeth Connelly, was born in Chelsea, Massachusetts, October 10, 1876. When he was four years old, the family came to Wakefield, where he has since resided. He was educated in the grammar and Wakefield High Schools. Being interested in matters of a military nature, he became a member of the Wakefield High School Cadets, where he showed marked proficiency in drill and manual of arms, and became first sergeant. Sergeant Connelly was the first cadet, in 1893, to win two medals at an annual prize drill.

In May 1898, after war was declared against Spain, and volunteers were called for, swayed by patriotic fervor, he reported for enlistment at the Armory of Company A, but was rejected by the examining doctors, being too slight, and under the weight required for recruits. Persisting in his effort, however, he was permitted by Captain Gihon to accompany Company A to the assembly camp at South Framingham, where again he was turned down because of under-weight. Not discouraged, he remained at the camp, and was finally accepted when several older members of the company were rejected for various causes. The company was mustered into United States service, as Company A, 6th Regiment, Massachusetts Infantry, United States Volunteers, May 12, 1898. Private Connelly served throughout the war at South Framingham, Camp Alger, Virginia, and in Porto Rico.

At Quánica, Porto Rico, July 26, 1898, he was in a flanking group of Company A, that first received the fire from the Spanish soldiers in the attack on that date and subsequent fight, in which the Spanish force was defeated. While at Utuado, Porto Rico, Private Connelly volunteered and acted as nurse for nearly a month in the make-shift hospital which was filled with fever patients, and sadly in need of attendants.

Private Connelly was mustered out with Company A, January 21, 1899, at the South Armory, Boston. In this war, as an enlisted man, he had a record of excellent service.

February 1899, the 6th Regiment was reorganized in the State Service, and Private Connelly reenlisted in Company A, 6th Regiment, Infantry, Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, later the National Guard, serving continuously from that date until discharged from World War service, May 20, 1919; a total service of about twenty-one years, including the Spanish War and World War. He served in every grade; private, corporal, sergeant, and 1st Sergeant; elected and commissioned 2nd Lieutenant, June 10, 1907; 1st Lieutenant, November 22, 1909; Captain, September 21, 1914.

During his service as a non-commissioned officer, he had charge of teaching and instruction of hundreds of recruits in their duties, and spent much time instructing the men in rifle and pistol work, and in qualifications for record. As a Lieutenant, he continued this work, and brought the company to a high degree of efficiency in this very necessary requirement of soldiers. Under his leadership as Captain, Company A had the highest figure of merit in the regiment in general military work.

For years, Company A had an exceptional record of rifle shooting, and to be a member of its teams, one had to be above the average in shooting ability. Sergeant Connelly became a shooting member in 1904, and continued until the War, shooting in all the regimental and New England matches in which Company A proved to be champions, winning many trophies. In the State and Regimental indoor competitions, starting in 1912, Company A won every match and trophy; and in the 1915 competition, Captain Connelly led the entire State with a record score of 98 out of 100. In the 1911 State competition, he won a gold Sharpshooter's Medal, and Distinguished Marksmen's badge. In 1910 and 1911, he shot on the winning 6th Regiment Tricolor championship teams. He has won pistol medals and trophies at Walnut Hill Rangem and Wakefield Range, and is an expert of record with both rifle and pistol. He was a member of all the Camp 39 United States War Veteran's teams, which for years won every Spanish War match at the Rifle Range. He has won the

Carpenter, Kingman, Cheney, and Gihon Long Range Medals, for marksmanship in Company A, and the National Rifle Association Medal. For excellence in the Manual of Arms, he also, as an enlisted man, won the Wakefield Medal, the Richardson Medal, and other prizes. In January 1909, he captained a team of five men at Mechanics Hall, in Boston, and defeated eighteen high class teams in the Indoor Competition, winning the New England Championship for Company A, and a beautiful trophy.

While Captain of Company A, he built up athletics in the Company, which won military championships in track events, Basket Ball, Bowling, etc.

Taking the three year course of advanced military subjects in the Service School, Massachusetts Volunteer Militia for Officers, he led the regiment with an average of .988 for the years 1907 to 1910, receiving a certificate of High Credit. When Company A was called to duty in the great Lawrence Civil disturbance in January and February 1912, 1st Lieutenant Connelly commanded a platoon, and performed his work in a very creditable and tactful manner, during two weeks of extreme cold snowy weather conditions. Again in 1916, Company A Officers, non-coms, cooks, etc., were ordered to camp at South Framingham, to take charge of recruits left on the field when the Massachusetts troops entrained for the Mexican Border. Captain Connelly with his non-coms, trained, equipped, rationed and made out necessary records for 90 men, who were sent with others to join the troops in Texas in July.

During the four years previous to the World War, he was Military Instructor at Stoneham High School, and at times in the absence of Captain McMahon substituted at Wakefield High School. Captain Connelly was appointed in 1916 to the State Military Examining Board, serving until the 26th Division was being formed. This board passed on the qualifications and examinations of new officers in the State Military Service.

IN THE WORLD WAR

Although as a member of Company A, 6th Regiment, Infantry, Massachusetts National Guard, he and that famous Company brought credit and honor to Wakefield as a military town; it was during the World War that Major Connelly won high distinction. Shortly after returning from Washington, in March 1917, where Company A participated in the Inaugural ceremonies, it was apparent that the United States would be drawn into the war. On March 30, 1917, the Company was ordered out for duty, recruited from peace strength of 63 to 100 men, and on April 6, the day Congress declared War, Captain Connelly and Company A were mustered into Federal Service in the Wakefield Armory.

Owing to its excellent record, Captain Connelly's Company was ordered April 7, to Fort Revere, Hull, Massachusetts, to reinforce the regulars there, and perform necessary routine work and guard duty. Part of the duties were the guarding of Cable stations in Hull that controlled the electrical apparatus of the Harbor Forts, guarding the Water Works at Hingham, at Accord Pond, which supplied necessary water for the forts, and constructing entrenchments at the Fort. When leaving, Captain Connelly was highly commended by the Commanding Officer of the Fort for the efficient duty and conduct of his Company.

Company A left for Camp Darling, Framingham, July 6, 1917, where the regiment was assembled and 50 new recruits added to the rolls of the company, making 150 enlisted men. Here, intensive training as a regiment was begun. While at this camp, Captain Connelly was appointed president of a board of officers to pass on recommendations of Company Commanders for discharge of undesirable or unfit enlisted men, and was also placed as responsible Officer in charge of the Regimental Canteen. From Camp Darling, the regiment marched to Camp Devens, at Ayer, July 21, and under very trying conditions of heat, Captain Connelly's Company, due to its discipline and fine physical stamina, had the distinction of being the only one of thirteen companies to report at the end of the three days march with every man present. At Camp Devens, the Company under Captain Connelly, continued its training, and performed guard and police duty during the construction of the camp, until later broken up to form units of the new 26th Division being organized to be sent overseas. On August 5th, the regiment was inducted into United States Service.

After various groups of Company A had been sent to the 26th Division Military Police, 104th Infantry, 102nd Infantry, 101st Engineers, the remainder of the Company with Captain Connelly was ordered to Camp Bartlett, Westfield, September 4, 1917, where another detachment of 29 men were transferred to the Headquarters Company, 101st Infantry. While here, Captain Connelly was ordered by Brigadier General Cole to establish and make contracts for lease of a storehouse and distributing depot for the 52nd Brigade. This he accomplished, and September 12th, moved the remnants of his Company, about 18 men, to the building at 269 Elm Street, on the river bank. Here, he and his men assisted materially in quickly equipping the brigade, which enabled the 26th Division to be the first National Guard Division to sail for France. Captain Connelly was assigned to Company G, 104th Infantry, September 27, and took over the command of 250 men September 30. The Second Battalion left Westfield, October 2, for Hoboken, New Jersey, and embarked on the Cunard Liner Aurania, which sailed October 3, for Halifax, Nova Scotia, where the convoy of 10 ships assembled and left for Liverpool. Arriving there, October 17, trains were taken to Southampton. The Battalion camped at Southampton Common for four days, then boarded the Channel boats for Le Havre, France, arriving October 21, where one night was spent at a so called Rest Camp. At Le Havre, October 23, the Battalion, temporarily placed in command of Captain Connelly, entrained for Harreville-les-Chanteurs; arriving October 25, where a rigid course of training for combat was in force, until entering the lines, February 8, 1918.

During this period, Captain Connelly was in command of the Battalion at various times, and also during the absence of Major Campbell, while at school for one month. In addition to this duty, and supervising his own company training, he was appointed Disciplinary Officer, and also Summary Court for court martial trial of soldiers, and on matters of investigation for Special Courts and General Courts Martial proceedings. In two special combat maneuver problems, Captain Connelly in command of the 2nd Battalion, won the award of the umpires.

Captain Connelly, in charge of a detail of officers and non-coms, left Neufchateau for Soissons, February 3, and reported February 6, to the French at Bois Quincy, in the Chemin-des-Dames Sector, north of Soissons, where the positions were reconnoitered which Company G and the others were to occupy. It is believed that Company G was the first company to report relief completed on entering the lines, February 8. Various positions were occupied here, and at Leuilly, in the Vauxillion Sub-sector, and at Moisey Farm, until March 20, when the Division was withdrawn to vicinity of Rimacourt and St. Blinn for further training and maneuvers. The Division received a sudden call to relieve the 1st Division in the Toul sector, and early in April, the 104th Infantry moved to the La Reine-Boucq Sub-sector. Here, the Major of the 2nd Battalion was sent to the hospital, and Captain Connelly placed in command; the battalion with a company of Engineers leaving in a train of 60 trucks for the town of Vignot, later marching to reserve position at Vertuzey, and then April 6, to Gironville. On the night of April 11, they relieved the 3rd Battalion, 104th Infantry, and Company G occupied a support position in Bois Brule in front of Apremont.

It was here that Captain Connelly and his Company G, 104th Infantry, which included a few Wakefield boys, earned fame, and played a vital part in the battle, which resulted in the decoration of the 104th Infantry; the first American Regiment ever decorated by a foreign power. The Germans, after a very heavy bombardment for hours of gas and high explosive shells, suddenly attacked April 12, with nearly a thousand special storm troops, who had prepared and rehearsed the attack in the back areas. This was the first important attack in force on American troops, and resulted in complete defeat of the German soldiers. At first the Germans met with success, pushing back the French, and rolling back the flanks of the Americans, until Captain Connelly, going forward with his company from a support position, counter-attacked twice, driving back the Germans, and reorganizing the front trench position, and connecting with the French troops. In these attacks, Captain Connelly led his men, and later with 16 of his company was decorated with the Croix-de-Guerre on the field near Boucq, April 28, 1918, at the special military ceremony in which General Passaga decorated the colors of the 104th Infantry with the Croix-de-Guerre. For his gallantry in this action, Captain Connelly received a citation of the 32nd French Army Corps, commanded by General Passaga, and was also awarded a Meritorious United States Army Citation, signed by General Pershing, March 27, 1919.

A special article by William T. Ellis, War Correspondent regarding Captain Connelly's part in this action, appeared in the Saturday Evening Post, dated June 15, 1918, reading as follows, (names and places censored at that time):

"A Wakefield dry-goods merchant---such are the jests democracy cracks at the expense of professional militarism---who is captain of the heterogeneous heroes of---company proved to be possibly the foremost daredevil of a battalion in which there was not a single man to turn 'yellow'.****The Germans were delivering a supposedly irresistible attack, the western drive in miniature.***** When the dry-goods Captain was bidden to go over the top to attack the Germans, he had already been over twice. According to what he had been taught by the books of military science, that captain should have led his men forward through the boyou or communicating trench. It was known, however, that the enemy machine guns dominated this, so stripping off all signs of rank, and with a pistol in his hand, our dry-goods captain cried "To Hell with the Trench! It's over the top boys! He was first over and last back, after the Germans in the front position had been mopped up. I hope the ladies of Wakefield will not hold his unladylike speech and conduct against him when they want to go shopping after the war; for, to tell the worst, that son of Mars repeated his audacious and bloody exploit later on and used still rougher talk."

Sibley, the Boston Globe War Correspondent with the troops, in his history of the 26th Division says:

"Captain Edward J. Connelly of Wakefield was in command of the company.***** When he made the relief before Apremont, he had to take the company over a stretch of road where the shells were falling as thick as in a barrage. There was a hundred yards of it, and it will always remain a mystery how the company got over it at all."

"Captain Connelly led his men in two counter-attacks, and it seemed as if every wounded man who came back to the dressing station was singing his praises. The men could'nt say enough about him; they called him their 'come-on Captain' from then on." Writing regarding the decoration of the 104th Infantry later, Sibley says "Captain Edward J. Connelly of Wakefield, whose company might well have been decorated in a body, was near the head of the line."

To commemorate this achievement of Massachusetts troops, the Commonwealth appropriated $8000 for a Mural Painting which was placed on a wall on the third floor of the State House, in 1927. Major Connelly was one of a committee of five commissioned by Governor Cox in 1926 in charge of this important painting of the decoration of the 104th Infantry, American Expeditionary Forces.

During April, May, and part of June 1918, Captain Connelly and his company was active in positions of resistance at Bouconville, Rambucourt, Xivray, Marvoisin, and Raulecourt in the Toul Sector.

In early June, Captain Connelly was ordered to the First Corps Tactical School, at Gondrecourt, where completing the month's course with high honors, he was selected as tactical instructor, and with five assistants sent to the newly arrived 92nd Division, to aid them in their training for combat service. The Captain was assigned to Headquarters of Brigadier General Barnum, 183rd Brigade at Bourbonne-les-Bain, and remained with him for a short while after the division took over the St. Die sector, near the Swiss border. Here, he was offered a commission as Major by General Barnum, who had been impressed with his work, and who personally went to General Headquarters at Chaumont with the necessary papers.

Because a commission had previously been promised as Major in the 104th Infantry, Captain Connelly, for sentimental reasons, desiring to remain with his own division, declined the commission offered by General Barnum. Ordered back the later part of August, the Captain rejoined the 104th Regiment, as it was moving up in the St. Mihiel Campaign. He was appointed Regimental Inspector by Colonel McCaskey; part of his duties being to make sure that the several columns and trains took the proper roads and directions, and that march discipline was maintained. As the troops had to avoid observation, all the marching was done at night, which required exacting, tiresome all night duty on horseback to see that the columns got concealed before daybreak.

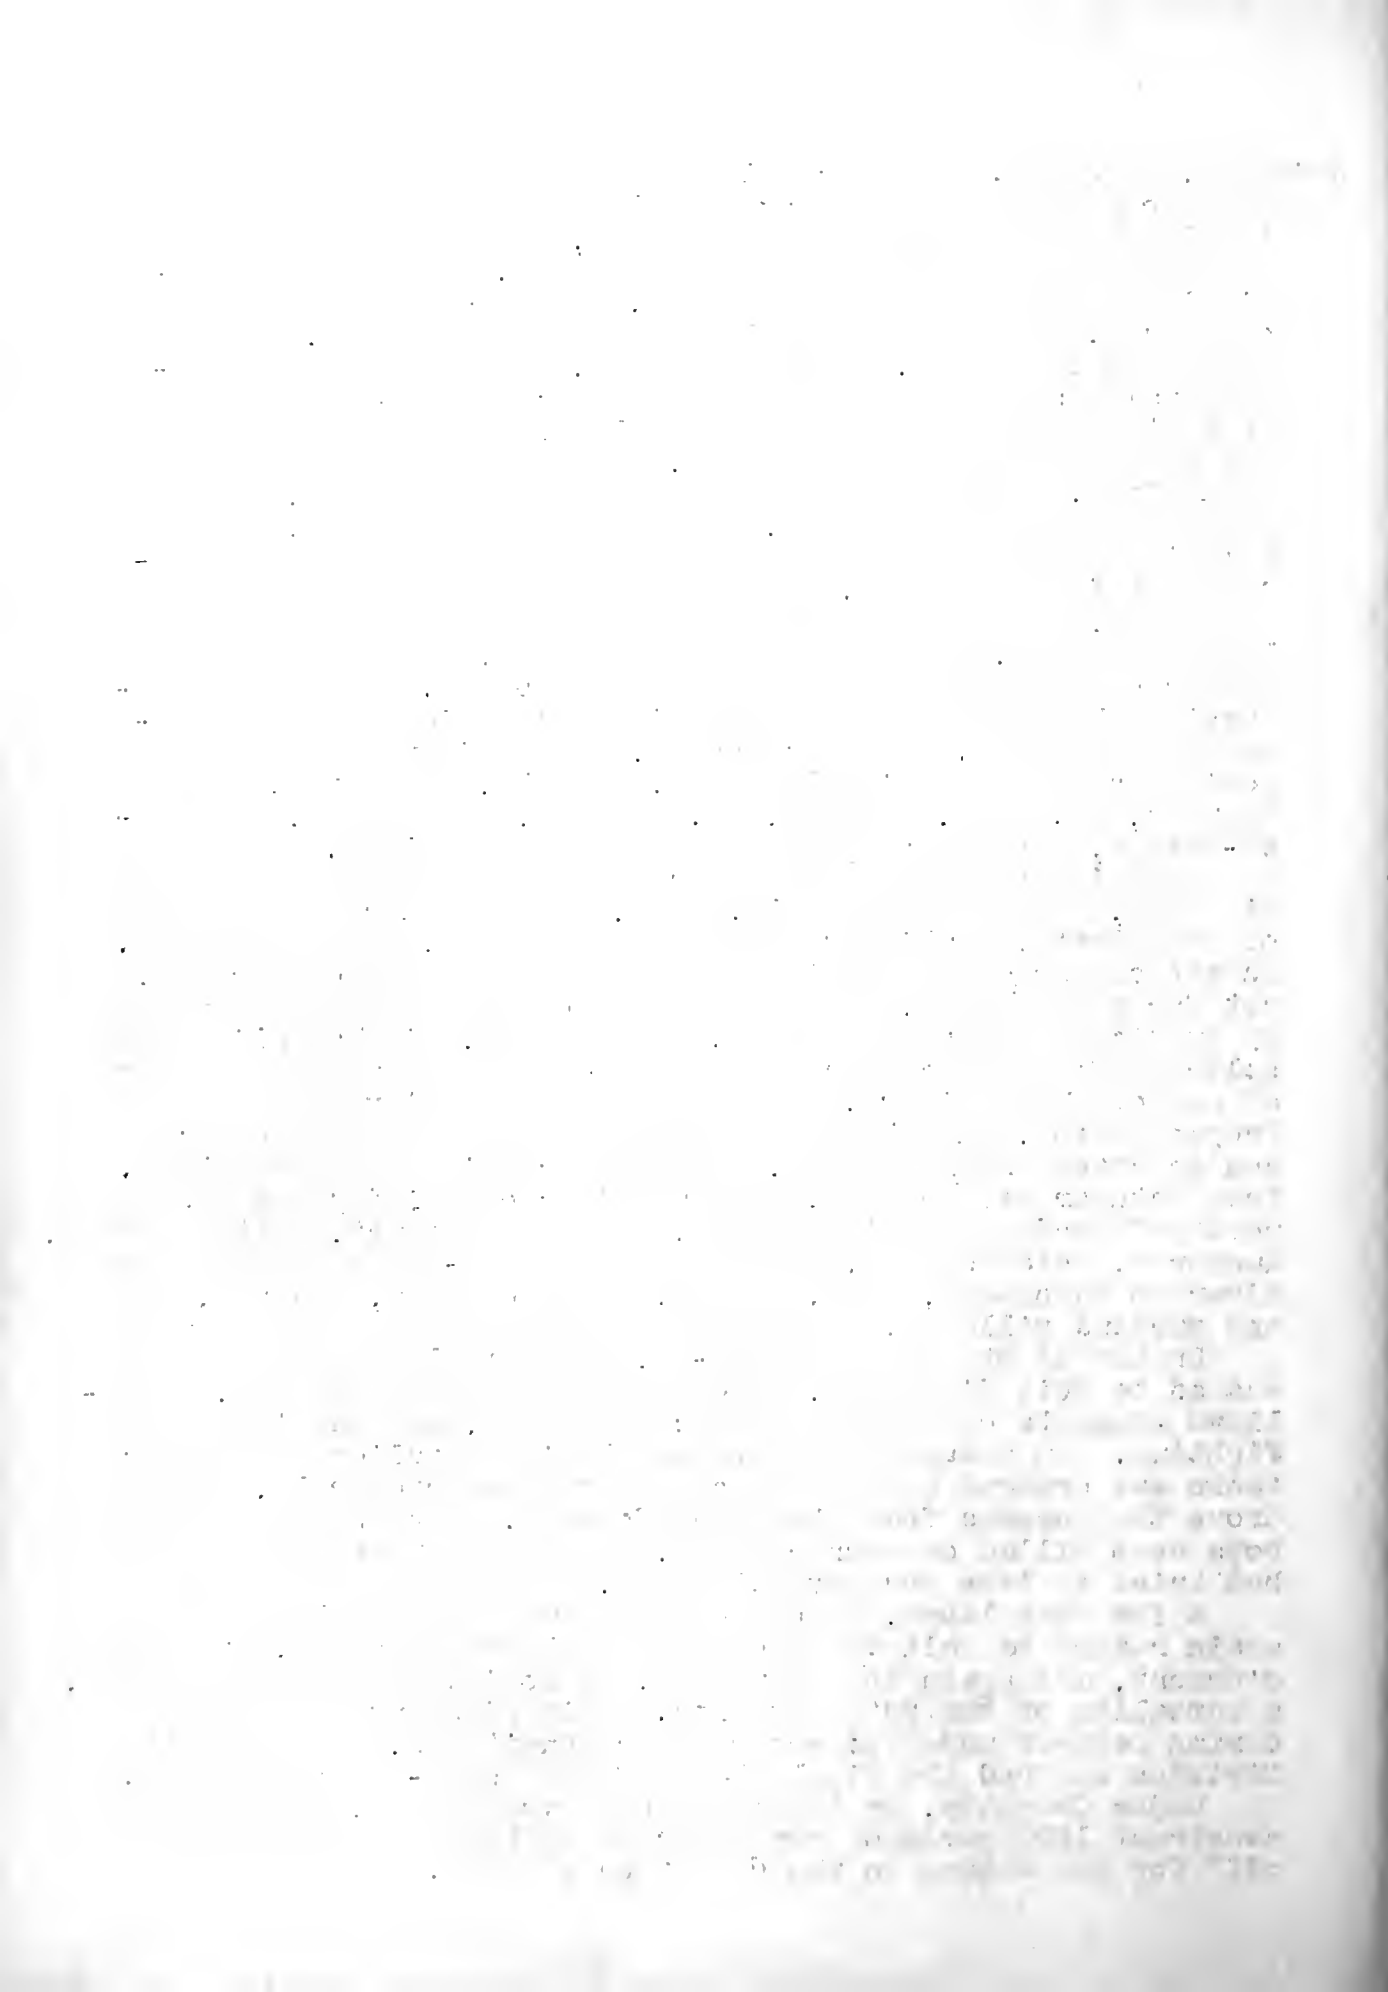

Later, Captain Connelly was appointed Adjutant of the 104th Infantry, taking an important part in the directing of the troops during and after the battle of St. Mihiel and conducting the headquarters and regimental office that controlled the 3700 men. In this sector, the regiment occupied positions at Foret D'Amblonville, Mouilly, Dommartin, Les Aparges, St. Remy, Thillot, St. Maurice, Tresauvaux, Fresnes-en-Woevre, and various villages in this territory.

Captain Connelly finally received the promised commission of Major, dated September 13, 1918, and was placed in command of the First Battalion of the 104th Infantry, September 30th. He was ordered to take his battalion to the town of Recourt, not far from Verdun, to train the troops for the coming attack by American Forces in October. At Recourt, his battalion was selected for a special ceremony in the decorating of a number of men of the Division. The regiment was relieved in the Troyon Sector, and placed with the 17th French Army Corps; concentrated around Verdun, where severe fighting took place. From October 8th to 15th, the battalion occupied positions north of Verdun at Bois Bourrus, Fort Landrecourt, Fort de Marre, Cumieres, Cote de Oise, and crossing and re-crossing the Meuse River to Samogneux, Bras, Charny, Cote de Talou, Brabant, and various villages.

On the night of October 14-15, the battalion was suddenly rushed to Bois d'Haumont, beyond the village of Haumont, to relieve elements of the 18th French Division, engaged in fierce fighting. An attack by Major Connelly's battalion with French tanks was ordered by the French General on October 16, which drove the Germans from the woods forever. A number of Wakefield boys were killed or wounded here, on ground which the French had tried to take for several years.

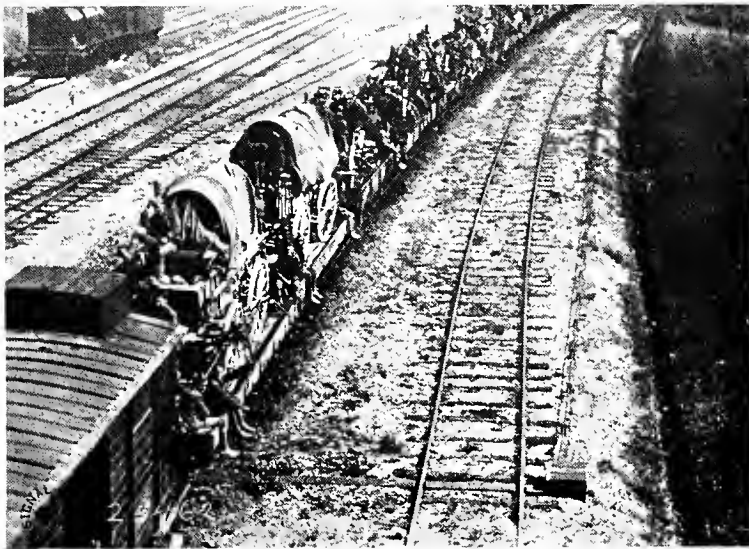

A few days later, Major Connelly and his battalion was again rushed to relieve troops of the 102nd Infantry, at Bois d'Ormont, and again in a few days, to relieve in Bois de Chiene, a battalion of the 29th Division. This fighting continued during October under severe weather conditions, and the 26th Division entered the final phase of the Meuse-Argonne battle.

Major Connelly, on the night of November 7th, was ordered to construct 1000 yards of new trenches to be used in "jumping off" for the attack in the direction of Metz.

On November 9th, he was ordered to be the attacking battalion for the 104th Infantry; protect the left flank of the division, and keep liaison with the 79th Division on the left. Pushing rapidly through Flabas and Moirey, as the Germans fell back, he made steady progress under heavy fire, until the 79th Division was stopped, leaving the flank exposed to severe cross-fire from a hill in the sector of the 79th Division. To protect his own battalion, Major Connelly concentrated all his fire of machine guns and 37 millimeter guns on this hill, which drove the Germans back, and enabled the 79th Division to advance, and make contact with the 26th Division.

November 10th found one of his companies stopped by intense machine gun fire, and the company commander seriously wounded. Major Connelly left his battalion station, and personally led the company forward in the attack, until severely wounded himself in the right arm while making a flanking drive against the town, Ville devant Chaumont.

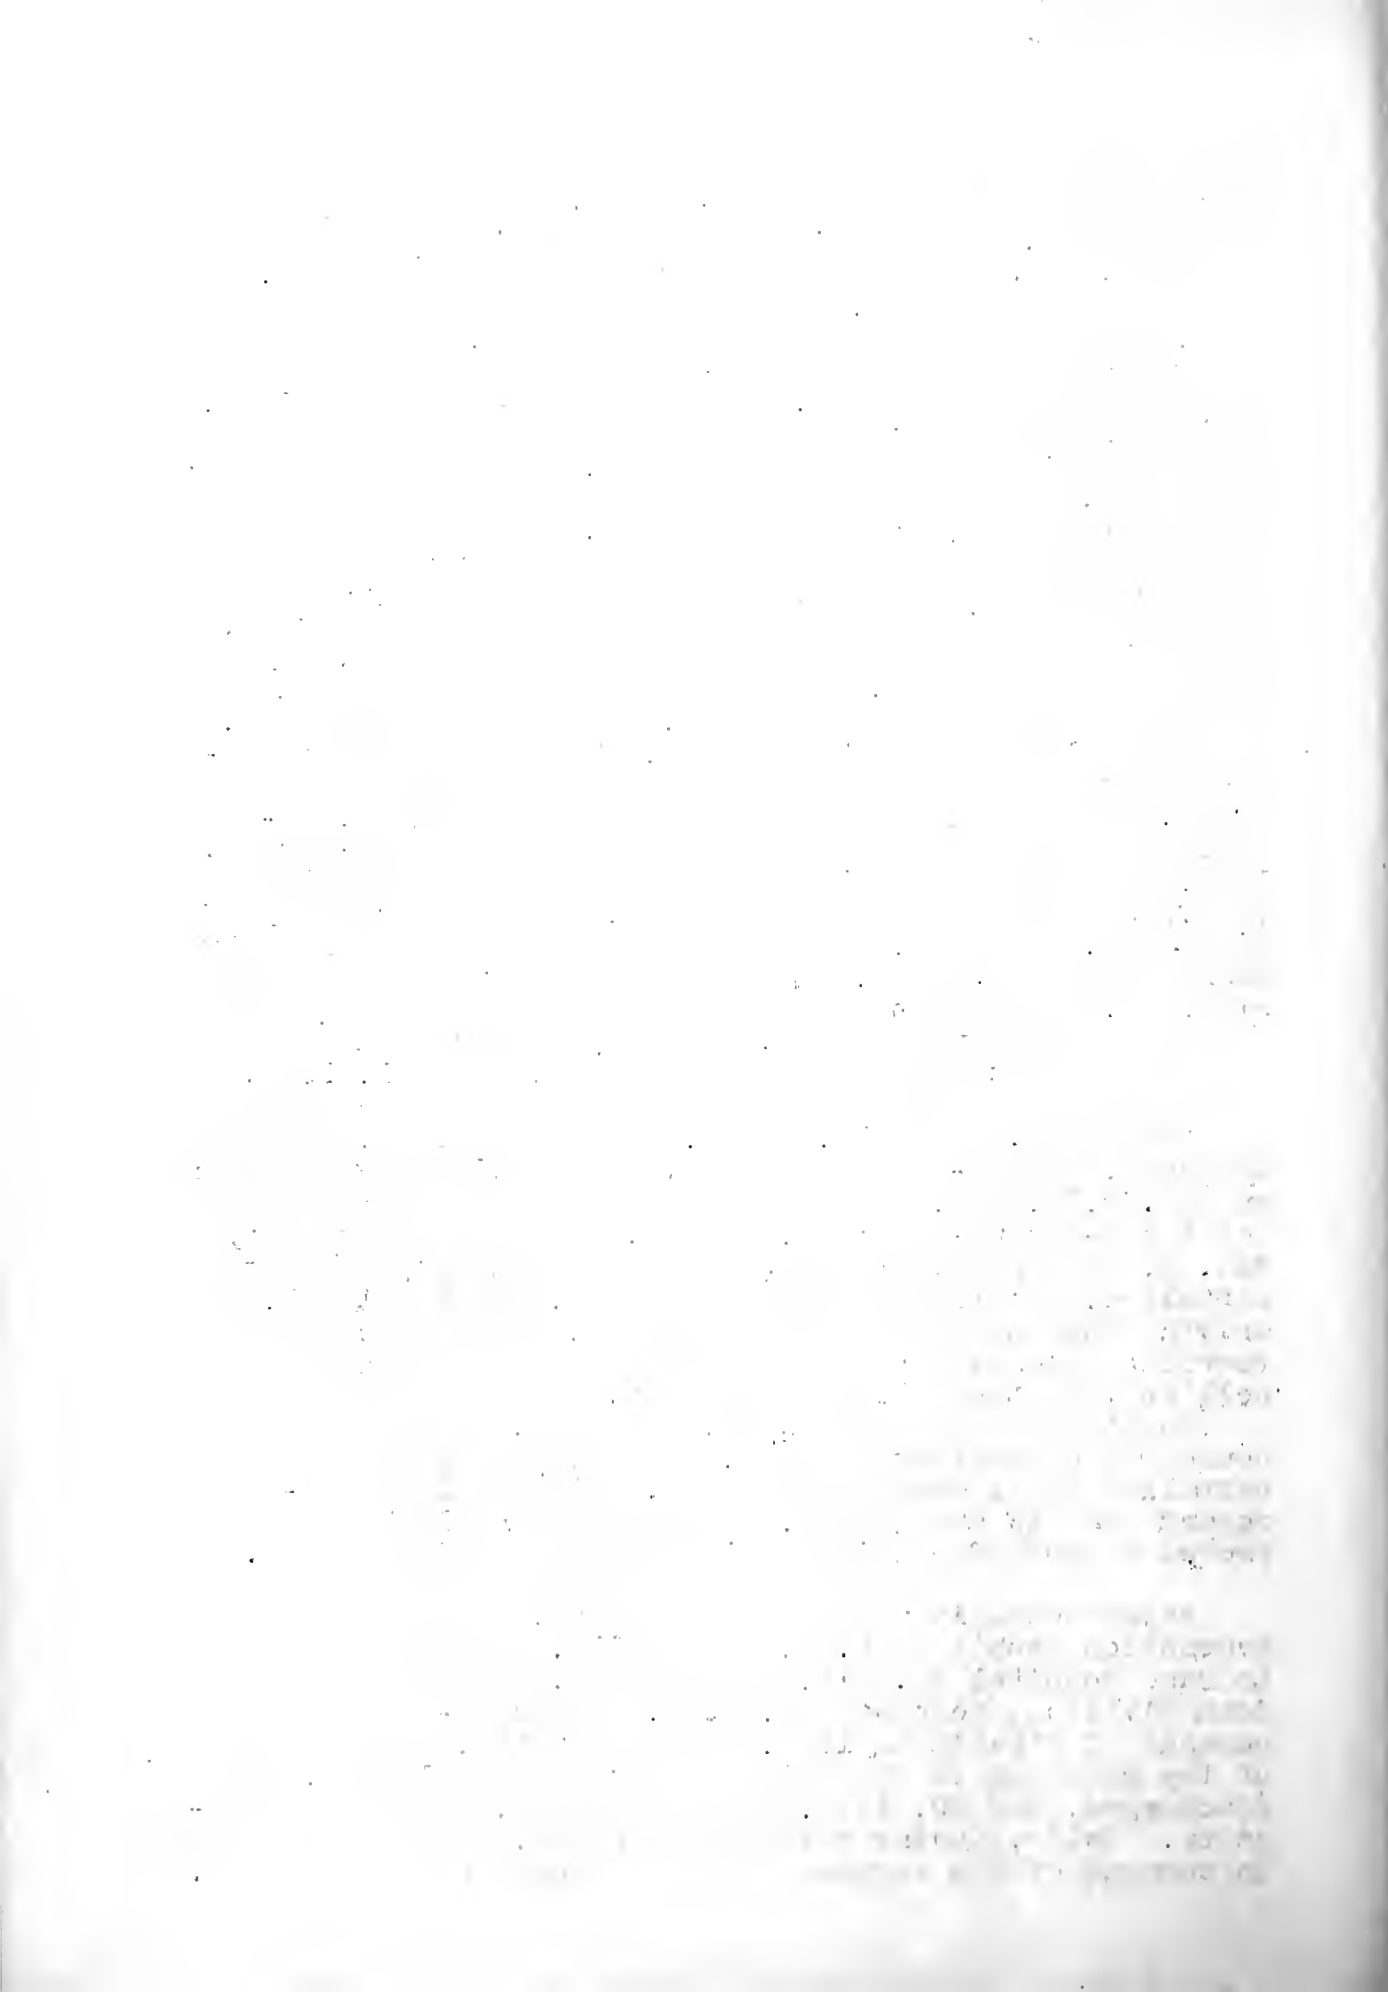

For gallantry in this action, Major Connelly was recommended by his colonel for the Distinguished Service Cross. He was cited in Army Orders, and in 1923, received a Silver Star from the War Department. Later in 1927, he received a Silver Star Citation Certificate from the President of the United States, through Secretary of War Davis. In 1932, Major Connelly was awarded the Silver Star Medal Decoration, with a Gold Cluster for an added citation. The Citation reads:

"Major Edward J. Connelly awarded Silver Star Citation by War Department, March 1, 1927."

"Edward J. Connelly, Major, First Battalion, 104th Infantry, Twenty-Sixth Division. For gallantry in action on Nov. 9, 10, 1918, between Bois D'Haumont and the town of Ville-Devant-Chaumont, France. On the afternoon of Nov. 9, he personally and with great gallantry led his battalion, greatly reduced in numbers, in the attack, driving the enemy back into the town, in the face of terrific machine gun and rifle fire from his front as well as from the hills at his left.

On the Morning of Nov. 10, he again, with splendid courage and devotion to duty, led the advance of his battalion until severely wounded. His complete disregard for his own safety, his courage and leadership, proved a wonderful stimulus to the men of his command."

Major Connelly after being wounded, was sent to Evacuation Hospital No. 7, at Souilly, and the next day to Base Hospital No. 114, at Bordeaux. Returning to the 26th Division, December 22, 1918, he was re-assigned to command of First Battalion, 104th Infantry, until return of the regiment to the United States in April 1919, and discharged, May 20, 1919, at Camp Devens, Ayer, Massachusetts. Twice, during movement to areas, he was temporarily in command of the regiment in the absence of the Colonel.

The Major continued as Regimental Summary Court, after the Armistice, November 11, 1918, and also served on a number of special Boards of Inquiry, Audit, Investigation, etc., and as President of General Court Martial, and as Counsel at General Court Martial.

After the Armistice, the battalion marched to Damartin in the 8th Training area, near Montigny-le-Roy. January 28, 1919, the regiment moved to the Le Mans Embarkation Area, the First Battalion and Headquarters of the 104th, locating at Grande Luce.

Major Connelly was selected as delegate of the 104th Infantry, to represent that organization at the convention in Paris, March 1919, which formed and named the American Legion.

The 26th Division games and tournament were held at Ecommoy, Le Mans Area, in March 1919. Under the personal training and supervision of Major Connelly, Company D of his battalion, won the battalion and regimental competitions for platoons and company, and finally won the Division cup for the 104th, with many points to spare. As the Division comprised 25,000 men, this was a great victory for the Major and the regiment. The Company competition included a road march with full equipment, and this company excelled in endurance, condition and physical appearance. Medals donated by William Filene of Boston were awarded. In the close order drill for platoons, Major Connelly had his platoon commander use a snappy cadence of 128 to the minute which attracted much attention, and was afterward adopted by the Army.

The regiment left this area, March 19, for Brest, preparatory to return to the United States, and camped in tents at Pontenason, Brest, until March 29, 1919, when the troops embarked on the Mt. Vernon, and were assigned quarters by Major Connelly, who was placed in charge of the plan. The regiment arrived at Commonwealth Pier, Boston, April 4, and entrained for Camp Devens, April 5, 1919.

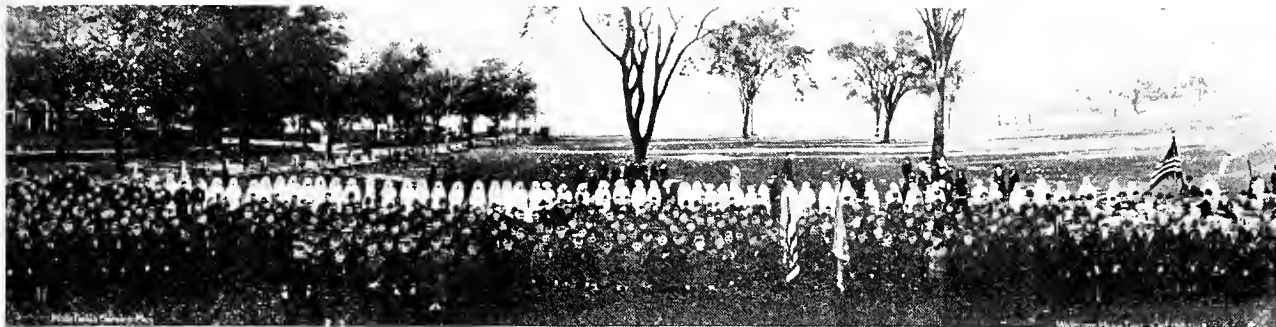

In the big parade of the 26th Division, at Boston, April 25, Major Connelly commanded the 1st Battalion, 104th Infantry. The Major assisted in the demobilization of the troops at Camp Devens, and after the Colonel left, remained to clean up necessary details when the units departed about April 29. He was discharged, May 20, 1919, retiring to civil life to build up his retail business, which needed his attention after two years of World War Service.

During his combat service as an officer, he faced death many times, exposing himself under fire in encouraging his men, but gaining their confidence, knowing he would not order them to go where he would not lead. He was severely gassed several times, but would not leave his men to get hospital treatment. Struck once on his steel helmet with a piece of shrapnel which dented it, hit on one foot by a jagged piece of high explosive shell, (both pieces of which he keeps as souvenirs), showered from head to foot with mud from the burst of a shell a few feet away, shot at by German Snipers, his good fortune stayed with him until the day before the Armistice, when amid a hail of machine gun bullets, he was shot through the right forearm. His many experiences would make interesting reading, if space permitted.

Welcome Home Day on Park, Oct. 13, 1919

Welcome Home Day, Oct. 13, 1919

Major Connelly organized and became the first Commander of Corporal Harry E. Nelson Post No. 63, American Legion, June 1919, in Wakefield?

In 1927, an event of great interest took place at Camp Devens, when on July 14, at the 26th Division review before an immense throng, General Passaga of the French Army decorated five Officers of the old 26th Division with the Legion of Honor for their service in France. Major Connelly was one of the five. This was the same General who accompanied by the same Aid, Captain Gacon, decorated Captain Connelly on the field in France, with the Croix de Guerre, April 28, 1918. The Major was one of the official committee that escorted the General on his visit to Washington.

General Passaga was one of the great heroes in the defense of Verdun against the German drive, while in command of the 32nd French Army Corps, and with whom the 26th Division served in the early part of the American activities in the War.

In recognition of this great honor, the citizens of Wakefield arranged a big outdoor testimonial and parade on September 24, 1927. Exercises and reception were held at the band stand on the park. During this splendid demonstration, Major Connelly was presented with a check and a beautiful oil painting of the actual decoration ceremony that took place at Camp Devens in July.

Thus, in a fitting climax, Wakefield paid a wonderful tribute to its distinguished citizen soldier.

LIEUTENANT EDGAR B. HAWKES.

Company B, 101st Military Police, 26th Division.

Lieutenant Edgar B. Hawkes, son of Adam Augustus B. and Cora Brooks Hawkes, was born in Wakefield, Massachusetts, November 13, 1882. He enlisted in Company A, 6th Regiment, Infantry, Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, at Wakefield, Massachusetts, May 8, 1902, and served continuously until the close of the World War. Enlisting as a Private, he was later promoted to Corporal; to Sergeant; to 1st Sergeant; to Regimental Sergeant Major, and was commissioned 2nd Lieutenant, September 14, 1914. He was actively engaged in the Mexican Border Campaign in 1916 for a period of six months.

When the United States entered the World War, he reported for duty at the Wakefield Armory, March 4, 1917, and on March 8th, he was placed on detached service with Company C, 16th United States Infantry, at El Paso, Texas, to attend the Garrison School for National Guard Officers. On June 1, 1917, he returned to Company A, that was then in training at Camp Darling, Framingham, Massachusetts; later transferred to Camp Devens, Ayer, Massachusetts, where he was mustered into the Federal Service, August 5, 1917; assigned to Headquarters Train, and Company B, 101st Military Police, of the 26th Division, August 18, 1917. He sailed from New York City, August 23, 1917, with an advance group of Officers to make arrangements for billeting of the 26th Division; arrived at Le Havre, France, September 19, 1917. Thus, he has the distinction of being one of the first men of the 26th Division to arrive in France.

Upon his arrival in France, he was sent to St. Nazaire, to await the arrival of the Units of the Division. He was later assigned to the office of Zone Major in the Neufchateau Area, but returned to command Company A, 101st Military Police, December 28, 1917, and was assigned to duty at the front where the 26th Division was to go into the front lines. He remained with the Military Police, until August 23, 1918, and was assigned to the 103rd Infantry, Machine Gun Company, 26th Division. He experienced active service in the Chemin-des-Dames Defensive Sector; Toul, Aisne-Marne, St. Mihiel, and Meuse-Argonne Offensive Sectors.

Lieutenant Hawkes was transferred as Adjutant to the 18th Machine Gun Battalion, 6th Division, March 19, 1919; returning to the United States, June 19, 1919, and was discharged at Camp Grant, Illinois, August 15, 1919.

Lieutenant Hawkes was last known to have been in Sydney, Australia.

MAJOR FRED H. ROGERS
101st Ammunition Train, 26th Division.

Major Rogers, son of Charles H. and Delia H. Rogers, was born in Boston, Massachusetts, April 12, 1880.

He enlisted in Company A, 6th Regiment, Infantry, Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, at Wakefield, Massachusetts, August 19, 1901, and served continuously until the close of the World War. Enlisting as a Private, he was promoted to Corporal in 1902; to Sergeant in 1904; commissioned 2nd Lieutenant, November 22, 1909, and 1st Lieutenant, September 21, 1914. Experienced active service in the Mexican Border Campaign in 1916.

When the United States entered the World War, he reported for duty at the Wakefield Armory, March 30, 1917, and was actively engaged until June 3, 1917 in the recruiting of Company A, 6th Regiment, Infantry, Massachusetts National Guard, to war time strength. He then rejoined Company A, that was in training at Camp Darling, Framingham, Massachusetts; later transferred to Camp Devens, Ayer, Massachusetts; assigned to Company M, 6th Regiment, Infantry, August 28, 1917; to the Officers' Staff, 52nd Infantry Brigade, 26th Division, at Camp Bartlett, Westfield, Massachusetts, as Assistant Camp Quartermaster, September 5, 1917; transferred to the 101st Ammunition Train, 26th Division, September 19, 1917.

He sailed for foreign service from New York City, October 2, 1917; arrived at Liverpool, England, October 7, 1917; later crossed to Le Havre, France, and was billeted at Camp Coetquedon, France. Experienced active service in the Chemin-des-Dames, and Toul Defensive Sector; the Aisne-Marne, Champagne-Marne, St. Mihiel, and Meuse-Argonne Offensive Sectors; commissioned Captain, June 3, 1918; Major, October 7, 1918.

Major Rogers was assigned to the 117th Ammunition Train, 42nd Division, March 15, 1919, serving with the Army of Occupation in Germany until his return from France, July 30, 1919. He was discharged at Camp Devens, Ayer, Massachusetts, August 15, 1919.

The Major, from the date of his enlistment, contributed a great share in maintaining the prestige of the Richardson Light Guard. His interest in the military affairs, his devotion to duty, efficiency as an officer, together with his humanitarian regard for those under his command, won for him honor and respect, in both civil and military authorities.

Major Rogers died September 19, 1935. Military funeral services were held September 22, 1935 at his late residence, 11 First Street, Melrose, Massachusetts, where the Reverend Harold B. Jensen, of the Melrose Baptist Church paid him a fitting tribute. 1. The first part of the paper discusses the importance of the study of the history of the United States. It is argued that a knowledge of the past is essential for a full understanding of the present and for the development of a sound policy for the future. The author points out that the study of history is not only a means of satisfying a natural curiosity about the past, but also a means of developing a sense of responsibility for the future.

1. The first part of the paper is devoted to a general discussion of the problem of the existence of solutions of the system of equations which are satisfied by the functions  $u_i$  and  $v_i$  in the domain  $G$  of the plane. It is shown that the system of equations has a solution in the domain  $G$  if and only if the functions  $f_i$  and  $g_i$  satisfy certain conditions. These conditions are expressed in terms of the integrals of the functions  $f_i$  and  $g_i$  over the domain  $G$ . The proof of the theorem is given in the next section.

2. In the second part of the paper, the problem of the existence of solutions of the system of equations is solved for the case when the domain  $G$  is a rectangle. It is shown that the system of equations has a solution in the domain  $G$  if and only if the functions  $f_i$  and  $g_i$  satisfy certain conditions. These conditions are expressed in terms of the integrals of the functions  $f_i$  and  $g_i$  over the domain  $G$ .

3. In the third part of the paper, the problem of the existence of solutions of the system of equations is solved for the case when the domain  $G$  is a circle. It is shown that the system of equations has a solution in the domain  $G$  if and only if the functions  $f_i$  and  $g_i$  satisfy certain conditions. These conditions are expressed in terms of the integrals of the functions  $f_i$  and  $g_i$  over the domain  $G$ .

4. In the fourth part of the paper, the problem of the existence of solutions of the system of equations is solved for the case when the domain  $G$  is an arbitrary domain. It is shown that the system of equations has a solution in the domain  $G$  if and only if the functions  $f_i$  and  $g_i$  satisfy certain conditions. These conditions are expressed in terms of the integrals of the functions  $f_i$  and  $g_i$  over the domain  $G$ .

"During the combat of April 12, 1918, he displayed remarkable courage and skill in caring for the wounded and dead under violent bombardment."

An interesting account bearing on this event is given in the following excerpt, taken from one of "Nat" Eaton's letters dated April 29, 1918.

"Yesterday was the most eventful day for me since I have been working for Uncle Sam. We started for a parade ground where they were to hold a regimental review before General Edwards and some French Officers. When we arrived there, Captain Connolly and several others from the Company were ordered to file out and line up with about fifty others from different Companies before the whole regiment.

After being moved several times and shaking hands with General Edwards, we had the Croix de Guerre pinned on our blouses by the French General Passaga. The Regimental flag was also decorated, the 104th being the first American regiment to receive that honor from any foreign nation. What pleased me most, was the personal congratulations from General Edwards. Of course, I am pleased personally for having received one."

He was promoted to Sergeant, October 26, 1918, and was wounded in the shoulder when a flare pistol was accidentally discharged in the Meuse-Argonne, November 8, 1918, and spent two months in Base Hospital No. 30 at Royal (Clermont-Ferrand). When the 26th(Yankee) Division was formed at Camp Devens, Ayer, Massachusetts, August 1917, Company A and B of Military Police was organized, composed of selected men from the 6th Regiment Infantry, Massachusetts National Guard, under command of Major W.H. Dolan of the old 6th Regiment. These selected men represented the finest type of American soldiers, possessing the stature and qualities fitting them for this new branch of the service.

Wakefield was well represented, Twenty-nine men, with Lieutenant Hawkes were selected from Company A, for this unit August 21, 1917. The men were assigned to Company A, 101st Military Police and Lieutenant Hawkes was placed on detached service, and sent, as one of an advance party of the Division to France, to make arrangements for the Division soon to arrive.

The Military Police Unit was mobilized at Camp Bartlett, Westfield, Massachusetts, on September 4, 1917, for a course in special training which produced a body of men not surpassed by any Unit in the American Expeditionary Force.

On October 8th 1917, after orders were received to proceed to France, they entrained for Hoboken, New Jersey, and sailed for foreign service from New York City, October 5, 1917, via Halifax, Nova Scotia, where they joined other Units of the 26th Division sailing from Montreal, Canada, and in a convoy of 10 United States Army Transports embarked on the hazardous journey October 11, 1917. Arriving at Liverpool, England, where they spent several days at a rest camp.

On October 29th crossed to Le Havre, France, where they entrained for Neufchateau, the Headquarters and training area of the 26th Division, and were immediately assigned to the duties for which they were organized.

Lieutenant Hawkes who had been on detached service in France was relieved and assigned to command Company A, 101st Military Police, December 28, 1917.

On February 8, 1918, they left Neufchateau for duty on the Soissons front. Training headquarters and Military Police of the 26th Division, established headquarters in Soissons until the Division was relieved March 18, 1918, then the train moved in convoy to the Bar-Sur-Aube Area. After three days, orders came for the Division to proceed to the vicinity of Toul-Sauc. Trains proceeds over the road in convoy carrying as many troops as possible. Company A, Headquarters were established at Sansey, and company B, at Bouc. Here the Military Police functioned entirely separate from the French. Lieutenant Hawkes was detached from his company and went to train headquarters where he was acting adjutant.

In addition to the duties of regular police work, regulating traffic, and preventing unauthorized persons approaching from the rear, the Military Police took over the handling of casual and replacements and also formed a Divisional Disciplinary Detachment to handle men serving sentences for minor offences.

On June 28, 1918 the Division was ordered to the Chateau-Thierry sector to participate in the Aisne-Marne offensive. The Military Police were stationed near Nanteuil-le-Meaux.

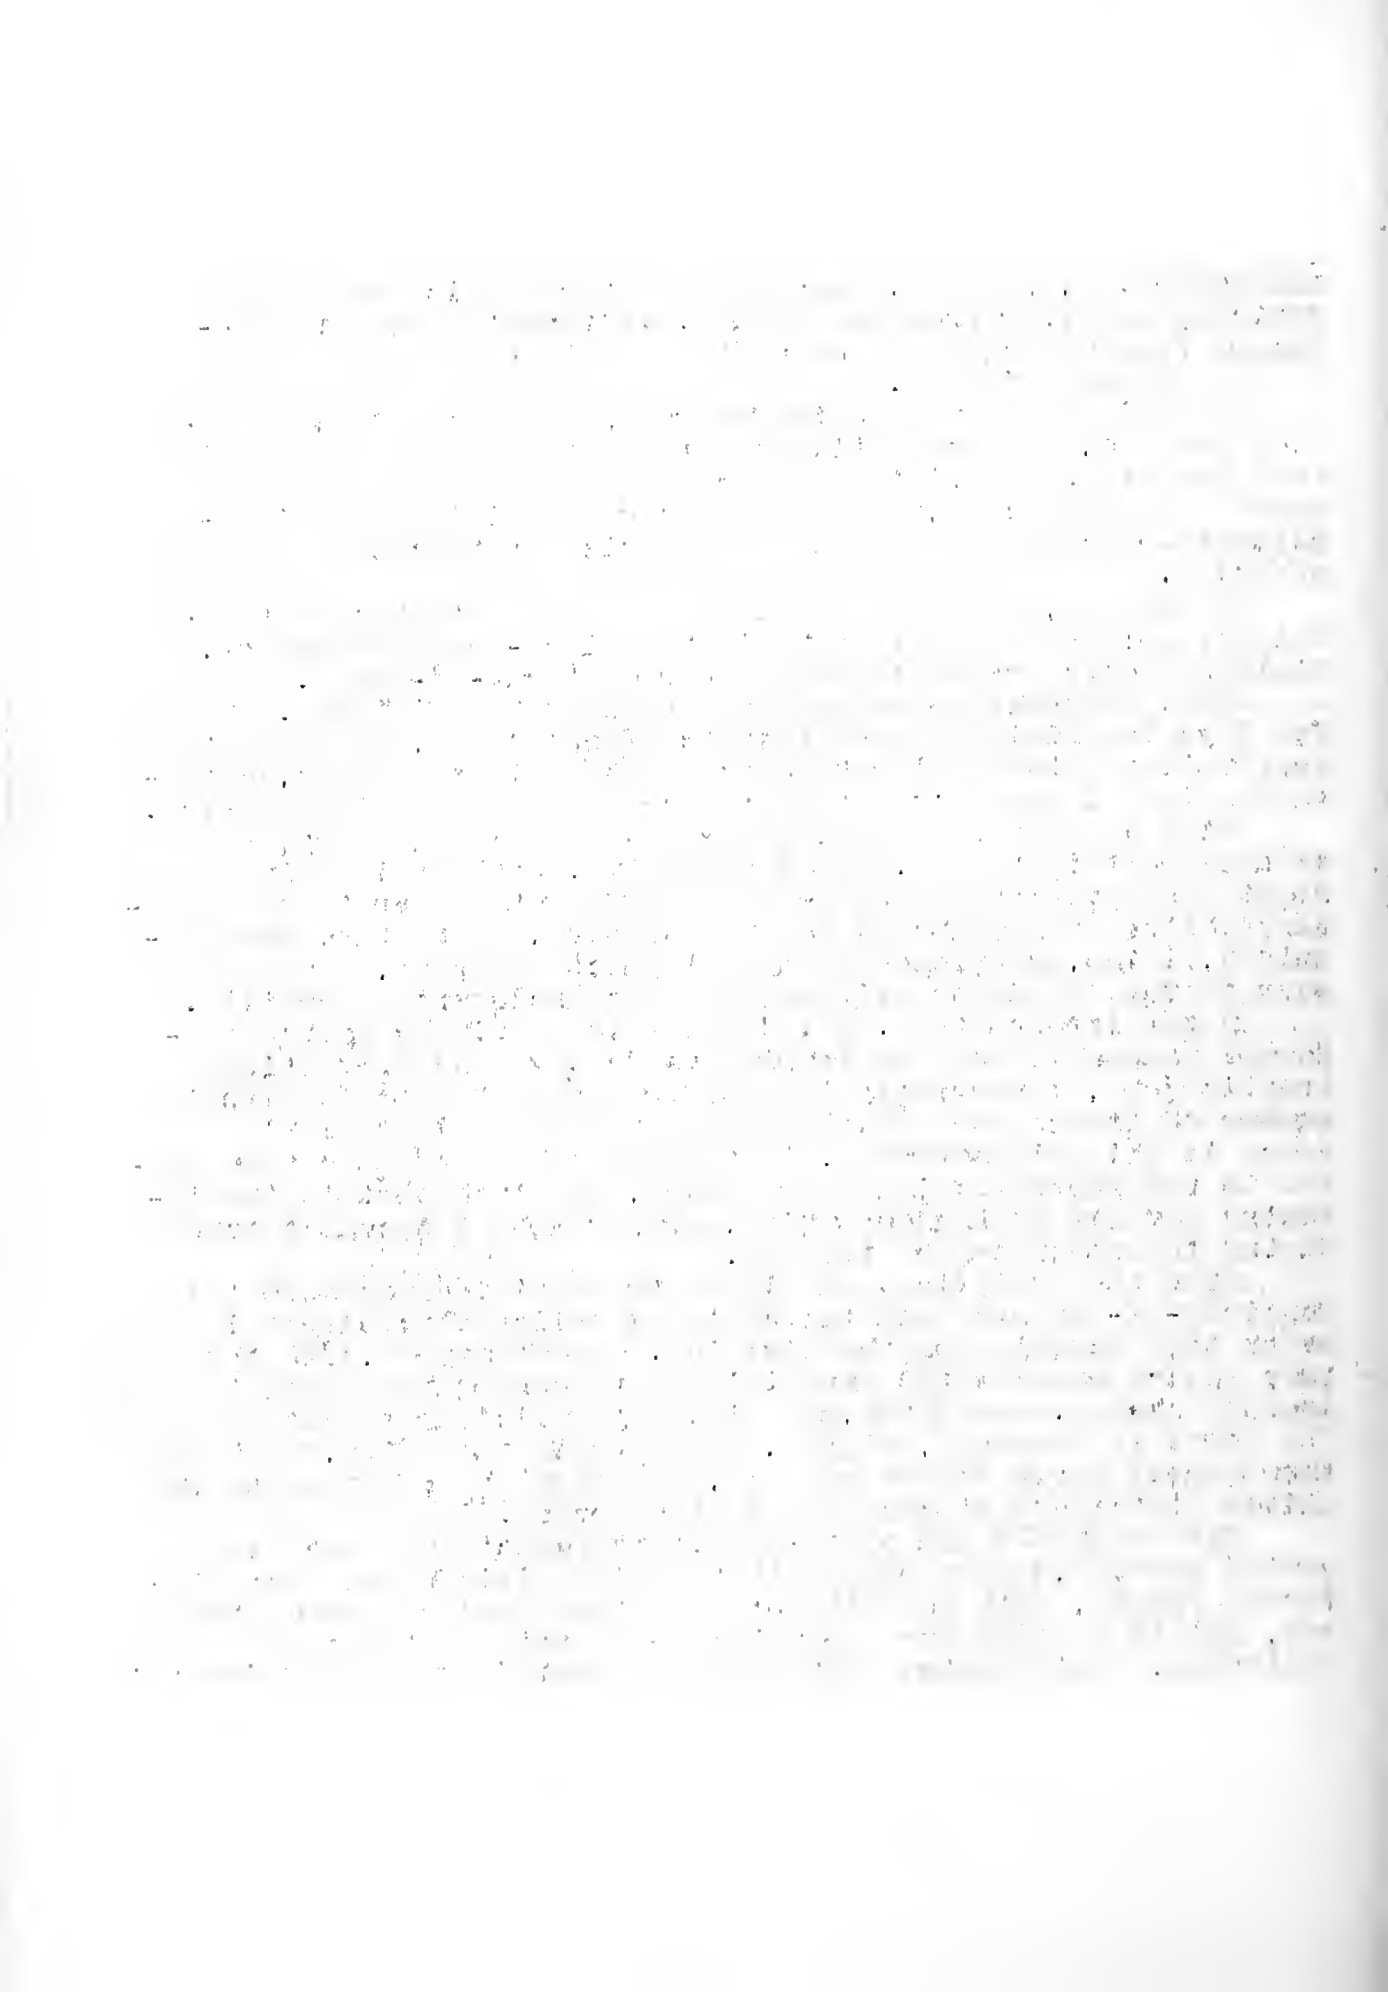

About forty-six towns were occupied by the Division. After a few days the Division went into the front lines, and until they were relieved the Military Police worked night and day, contributing in a large degree to the success of the Division drive.

After a short rest period the Division moved up by train to take part in the St. Mihiel offensive. During this drive about 2400 prisoners were captured and turned over to the Military Police and conducted to headquarters, where they were examined, listed, questioned by intelligence officers, and turned over to the 5th Corps Prisoners of War Enclosure at Souilly.

In the important St. Mihiel drive the Military Police performed wonderful work in keeping roads open and preventing traffic jams, a seemingly impossible task owing to the great number of troops and vehicles which covered all available space in this big movement. Lieutenant Hawkes had been transferred to the 103rd Machine Gun Company, and took part in the infantry advance during the drive, serving with the combat troops during the remainder of the war.

After the Armistice was signed the Division moved to the Montigny-le-Roy area and the Military Police were placed in every town occupied by the Division. On January 28, 1919 the Military Police moved with the Division to embarkation area in and around Hocquigny. Soon after, the Military Police were sent with the 5th Corps to Brussels, Belgium, for duty in that city, remaining there until early summer of 1919, when they were returned to the United States and discharged at Camp Devens.

The Wakefield men of the Military Police therefore had a varied service, having been with the 26th Division on five different fronts, with the 5th Corps in the final stages of the war, and in Belgium for a considerable period after the Armistice. Their duties were highly responsible and carried out in an efficient manner, particularly at cross roads in the battle areas where they were almost always under artillery fire. Their record remains a most creditable one, as recognized in the following citation:

HEADQUARTER 26TH DIVISION AMERICAN EXPEDITIONARY FORCE

---

General Orders
No. 19

France, March 6, 1919

1. The division Commander is pleased to call attention to the efficient, effective, and enthusiastic work of all officers and men connected with the 26th Military Police Company throughout their service in France, and to cite this organization in General Orders.

2. The Military Police of this division, by their intelligent control of traffic, especially on those roads in the forward areas of sectors on the Western Front occupied by this division during the past year, and along the routes of supply which were frequently under heavy shell fire, almost always congested by columns, horse-drawn and motor, bringing up supplies of food and munition, and marching bodies of re-enforcements, have played a tremendous part in the magnificent success of the Yankee Division's operations.

3. This organization, as well as many of the individuals comprising it, has repeatedly been subject of favorable comment and report by officers of the American force and those of our allies. By the efficient performance of their various duties and their courageous, courteous, and soldierly bearing, they have called attention to themselves as representing the finest type of the American fighting man and have been a great credit to the 26th Division.

UNITED STATES ARMY,NAVY,MARINE
AND

Although Company "A", 6th Regiment formed the nucleus of Military Organization in Wakefield during the World War, and the greater percentage of men in the Company were from the town of Wakefield, we are also reminded that a larger number of our young men and women, entered the service of the United States Army, Navy, Marine, and Nurse Corps, who also made up a part of the militant force of the United States during the War.

Many had enlisted in other branches of the service, some had returned to their native country to serve in part with the Allied Armies of the World, in the Great War.

At the request of President Woodrow Wilson, Congress on April 28, 1917, passed an act for selective service, for the purpose of raising an army of 500,000 men, and by June 5, 1917, 10,000,000 men in the United States had registered for selective service.

Many of our young men were chosen in the new National Army, and were assigned to various Regiments and Divisions, received training in numerous camps throughout the country, and great numbers experienced active service with the American Expeditionary Forces in France.

DEPARTURE OF DRAFTED MEN.

Because of the fact that the departure of the young men inducted into the National Army was at irregular intervals, and at inconvenient hours, it was not possible for the citizens to arrange a Military parade, or a fitting demonstration in their honor. On October 5, 1917, however, several hundred people gathered at Town Hall to listen to the brief addresses, and to say goodbye to Wakefield's Contingent leaving for Camp Devens, Ayer, Massachusetts. Words of good cheer and appreciation were spoken by Town Counsel Maynard E.S. Clemons, a member of the Exemption Board, Chairman John J. Round of the Board of Selectmen, Mayor Adams of Melrose, Massachusetts, and Commander J. Warren Poland of Post 12 G.A.R.

Dr. Curtis L. Sopher presented each man with one of the sweaters provided by the Committee on Public Safety. At Melrose each man was given a khaki testament, and a card of introduction to the Y.M.C.A. Headquarters at Ayer, the gift of the Wakefield and Melrose Associations.

The inspiring message of President Wilson in regard to those inducted into service fittingly expressed the sentiment of the Nation by saying in part:

..... "You are undertaking a great duty. The heart of the whole Nation is with you, because you are in some special sense the soldiers of freedom. Let it be your pride therefore to show all men everywhere, not only what good soldiers you are, but also what good men you are."

At the conclusion of the exercises the boys were conveyed in automobile to Melrose where they joined the Contingent from that city.

A number of Wakefield citizens accompanied the men to Melrose, and the Italian Band offered their service and played inspiringly. Post 12 G.A.R. sent a delegation comprising Commander J. Warren Poland, Adjutant George H.S. Driver, William J. Mansfield, Stanley B. Deaborn, Thomas Madden, John Shea, and Isaac H. Mitchell. The Veterans of Post 12, G.A.R. took their colors and marched in the parade with their comrades of Post 4, G.A.R. of Melrose from the City Hall to the Station. Farewells were said, and the boys left with the best wishes of their townsmen.

The 76th Division was organized at Camp Devens, Ayer, in September 1917, under the leadership of Major General Harry F. Hodges, commanding General, and Colonel Merck B. Stewart, Chief of Staff.

With a personnel of regular army officers and newly commissioned reserve officers, the drafted men were received and thus came into existence the National Army.

Many of our Wakefield men had their the first army experience in the 76th Division, learning the tactics of modern warfare with its manifold methods of destruction.

Like other National Army Divisions, the 76th was a huge Military Unit, where men from all walks of life were assembled, equipped, trained, and regimented into a fighting unit.

This Division sailed for foreign service July 16, 1918, arrived in London, England, August 8, 1918 and later crossed the English Channel from Southampton, to Le Havre, France, and was billeted at Camp De Souge for further training.

It was destined according to Orders from General Headquarters, to become a Depot Division. Up to this time the men of the 76th Division were proud of its record. Now the fighting machine was to be broken up, and as casualties occurred at the front, these men were used as replacements in other Division.

STUDENT ARMY TRAINING CORPS

The Student Army Training Corps, was instituted by the National Government as an adjunct of the United States Army. The personnel of the Corps was composed of young men in college life, who were urged by the National Government to continue their educational program, and at the same time to pursue Military Training under instruction of trained Military Officers. Hours for drill were set aside, so as not interfere with their college activities. These young men formed a splendid unit, and willingly devoted their time and energy in developing in what would have become without doubt, a valuable branch of our National Army. There is a little doubt that had the war continued most of these men would have seen service overseas.

The State's quota was 4,000 men, and many Wakefield young men were members of the Corps. They were regularly recognized soldiers before the armistice was signed, and therefore entitled to a place in the roll of Wakefield men who were in service in the Great War.

A large number in the different Branches of the Service sorely against their will, were not permitted to serve overseas but did their share in this country with splendid constancy and ability, and not only men, but also the young women of the town of Wakefield had a record during the War that was unmistakably patriotic and effective and in many cases heroic.

Many of our young men of the National Army upheld the hopes and traditions expected of them by nobly accepting the sufferings and the horrors of war, and by making the supreme sacrifice on the field of battle.

NURSE-CORPS

The women who volunteered as nurses were called upon to render heroic service at home, as well as overseas, and their self-sacrifice, courage and fortitude, was equal to that displayed by the men. Their long and trying hours of hardship in the hospitals, and on the field, merited the greatest praise from their superior officers, and the Government which they served. Many of these women were frequently under fire from the enemy while performing duty, without any thought for their own safety. They rendered invaluable service to the maimed and wounded, and comforted the dying until the end.

Wakefield had many women in this branch of the service, of whom we are proud, and we narrate their record with gratitude.

several occasions were followed by enemy barrages, several cars being hit. At Blanzky and Merval they were subjected to heavy artillery fire and showed splendid courage in their work. In the first phase of the Argonne operations, they were without exception the first transportation of any kind over the roads when they were opened up. The whole section showed exceptional coolness and highest courage and were an example of valorous conduct. They rendered invaluable service to the Division and by their work, undoubtedly saved the lives of many men."

1. The purpose of this document is to provide a comprehensive overview of the current status of the project and to identify the key areas that require further investigation and development.

2. The project has been initiated in order to address the growing need for a more efficient and secure system. The initial phase of the project has involved a thorough analysis of the existing system and the identification of the key areas that require improvement.

3. The results of the initial analysis have shown that the existing system is outdated and inefficient. It is therefore necessary to develop a new system that is more secure and efficient than the current one.

4. The new system will be developed in a modular fashion, allowing for the integration of new features and the replacement of existing ones as needed. This will ensure that the system remains up-to-date and secure.

1. The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that proper record-keeping is essential for the integrity of the financial system and for the ability to detect and prevent fraud. The text also mentions the need for regular audits and the role of independent auditors in ensuring the reliability of the data.

2. The second part of the document focuses on the challenges faced by organizations in implementing effective internal controls. It highlights the complexity of modern business environments and the need for a robust framework of controls to manage risks. The text suggests that organizations should adopt a risk-based approach to internal control design and implementation, focusing on the most significant risks to the organization's objectives.

3. The third part of the document discusses the importance of transparency and accountability in financial reporting. It notes that stakeholders, including investors, creditors, and the public, rely on the information provided in financial statements to make informed decisions. The text stresses the need for organizations to provide clear, concise, and reliable information, and to be held accountable for the accuracy of their reports.

4. The fourth part of the document addresses the role of technology in improving financial reporting and internal control systems. It discusses how digital tools and automation can enhance the efficiency and accuracy of data collection and processing. The text also mentions the importance of ensuring that technology is used securely and that data is protected from unauthorized access and manipulation.

5. The fifth part of the document discusses the importance of ongoing monitoring and evaluation of internal control systems. It notes that internal controls are not static and must be regularly reviewed and updated to reflect changes in the organization's operations and the external environment. The text suggests that organizations should establish a process for continuous improvement, involving all levels of the organization in the identification and remediation of control deficiencies.

6. The sixth part of the document discusses the importance of a strong corporate culture in supporting effective internal control systems. It notes that a culture of integrity, honesty, and accountability is essential for the successful implementation of internal controls. The text suggests that organizations should invest in training and communication programs to foster a positive culture and ensure that all employees understand their role in maintaining the integrity of the financial system.

7. The seventh part of the document discusses the importance of external oversight and regulation in ensuring the integrity of the financial system. It notes that external bodies, such as regulatory agencies and standard-setting organizations, play a crucial role in establishing and enforcing the rules that govern financial reporting and internal control. The text suggests that organizations should cooperate with these bodies and ensure that they are up-to-date with the latest regulatory requirements.

8. The eighth part of the document discusses the importance of international harmonization of financial reporting standards. It notes that the lack of consistency in accounting practices across different countries can create barriers to cross-border investment and trade. The text suggests that international efforts to harmonize standards, such as those undertaken by the International Accounting Standards Board (IASB), are essential for the global financial system to function effectively.

1. The first part of the paper discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that proper record-keeping is essential for the success of any business or organization. The author provides a detailed overview of the various methods used to collect and analyze data, highlighting the strengths and weaknesses of each approach. The discussion is supported by numerous examples and case studies, which illustrate the practical application of these techniques in real-world scenarios.

2. The second part of the paper focuses on the challenges faced by researchers in this field. It identifies several key areas where further research is needed, including the development of more sophisticated statistical models and the integration of qualitative and quantitative data. The author also discusses the importance of interdisciplinary collaboration, arguing that the most significant advances in the field will come from the combined efforts of experts from different disciplines. This section concludes with a list of recommendations for future research, which are designed to guide the work of other scholars in the field.

3. The third part of the paper presents a series of conclusions based on the findings of the study. It summarizes the main points of the research, highlighting the key insights that have been gained. The author also discusses the implications of these findings for practice, arguing that the results of the study have important implications for the way in which data is collected and analyzed in a variety of contexts. This section ends with a final statement about the importance of continued research in this field, and a call to action for other researchers to build on the work presented in this paper.

4. The final part of the paper is a brief summary of the main points of the research. It provides a concise overview of the key findings and conclusions, and highlights the most important areas for future research. The author also includes a list of references, which provides a detailed overview of the literature that has been consulted in the course of the research. This section is designed to provide a clear and concise summary of the paper, and to make it easy for other researchers to find the information they need.

1. The first part of the paper discusses the importance of the study of the history of the United States. It is argued that a knowledge of the past is essential for a full understanding of the present and for the development of a sound policy for the future. The author points out that the study of history is not only a means of satisfying a natural curiosity about the past, but also a means of training the mind in the habits of logical and critical thinking.

2. The second part of the paper discusses the various methods of historical research. It is pointed out that the historian must be able to use a variety of sources, including books, documents, and artifacts. The author also discusses the importance of the historian's own judgment and the need for a sound knowledge of the language and customs of the period being studied. The author concludes that the study of history is a most interesting and profitable pursuit, and that it is one that should be encouraged in all schools and colleges.

3. The third part of the paper discusses the various schools of thought in the history of the United States. It is pointed out that there have been many different views as to the causes of the American Revolution, the role of the individual in history, and the nature of the American government. The author discusses the views of the Federalists, the Jeffersonians, and the Jacksonians, and points out that each of these groups had its own set of principles and its own view of the future of the United States. The author concludes that the study of the history of the United States is a most interesting and profitable pursuit, and that it is one that should be encouraged in all schools and colleges.

Order No. 12232 "D" (Extract)

General Headquarters of the French Armies of the East,
General Staff.

Personal Bureau (Decorations)

Upon arrival of the General Commander-in-Chief of the American Expeditionary Forces in France, the Field Marshall of France, Commander-in-Chief of the French Armies of the East, cites from the order of the First Army.

Company "C" 56 Search Light Regiment of American Engineers.

Placed at the disposal of the Anti-Air Craft
Defence of the First Army, from May to October
1918, Company "C" under the commands of Captain Bryan and of Captain Young, has made itself worthy of mention under all circumstances for bravery and for the excellent training and enthusiasm of its personnel, always placed by the explicit request of its leader, in the more exposed regions, it has at all times obtained the best results despite the losses suffered from the Artillery and the Aircraft of the enemy.

At the General Headquarters, the 10th of December 1918.

Le Marshall.

Commander-in-Chief of the French Armies of the East.

1. The first part of the paper discusses the importance of the study of the history of the United States. It is argued that a knowledge of the past is essential for a full understanding of the present and for the development of a sound policy for the future. The author points out that the study of history is not only a means of satisfying a natural curiosity about the past, but also a means of developing a sense of responsibility for the future.

The first part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the general principles of the theory of the structure of the atom. It is shown that the structure of the atom is determined by the laws of quantum mechanics, which are based on the principle of the uncertainty of the position and momentum of the particles. The second part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the structure of the nucleus. It is shown that the structure of the nucleus is determined by the laws of quantum mechanics, which are based on the principle of the uncertainty of the position and momentum of the particles.

The third part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the structure of the molecule. It is shown that the structure of the molecule is determined by the laws of quantum mechanics, which are based on the principle of the uncertainty of the position and momentum of the particles. The fourth part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the structure of the crystal. It is shown that the structure of the crystal is determined by the laws of quantum mechanics, which are based on the principle of the uncertainty of the position and momentum of the particles.

The fifth part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the structure of the liquid. It is shown that the structure of the liquid is determined by the laws of quantum mechanics, which are based on the principle of the uncertainty of the position and momentum of the particles. The sixth part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the structure of the gas. It is shown that the structure of the gas is determined by the laws of quantum mechanics, which are based on the principle of the uncertainty of the position and momentum of the particles.

The seventh part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the structure of the plasma. It is shown that the structure of the plasma is determined by the laws of quantum mechanics, which are based on the principle of the uncertainty of the position and momentum of the particles. The eighth part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the structure of the solid. It is shown that the structure of the solid is determined by the laws of quantum mechanics, which are based on the principle of the uncertainty of the position and momentum of the particles.

The ninth part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the structure of the liquid crystal. It is shown that the structure of the liquid crystal is determined by the laws of quantum mechanics, which are based on the principle of the uncertainty of the position and momentum of the particles. The tenth part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the structure of the polymer. He sailed from New York, January 20, 1917; arrived at Liverpool, England, January 29, 1917, where he was assigned as 1st Lieutenant, in the Royal Army Medical Corps, at the 3rd Southern General Hospital, Oxford, England, February 1, 1917, and was promoted to Captain, Royal Army Medical Corps, in August of 1917. He was called into the United States Army, Medical Corps, from the United States Army Officers Reserve Corps, as 1st Lieutenant, on November 5, 1917, and joined the American Expeditionary Forces in France, where he was detached to the 55th Field Ambulance Corps, Royal Army Medical Corps at Compiègne, to March 1918. Promoted to Captain, and later assigned to the United States 58th Casualty Clearing Station, British Expeditionary Forces, March 9, 1918, at Noyon. In the German Offensive, starting March 20, 1918, he took part in the rout and retreat of the allied armies from March 24, to April 10, 1918, covering 65 miles to Amiens, receiving a machine gun wound. On April 12th, 1918, he was detached to the 18th Divisional Ammunition Column, British Expeditionary Forces, at Bores, and also with the Allied forces in the advance, beginning August 8, 1918, which resulted in the capture of the Hindenburg line the following month, and the march through Alket, le Cateau, Avesnes, and ending at Mons, in Belgium, Armistice Day, November 11, 1918. He made many air flights, including three night bombing raids to Zeeburgge and Ostend. His experiences were undoubtedly among the most thrilling and memorable of any Wakefield man in service. Captain Simonds sailed from Brest, France, May 16, 1919; arrived at Hoboken, New Jersey, May 24, 1919, and received his discharge, at Camp Devens, Ayer, Massachusetts, August 20, 1919. Dr. Simonds, experienced some of the hardest fighting of the war, and, as a Surgeon, attached to the British Expeditionary Forces, he performed many operations. Returning from France, he entered private practice in Wakefield, where he died, December 2, 1922. A fitting tribute to the memory of Dr. Frederick A. Simonds, War Surgeon and Physician, was paid at the Universalist Church, Tuesday afternoon, December 5, 1922, when more than 300 soldier comrades, relatives and friends, gathered in that edifice at his funeral services. Reverend Warren S. Perkins, Pastor, observed, "that he was not young when his life was measured in terms of achievement and service to his fellowman. Although but 34 years old, he has given greater service than many who have lived the Scriptural allotment of years." A Military escort from Corporal Harry E. Nelson Post #63, American Legion, and the H. M. Warren Post #12, Grand Army of the Republic, accompanied the body from his home to the church.

SIMONDS, DR. FREDERICK A. Captain (continued)

Immediately following the eulogy, Commander J. Warren Poland, speaking for the Veterans of an earlier war, reverently placed upon Dr. Simond's breast a tiny silk American Flag. Burial was in the family lot at Lakeside Cemetery, Wakefield, Massachusetts; full Military Honors were paid, firing three volleys, and the sounding of taps by a squad furnished by Company F, 101st Engineers of Stoneham, Massachusetts. He is survived by his parents: Harry A. and Nellie Simonds, and a brother, Clyde M. Simonds, of 10 Charles Street, Wakefield, Massachusetts.

The following citation signed by General John J. Pershing, Commander in Chief of the American Forces, follows:

"Captain Paul H. Taylor (at that time 1st Lieutenant) is praised: "For especially meritorious service as Commanding Officer 101st Mobile Ordnance Repair Shop, operating with the 26th Division throughout the campaign. He personally inspected the divisional artillery Material frequently under hostile shell fire. Through his energy, foresight, capable management, and excellent judgement, his organization accomplished not only its regularly prescribed duties, but rendered valuable assistance in the maintenance of the corps artillery, and tractors, and of the horse drawn vehicles of the 26th Division, other than Ordnance Vehicles. The methods devised by this Officer, have been a valuable contribution to those which were later prescribed for the operation of mobile Ordnance repair shops."

He was also cited while in France by Major General Clarence R. Edwards.

1. The first part of the document is a letter from the President of the United States to the Congress, dated January 3, 1862. It is a very long letter, and it contains a great deal of information about the state of the country at that time. It is a very important document, and it is one of the most interesting documents in the collection.

1. The first of these is the fact that the majority of the population of the United States is now living in urban areas. This is a result of the process of urbanization, which has been going on since the beginning of the 20th century. The process of urbanization is the movement of people from rural areas to urban areas. This movement is caused by a number of factors, including the search for better living conditions, the desire for education, and the need for employment. The process of urbanization has led to the growth of large cities and the decline of small towns. This has had a number of effects on the United States, including the concentration of wealth and power in urban areas, the loss of rural life, and the development of a new urban culture.

UNITED STATES NAVY

AND

MARINE CORPS

During January, February and March 1917, the Germans were sinking more than 500,000 tons of British shipping each month, which was more than possible replacement, and would have compelled Britain to lay down her arms and sue for peace, had not America thrown her energy and resources against the Germans by entering the War. In April, Admiral Sims, and Admiral Jellicoe, worked out a plan to reduce the loss of British shipping tonnage to a point that replacement would more than offset the loss.

In February 1917, the U-Boat menace had assumed serious consequences, because the first three months of their activities, 1000 ships of all classes had been sunk, including 470 ocean going vessels, which meant that one of every four ships leaving the United Kingdom for an ocean voyage, was lost. The American Navy was called upon to render herculean performance in transporting men, supplies, and war materials to France; and was responsible for upsetting the well-laid plans of the Germans, by maintaining an unbroken chain of communications which was necessary to bring and sustain reinforcements to the Allies. The conveying of troopships transporting more than 300,000 men in one month, with no appreciable loss, proved the importance of the Navy.

The Marine Corps is the oldest branch of the Military organizations of the United States, and it has always been a well trained, and very efficient body of the Navy.

These Sea Soldiers, were among the first of the American Expeditionary Force to get into action in France, where they displayed remarkable precision and bravery in all of their engagements, the most outstanding being the repulse of the Prussian Guards, at Belleau Wood, June 10, 1918 and at Chateau Thierry, July 10, 1918.

Many Wakefield boys enlisted in these two branches of the service, and their activities in the performance of their duties is interesting to relate.

The first part of the paper discusses the importance of the study of the history of the United States. It is pointed out that the study of history is not only a means of understanding the past, but also a means of understanding the present and the future. The author argues that the study of history is essential for the development of a nation and for the well-being of its people.

The second part of the paper discusses the role of the government in the development of the United States. It is pointed out that the government has played a major role in the development of the country, and that its actions have shaped the course of American history. The author argues that the government should continue to play a role in the development of the country, and that its actions should be guided by the principles of justice and fairness.

The third part of the paper discusses the role of the individual in the development of the United States. It is pointed out that the actions of individuals have shaped the course of American history, and that the individual has a responsibility to contribute to the development of the country. The author argues that the individual should strive to be a good citizen, and that his or her actions should be guided by the principles of justice and fairness.

5th Marine Citation ORDER OF THE ARMY

The 4th American Brigade commanded by Brigadier General James G. Harbord.

Including: The 5th Regiment of Marines
Commanded by Colonel Wendell C. Neville,

The 6th Regiment of Marines
Commanded by Colonel Albertus W. Catlin,

The 6th Battalion, Machine Gun Company
Commanded by Commandant Edward B. Cole:

"Was sent into battle on a bridge that was violently attacked by the enemy. It was strengthened immediately, as a unit of the highest order. As soon as it fell into line, in conjunction with the French troops, it overcame a violent attack from the enemy on an important point of the position, and undertook, on its own account, a series of offensive operations. In the course of these manoeuvres, thanks to the great courage, the strength, the tenacity of its men, who did not allow themselves to be disheartened, either by fatigue or by losses, thanks to the activity and the energy of its officers, thanks finally to the personal action of its leader, General James G. Harbord, the 4th Brigade saw its efforts crowned with success. In close cooperation with each other, the two regiments and its battalion made, after twelve days of incessant fighting, from the second to the thirteenth of June 1918, on very

TORPEDOED AT SEA

U.S.S. COVINGTON

The first United States Transport to be torpedoed during the War was the U.S.S. Covington. On July 1, 1918 at 9:45 A.M. the Covington making a return trip to the United States, was torpedoed by a German submarine, about 150 miles off the coast of France.

The torpedo struck amidship, between the Engine Room and Fire Room. It was soon learned that the ship was doomed because of the damage received and the crew was ordered to "abandon ship". This was done in good order in about two hours. The U.S.S. Destroyer Smith, was standing by sounding Depth Bombs every half hour in an effort to ward off any further attack, and later aiding in the rescue work of the crew from the Covington. Many of the men had been in the water for several hours, others manned lifeboats and the heroic rescue work went on for hours. All but six men were saved, and taken aboard the U.S.S. Smith, they were taken back to Brest, France, and were later reassigned.

The Covington sank within seventeen hours.

The Officers and men were commended by the Navy Department, Washington, D.C. for their splendid performance in the line of duty, with sympathetic regard for the six men who gave their lives in the performance of duty.

The following is a list of Wakefield men who were aboard the U.S.S. Covington when it was torpedoed:

William A. Capitello
Alfred S. Edgett
John W. Fleming
Robert A. Skinner

MOUNT VERNON

The United States Transport Mount Vernon (German Kronprinzessin Cecile) sailed from Hoboken, New Jersey, with 4900 troops on August 26, 1918. This was its ninth trip in Transport service and the crew were justly proud of their achievement holding the Naval record in transport duty. The Mount Vernon arrived at Brest, France, September 3, 1918.

Leaving Brest the following day in company with the U.S. Transport "Agamemnon" and escorted by the U.S.S. Governor McDougal, Nicholson, Wannought, Wilkes and Winslow. The Mount Vernon proceeding as senior ship.

On the morning of September 5, 1918, at about 7:45 the convoy was proceeding in line formation when the Mount Vernon acting as guide sighted a submarine at a distance of 500 yards off the starboard. The Mount Vernon immediately opened fire. In a few seconds a torpedo was seen approaching the ship and it hit fairly amidship, separating No. 3 and 4 Groups of boilers killing thirty five and injuring thirteen men. All men killed or injured were members of the engineer's force, and were on duty at the time in the fire room.

Captain Dismukes of the Mount Vernon attributes the saving of the ship to the fact, that it was rule to have all watertight doors closed at all times while at sea; all bulkheads were tight and held; additional strength was gained by blanking off all portholes with steel plate, and that the entire crew carried out all orders to meet the emergency.

The Mount Vernon returned to Brest under its own power for repair.

The Officers and men were commended for the heroic performance of duty by the Navy Department, Washington, D.C. as follows:

NAVY DEPARTMENT
BUREAU OF NAVIGATION.
WASHINGTON, D.C.

January 6, 1919.

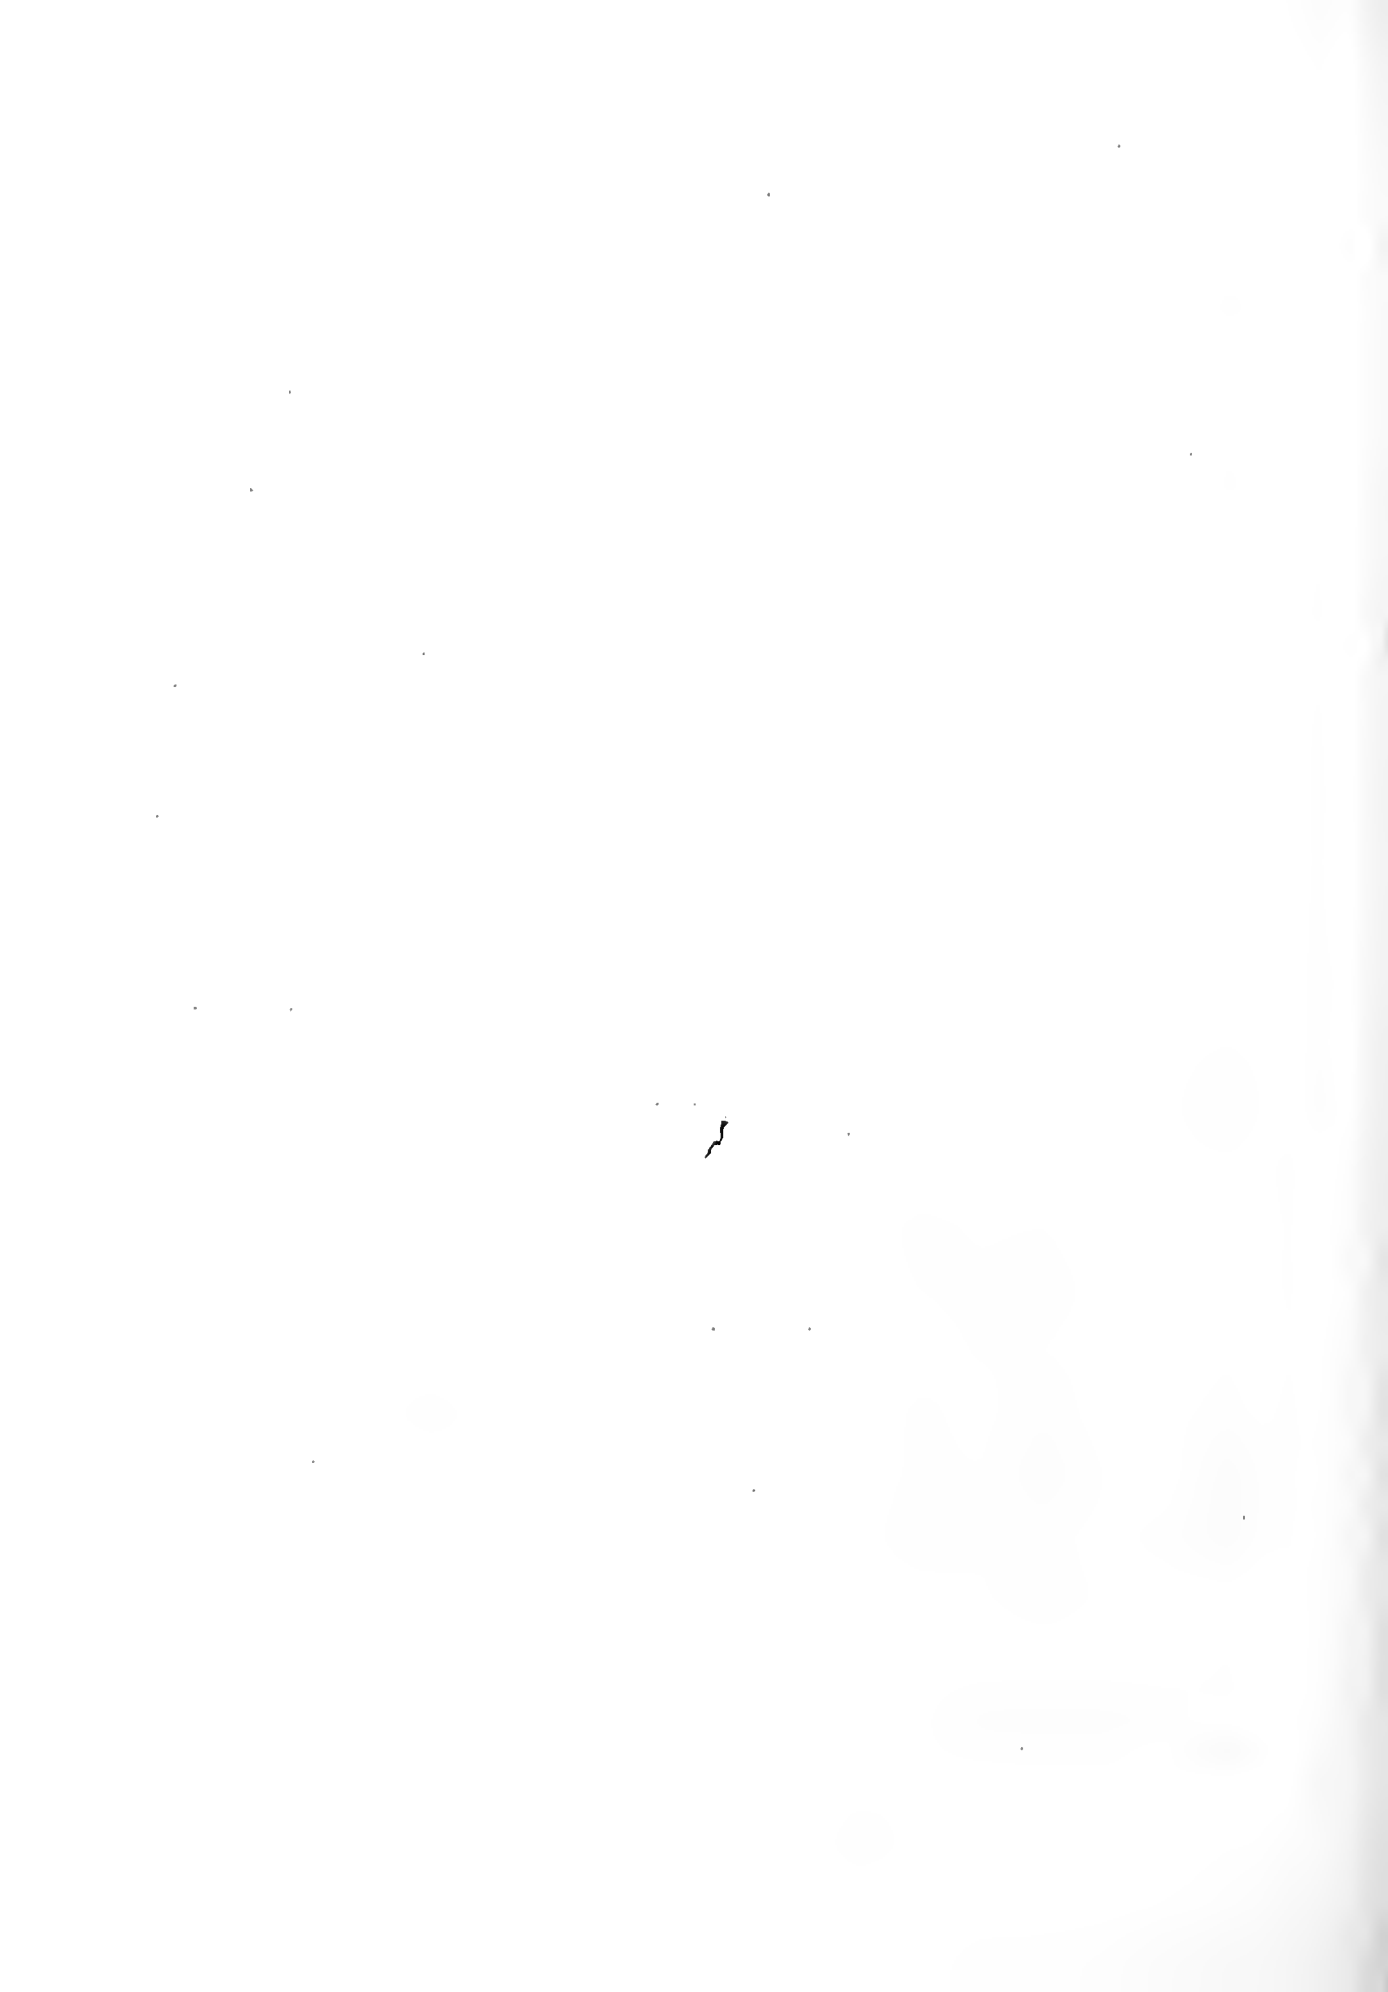

From: The Secretary of the Navy
To : Commanding Officer U.S.S. Mount Vernon Subject: Commendation.

The Department takes great pleasure in commending the enlisted men of the Navy on board the Mount Vernon on the morning of September 5, 1918, for the splendid manner in which they conducted themselves and performed their respective duties, in saving the ship, following its being torpedoed by an enemy submarine at 7:55 A.M. on the above date. The conduct of the entire ship's crew from the time the ship was struck until she arrived in port was such as to uphold the best traditions of the Naval Service.

The following Wakefield men were on duty aboard the Mount Vernon, when it was torpedoed:

Daniel C. Creedon
Thomas W. Walsh

UNITED STATES MERCHANT MARINE

---

The part played by the United States Merchant Marine in the World War was one of major importance and splendid achievement. The colossal task of securing sufficient tonnage to transport our soldiers across, and to handle the vast quantities of food, clothing, ammunition and war material necessary to a successful conclusion of the war required a thoroughly co-ordinate organization. The measure constituting the United States Shipping Board was passed September 7, 1916, and in 1917 this body became the controlling force which allotted shipping for the various purposes of the war.

A strong American reinforcement was necessary on the battlefield to meet the crisis of 1918. The problem confronting the United States was not only securing the requisite number of ships to act as transports and cargo carriers, but to build up the necessary personnel to man the ship. Allied shipping had become so reduced through losses inflicted by the U-Boats that it was impossible for the Allies to furnish anywhere near the necessary amount of transportation.

On April 6, 1917, when the United States declared war there were lying in the harbors of the United States and its Colonies 104 ships of German ownership. Of these, twenty were German liners- passenger ships- best adapted for use as troopships, and strangely enough, built with the idea of eventual use as German transports.

Upon the declaration of the war all of these German vessels were seized by the United States. After examination it was found that the ships' engines had been wrecked by their German crews. The repairing of these ships which was accomplished in a few months was one of the most remarkable feats in the history of marine engineering. The acquisition of these German ships was a most important factor in the solution of our great problem of transporting troops overseas. The astonishing total of 557,788 American troops transported overseas by these steamers tells the whole story.

On October 15, 1917, the United States Shipping Board commandeered all American steel cargo steamers of 2500 tons dead weight or over, and all American passenger vessels of more than 2500 gross tons that were suitable for foreign service. This added to the Federal Marine 408 merchant vessels of more than 2,600,000 tons. To supplement this sea force a shipbuilding program was inaugurated and carried through to an extent never before achieved by any nation. By the middle of 1918, mainly owing to the shipbuilding effort of the United States, the world's output of new tonnage equalled the rate of loss. With this output of new tonnage well under way the next step was to enroll and train a sufficient force to man the large number of ships now available. Training ships were placed in commission, and under the supervision of expert officers a thorough course of training was put in effect.

When it is remembered that a large number of the personnel of the Merchant Marine was made up of men with little, if any, previous sea training, the efficiency which they achieved is a tribute both to the officers and to the men themselves. Their work was hazardous not only on account of the mine infested areas through which they sailed, but because of the U-Boat menace. Many deeds of heroism have been credited to men of the Merchant Marine, and the country may well feel proud of the service which they rendered.

Wakefield men who served in the Merchant Marine are as follows:

Dr. William L. Coon
Director of Health and Sanitation

VOLUNTEER WORKERS

BEARS, ELMIRA WINFIELD, Nurse, daughter of George W. and Jessie G. Bears, was born in Boston, Massachusetts, September 8, 1890. Entered into the service of the American Red Cross, at New York City, New York, October 2, 1917, and sailed for foreign service from New York City, October 14, 1917; arrived at Bordeaux, France, October 25, 1917. She saw active service at Lyons, Paris, Beauvais, Chantilly, Chateau-Thierry, Argonne, and Aisne-Lille, France; was transferred to the Commission for Relief in Belgium, and Northern France. Returned to the United States from Bordeaux, July 25, 1919; landed at New York City, and was discharged, August 8, 1919. Present address: Mrs. Homer Wickenden, California Ridge, Tuckahoe, New York.

BEEBE, LUCIA, daughter of Junius and Eleanor H. Beebe, was born in Boston, Massachusetts, April 9, 1892. During the War she served with the American Red Cross in the Women's Volunteer Motor Corps of the Ambulance Division, and was stationed at the Base Hospital in Boston, also at the Hospital at Camp Devens, Ayer, Massachusetts. The special work of her Division was to meet all returning ships and hospital trains, and transfer the wounded men to and from the hospitals. Present address: Mrs. Albert Wright Rockwood, 150 Main Street, Lakeside, Wakefield, Massachusetts.

COLLINSON, ALFRED E., son of John W. and Lilly Collinson, was born in Jamaica Plain, Massachusetts, December 23, 1894. Mr. Collinson is a graduate of the Wakefield High School, Wakefield, Massachusetts, and afterward attended Phillips Exeter Academy for two years. He left Harvard University after a year of study to join the American Field Service, a volunteer corps of unpaid workers recruited from American Universities. He sailed for France, June 23, 1917, with a group of about fifty New England boys to drive ambulances and assist the Hospital Corps in France. During the battle of the Aisne, in Vauxaillon-Pinon sector, in October, 1917, he drove an ammunition truck for the French Artillery. Later he was sent to the Italian front as an ambulance driver. Writing to his father, in August, 1918, Mr. Collinson said, in describing a part of the Austrian drive on the Piave River front: "All the fighting was just a seesawing back and forth over a depth of about three kilometers, until the Italian Army finally pushed the Austrians back across the river, after nine days of battle. We were on pins and needles for two or three nights, when the Austrians reached a point within a mile and half of our section headquarters. A fairly quick advance of two kilometers would have put our camp in Austrian hands. We were very tired when the show was over. The Chief and I were on the job practically the whole nine days, with very little sleep. We certainly made a good name for ourselves with the Italians. Our cars were every place a car could go, at all hours of the day and night. The Italian Army Chief was more than surprised to note where we sent our cars, where they only sent stretcher bearers. We certainly delivered the goods. Our total number of wounded men carried in the nine day battle was 10,440." Mr. Collinson was decorated for valor with a Silver Medal. This decoration, one of the most coveted in the Italian Army, was presented by the King in person, which is unusual, and we felt quite proud and honored.

Present address: 34 Long Avenue, Belmont, Massachusetts.

GLEASON, MARY ABORN, daughter of Edward U. and Alice B. (Aborn) Gleason, was born in Wakefield, Massachusetts, September 30, 1888. In November, 1918, with a desire to do her part in the World War, she took a special training course in Red Cross work, but joined the Young Man's Christian Association, and a month later sailed from New York for canteen work in France, from where she was sent to Camp St. Aignan. After serving six months she returned to the United States. Present address: Mrs. George H. Bridge, Jr., Box 219, Longwood, Florida.

HANSCOM, DAISY M., American Red Cross Nurse, daughter of William P. and Alice F. Hanscom, was born in Cambridge, Massachusetts. She joined the Red Cross at San Diego, California, May 8, 1918; arrived at Bordeaux, France, June 8, 1918, where she served under the American Red Cross Nursing Service for Public Health, and worked among the civilian French children. Owing to the great need for nurses among the wounded in Military Hospitals in Paris, and at the Red Cross Hospital near Bordeaux, she was loaned to that branch of the service until November 11, 1918, when she took up work among the children of Bordeaux, remaining there until the latter part of April, 1919, from where she was transferred by the Red Cross Commission for the Relief at Lille-Norde, Belgium, working among the entire school population until July 1, 1919. Nurse Hanscom was released from duty at New York City, New York, July 29, 1919. Present address: Hotel Holland, San Diego, California.

POTTER, GEORGE E., Major, American Red Cross, son of George H. and Mary J. Potter, was born in South Boston, Massachusetts, October 18, 1882. On April 7, 1918, as Lieutenant, went overseas from New York City, New York, with a Red Cross Unit from the Forsyth Dental Infirmary of Boston, Massachusetts; was stationed at the Sanatorium Edward L. Trudeau Plessis Robinson on the Seine, in charge of dental work in hospitals at Hatchette, Yerres and Blois. His service continued in camps, hospitals, clinics and airdromes during the summer of 1918, and was behind the lines at Chateau-Thierry, remaining on duty for forty-eight hours on a stretch. Promoted to Captain in August, 1918; following the Armistice, he went to Paris and was appointed a member of the Polish Commission to take relief supplies to Poland. While at Warsaw he received his commission as Major June 19, 1918. Later Doctor Potter continued relief work in Russia, returning to the United States in August, 1919. In recognition of his exceptional service, he was awarded the French Commemorative Medal, with citation; the French Advance Service Zone Medal; the French Verdun Medal, and the Grand Eagle of Poland, from the Polish Government. Present address: Doctor George E. Potter, 14 Yale Avenue, Wakefield, Massachusetts.

HANCOCK, DAISY M., American Red Cross Nurse, daughter of William F. and Alice F. Hancock, was born in Cambridge, Massachusetts. She joined the Red Cross at San Diego, California, May 8, 1918; arrived at Bordeaux, France, June 8, 1918, where she served under the American Red Cross Nursing Service for Public Health, and worked among the civilian French children. Owing to the great need for nurses among the wounded in Military Hospitals in France, and at the Red Cross Hospital near Bordeaux, she was loaned to that branch of the service until October 11, 1918, when she took up work among the children of Bordeaux, remaining there until the latter part of April, 1919, from where she was transferred by the Red Cross Commission for the Relief at Lille-France, Belgium, working among the entire school population until July 1, 1919. Nurse Hancock was released from duty at New York City, New York, July 22, 1919.
 Present address: Hotel Holland, San Diego, California.

POTTER, GEORGE H., Major, American Red Cross, son of George H. and Mary J. Potter, was born in North
 Boston, Massachusetts, October 12, 1888. On April 7, 1918, as Lieutenant, went overseas from New York City, New York, with a Red Cross Unit from the Postgraduate Dental Institute at Boston, Massachusetts; was stationed at the Sanatorium Edward L. Trudeau Pleasure Robinson on the Seine, in charge of dental work in hospitals at Valenciennes, Yverdon and Biele.
 His service continued in camps, hospitals, clinics and airplanes during the summer of 1918, and was behind the lines at Chateau-Thierry, remaining on duty for forty-eight hours on a stretch. Promoted to Captain in August, 1918; following the Armistice, he went to Paris and was appointed a member of the Polish Commission to take relief supplies to Poland.

COMPANY H. 12TH REGIMENT, M.S.G.

---

With the departure of the various units of Massachusetts National Guard to the several camps in connection with the entry of the United States into the World War, the different committees throughout the State where National Guard Units had been quartered, took steps to organize companies for home guard duty to take the place of the departing units.

On Friday evening, March 30, 1917 at the State Armory, a company of Home Guards was formed, about seventy-five men signed up and several drills were held during the following months. In the meantime, the State authorities were taking steps to organize a State Guard, and on May 7, 1917, the members of the Wakefield Home Guard held a meeting in the State Armory to consider the State Guard proposition, in its bearing on the liability to act on guard duty outside of the town, or, in other words, in any part of the State.

A petition was drawn up, asking for the formation in this town, of a State Guard Company. A number of signatures were received and the petition forwarded to the Governor, May 22, 1917. A request was made for inspection of recruits on May 28. Drill of the Home Guard Company, in the meantime had been going on under the direction of Colonel John McMahon, Massachusetts National Guard, retired. At the regimental indoor rifle shoot the last week in May, the Company upheld Wakefield's reputation by winning first place.

On June 20, the signers of the petition went through the necessary medical examination and three Officers and fifty-one men were mustered into service of the Commonwealth, as the 62nd Company, Massachusetts State Guard, by Colonel H.P. Ballard, Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, retired. Most of the men were between 35 and 60 years of age, and only eight had any previous military experience. In spite of this, the Company made rapid progress, and was considered one of the best companies in the State.

All Massachusetts National Guardsmen then guarding public and private property were withdrawn from this duty in accordance with orders from the War Department and were inducted into the United States regular Army. Brigadier General Edwards had long sought this move, desiring to get all National Guardsmen into training camps without further delay. Several times he had telegraphed his recommendations to Washington. The withdrawals were made gradually over a period of ten days, and by July 3rd all National Guardsmen were relieved of this duty.

Word was sent to the New England governors to arrange for substitute guard service in their respective States. Special orders were issued later for substitute guard service at the Watertown and Springfield Armories. The duties of the National Guard were then assumed by the Massachusetts State Guard. Lieutenant Colonel McMahon announced the appointment by the governor of the following officers:

Captain John H. McMahon, retired Lieutenant Colonel of the Massachusetts National Guard, and former commander of Company "A" of the 6th Regiment, and, also, a Spanish War Veteran.

1st Lieutenant. Sergeant John L. Downing, for 12 years member of Company "H", 5th Regiment, Massachusetts National Guard.

2nd Lieutenant. William B. Feindel, a former member for about nine years of Company "A" of the 6th Regiment, also a Spanish War Veteran.

From this date, regular weekly drills were held, and additional drills quite frequently and the members showed considerable interest in the work.

About the first of August, regiments were formed of the State Guard, and the 62nd Company was assigned to the 12th Regiment, Massachusetts State Guard, as Company "H".

On August 7, Captain John H. McMahon was commissioned as Major in the 12th Regiment.

On August 26th, 1st Lieutenant John L. Downing was commissioned as Captain of the Company.

2nd Lieutenant William B. Feindel was commissioned 1st Lieutenant, and 1st Sergeant, Francis H. Marion was commissioned 2nd Lieutenant.

On August 26, 1917, most of the members of the old Company "A" 6th Regiment, Massachusetts National Guard, who had been home on a farewell visit, assembled at the Armory and marched out at 10.00 a.m., for a short parade through the town to the railroad station where they entrained for Ayer, Massachusetts, their last appearance in Wakefield as an organization. Company "H", 12th Regiment, Massachusetts State Guard, acted as their escort on this occasion, the first appearance of the Company outside the Armory.

Regular weekly drills were held in the Armory, consisting mostly of close order work, although during the early part of September, the Company had some practice in extended order; arrangements were made about the middle of September to hold a Field Day during that month. In compliance with Company Order No. 1, the company assembled in the Armory on Saturday, September 2, 1917 at 1.30 p.m., and in light marching order, proceeded to hike seven miles to a camp site previously selected by the officers in North Wilmington, the old Gowing Farm.

Transportation was furnished by Sgts. Henry A. Feindel and William E. Knox for the camp equipage. The weather was pleasant, and the Company made a good showing in making their first camp. The night turned out rather cold, ice forming on the water in the cook house and making it necessary to keep a camp fire most of the night.

The Company had no regular camp equipment, the tents being borrowed, and the members bringing such bedding material as they deemed necessary, in many cases being inadequate for the occasion.

Several skirmish drills were held on September 23rd, and short movements, under the instruction of Major McMahon. This trip proved very instructive to the men as most of them had never participated in any military work prior to their enlistment in the company. It might be well to remark that most of the men in the company were exempted from regular service in the war on account of age or physical disability.

On October 7, 1917, the Company proceeded to Winchester to take part in its first Battalion drill, under command of Major McMahon who was the Battalion Commander.

Fully a thousand people gathered at the park Sunday afternoon, October 28, 1917, to watch the Wakefield, Woburn and Winchester Companies of the State Guard execute maneuvers in a practice battalion drill. Those who had not previously seen the guardsmen in action commented on the excellence of their military work and soldierly appearance, many marvelling that so much had been accomplished in a few months, largely by men past the military age.

Major McMahon of Wakefield, 12th Regiment, was in command, and the Wakefield Company was led by Captain John H. Downing. The regular drills, and numerous additional drills were held in the winter months.

It was not decided until July 1, 1918 that there would be a regular tour of camp duty for the State Guard. In accordance with instructions, Company "H" assembled in the Armory, July 25, and proceeded by trolley to Framingham, Massachusetts, arriving at the camp grounds at 9.30 p.m.. This was the first experience in regular camp duty by most of the members of the company. However, considerable attention had been given by officers and non-commissioned officers of the company, instructions as to details of camp duty before starting for camp, and as a result, the Company made a very creditable showing during the tour.

On July 29, 1918 the tour being completed, the company returned to its home armory, much benefitted by the experience, and orders were issued that drills would be suspended until the middle of September 1918.

On November 12, 1918 the company went to Cambridge by motor truck and joined the 12th Regiment there assembled.

At 1:00 p.m., the Regiment proceeded to Boston to take part in the Military parade in that city in commemoration of the signing of the Armistice.

On Friday April 25, 1919, in accordance with Regimental General Orders # 6 and Company Orders # 3, the members of this company left Cambridge where they joined the balance of the regiment and marched to Boston where, with the entire State Guard, they participated in the Parade of the Yankee Division.

On September 10, 1919, in accordance with telephone instructions from the Regimental Commander, the Company assembled in the Armory at 1:30 p.m., and proceeded to Cambridge, where they joined the Regiment for Guard Duty in connection with the strike of the Boston Police Force.

Company "H" continued in this capacity until December 18, 1919, at which time all of the Military forces were relieved from duty in Boston, Massachusetts.

Drills continued through the winter of 1919-1920, but interest commenced to fall off owing to the fact the members realized the days of the State Guard were numbered, and it was only a matter of time when they would make a place for the new National Guard company, then being recruited. On May 30, the Company again took part in the Memorial Service for the departed Veterans of the Civil, Spanish and World War and acted as escort to the Spanish War and World War Veterans in their exercises at Montrose.

Nothing further of interest took place until the Company was mustered out on November 1, 1920, the new National Guard Company having been formed under command of Captain Thomas J. Quinn.

The following is the roster of Company "H" 12th Regiment.
Massachusetts National Guard.

ARMISTICE DAY NOVEMBER 11, 1918.

VICTORY CELEBRATION

Of all the special incidents that marked the various events during the tense days of the war, the occasion that represented naturally the greatest joy, was that which marked the conclusion of the most stupendous war of all history. For some days rumors had been current that the hostilities were about to end, but one had scarcely dared to believe in such a marvelous thing as peace, and it was not until the eleventh of November, 1918, that the authentic report of the signing of the Armistice was actually received.

In Wakefield, as in thousands of towns and cities throughout our great country, there was an uncontrolled demonstration of relief and gladness, although it seemed incredible that the awfulness of war was at last to be a thing of the past.

Before dawn on this memorable day of the signing of the Armistice, the demonstration had begun in Wakefield by the blowing of whistles and clanging of bells, interspersed with the strident sounds of horns, shooting of blank cartridges, and constant shouting and cheering.

The news came first to the Public Safety Committee about ten minutes after four o'clock in the morning, and about twenty minutes afterward, several enthusiastic members of the Italian Band assembled, and with the addition of a crowd holding aloft Japanese lanterns and torches on poles, they paraded the streets for nearly two hours. There were mighty reverberatory blasts of dynamite from towns nearby, as well as shots from guns, revolvers, and cannon that had not been used for years. The first church bell to sound forth its note of triumph was in the Congregational Church tower, followed almost immediately by the Baptist Church bell.

The day was practically a holiday in the various local industries. Girls from the Harvard Knitting Mill led a procession of workers of the various factories of the town, a parade that numbered fully a thousand. They marched exultantly through the town down Water Street to the Evans Shoe Factory, and the Heywood Brothers Rattan Plant, gathering recruits wherever they went. The parade returned up Albion Street headed by the Italian Band, and followed by workers in trucks and automobiles. Of course, there was no thought of school that day, the no-school signal sounding at twenty minutes past seven in the morning.

All participated in the grand medley of joy. Throughout the day there was the same spontaneous expression of enthusiasm. The churches were opened wide in order that people might enter to give thanks, and at the Congregational Church, Monday afternoon, over two hundred people were present at an inspiring half-hour union service attended by members of the Protestant churches of the town. At a special service at St. Joseph's Church Monday night the Te Deum was sung, and there was the Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament.

The parade of the school children in the afternoon was a splendidly impressive feature of the day's happenings. The teachers and the boys and girls were there in full force, there being at least two thousand present, who made a line while marching in regular ranks of four which extended from the Common through the square to the State Armory. Nearly everyone had a small flag which was waved proudly as the procession proceeded.

The parade in the evening was said to have been the finest procession ever seen in Wakefield. Although there had been no special preparation for the event, as an expression of eager, spontaneous, joyous enthusiasm on the part of everybody, it was a tremendous success. Due largely to the fine executive planning of Selectmen Hackett and Lieutenant Colonel John H. MacMahon, who was Chief Marshal, the different organizations were quickly placed in line as soon as they arrived at the Town Hall, and, with scarcely any confusion or interruption, and almost exactly on time, the great parade started. To the brilliant accompaniment of flashing red lights flaring Roman candles, madly ecstatic cannon, and with thousands of appreciative and excited spectators, the procession of over a mile long moved in triumph through the streets of the town, marching up to the Common, down Common Street to Yale Avenue, then on the North Avenue, along Chestnut Street back to Main Street, through the Square again to Wakefield Junction, and returning at last to the Town Hall, where the Star Spangled Banner and America were played by the band and sung in mighty chorus by the throng. Chief Pollard and the Italian Band of the Columbus Musical Club marched at the head of the procession, followed by another platoon, consisting of Lieutenant Colonel MacMahon and his aides and military associates. Next came the honored Veterans of the Civil War, those who were too aged or feeble to march riding in automobiles that had been loaned by patriotic citizens. The sight of these few old men, suggesting so poignantly the loyalty and sacrifice of the great days of nearly sixty years ago, was one of the most touching pictures of the whole vivid procession. Behind the Veterans of the Grand Army marched Company H, 12th Regiment, Massachusetts State Guard, the High School Battalion, and the Veterans of the Spanish War. A picturesque feature of the parade was the presence of workers of the Red Cross with their white kerchief and insignia of office led by Mrs. Charles E. Tingley. Marching beside her was chairman Harry I. Thayer of the War Chest or Liberty War Fund. Just ahead were the different clergymen and the members of the Public Safety Committee. The Daughters of Veterans, led by the patriotic instructor, Miss Annie Van Nostrand, were followed by Miss Dorothy Perley and Miss Mildred Matheson, who made charming Goddesses of Liberty. With them was Uncle Sam impersonated by Reuben N. Perley, Jr., son of Colonel Reuben N. Perley. There was also H.M. Warren, Camp 34 Sons of Veterans, Junior Camp Sons of Veterans, Wakefield Council K. of C., the various teachers of the town, each carrying a large, silk school flag, the Junior Red Cross girls and boys with Drum Corps, the girl Scouts and Boy Scouts, the Campfire Girls, the Food Production Committee, the Wakefield Lodge B.P.O. Elks, Wakefield Lodge Loyal Order of Moose, Golden Rule Masonic Lodge, Souhegan Lodge I.O.O.F., Wakefield Court M.C.O.F., Uniformed Rank K. of P. (Wakefield Company), Wakefield Merchants' Association, Postmaster O'Connell, clerks of the Post-Office and carriers, Wahpatuck Tribe Red Men, St. Joseph's C.T.A. Society, Wakefield Social Club, and the Wakefield Fire Department, Wakefield Aerie Order of Eagles, Clan McPhail O.S.C., The Polish Society, Italian Union Club, Sons of Italy, Italian American Progressive Club. The showing of the Fire Department was one of much gayety. All the motor apparatus were adorned with flags and bunting. There was a band especially for their division. Members of the Cade Chapter Women's Auxiliary rode in the motor truck of Assistant Chief Feindel, and the various firemen were on different pieces of apparatus.

The venerable Amoskeag steam fire engine was an interesting feature of this division, the old engine being fired up as if for immediate action, smoke coming fiercely forth from the smokestack and its whistle adding to the general racket. The soft light from the Japanese lanterns hanging from crossbars on poles and borne by some of the Italian Societies gave a touch of weirdness to the scene. There marched with Lieutenant Colonel McMahon, Chief Marshal of the Parade, Corporal Brent M. Edgar, Dr. J. William O'Connell, Battalion Adjutant of the 12th Regiment Massachusetts State Guard, Captain John L. Downing of the State Guard, and Lieutenant William B. Feindel, also of the State Guard.

The whole celebration of Armistice Day was a memorable event.

Another celebration of the great news of victory took place a few weeks later when special exercises were held in the Town Hall on the evening of November 28. Representatives of the different patriotic and fraternal associations occupied seats reserved for them, while the public in general were present in great numbers in the balcony and in those sections of the hall not reserved. A Chorus consisting mostly of members of the Community Choral Society were on the platform in the rear of the speakers of the evening. The brightly colored flags of the Allies were draped in harmonious fashion from the balcony.

There was music by the Columbus Musical Club at the beginning and at the close of the program. Hubbard B. Mansfield, chairman of the Committee of arrangements, announced the various songs and introduced the speakers. The singing was under the direction of Arthur W. Keene, Miss Helen Arnold leading with the cornet and Mrs. Dorothy Cate Flint being at the piano.

[illegible]

After closing remarks by Chairman Mansfield of the Committee of Arrangements the entire audience saluted the flag in the most enthusiastic way.

At the suggestion of Mr. Mansfield, the audience stood while the Veterans of H. M. Warren Post 12, G.A.R. marched slowly out, and while still standing they sang the chorus of the "Battle Hymn Of The Republic."

AMERICAN LEGION

On the 28th of May, 1919, the Wakefield Veterans of the World War organized the local post of the great general body of the American Legion of World War Veterans, which was first organized in Paris, March 15 to 17, 1919, by one thousand officers and men, delegates from all the units of the American Expeditionary Forces. The action of the meeting in Paris being confirmed and indorsed by a similar gathering held in St. Louis, May 8 to 10, 1919, when the Legion was formally recognized by the troops who served in the United States.

The meeting was an extremely enthusiastic one, and Major Edward J. Connelly was elected the first commander by a unanimous vote. Lieutenant James G. Brown was chosen vice-commander; Charles Creedon, adjutant; Sergeant Nathan W. Eaton Jr., treasurer; Corporal Charles F. Young, historian. The first Thursday of each month was decided upon for the regular day of the meeting. In the very early weeks of the existence of this local post, interest was taken in the name that should be given to this Wakefield branch of the American Legion. On the 20th of June 1919, it was voted unanimously to name the new local post, the Corporal Harry E. Nelson Post, American Legion of World War Veterans. This tribute was to the memory of the gallant young corporal, who was the first of Company A, to die on the field of conflict, was felt to be of great appropriateness, and is not the only instance in which Wakefield has thus honored one of her sons, the Wakefield Veterans of the Civil War giving their post the name of Major H. M. Warren, one of the most valiant soldiers who ever fought from Wakefield, and also the men from our town who had fought in the Spanish War were glad to give to their post the name of Corporal Charles F. Parker, the splendid young soldier who died at sea in 1898. The interests and activities of Corporal Harry E. Nelson Post were many and varied. In August of 1919, a charter was received from the National Executive Committee there being sixty-three names of Wakefield Veterans on this charter. The membership increased constantly and much enthusiasm was shown. There was a constant effort to increase among Veterans a feeling of patriotism and responsibility as to their share in the great reconstruction work of the world.

September 4, 1919, a permanent organization of the Corporal Nelson Post was effected and new officers were elected, Major Edward J. Connelly being re-elected commander; Nathan W. Eaton, Jr. Vice commander; Clarence A. Thompson, adjutant; Dr. Ira W. Richardson, finance officer; Charles F. Young, historian; and Donald White, Chaplain.

Various committees were appointed by the chair, including the sick and funeral, welfare, employment, legislation, membership, publicity and entertainment.

At the meeting of December 4th, 1919, a letter was received from Mrs. Edward J. Connolly president of Company A Lady associates gracefully presenting to the Post a gift of money representing half of the balance left in their treasury, one half being given to the new company then forming to take the place of Company A.

Early in 1920 plans were entered upon in regard to forming a National Women's Auxiliary of the American Legion. The formation of this auxiliary was authorized by the National convention in Minneapolis in November, 1919, at which time it was decided that the membership should be limited to the wives, mothers, daughters, and sisters of all men and women who were in the military and naval service of the United States between April 4, 1917 and November 11, 1918, or who died in line of duty, or after honorable discharge and prior to November 11, 1920. The auxiliary in Wakefield was not formally organized until September 22, 1920, when the meeting for organization was held in the Post headquarters. Mrs. E.F. Phillips of the State Committee was present to assist in the formation of this Women's Auxiliary to Corporal Harry E. Nelson Post 63 of the American Legion, and the officers elected were Mrs. Ira W. Richardson, president; Mrs. Carl E. Allison, vice-president; Mrs. Thomas Walsh, chairman of the executive committee; Mrs. Anna Brockbank, chairman of the committee on sickness.

The Corporal Harry E. Nelson Post is today one of the leading civic organizations in Wakefield and is held in high esteem by all the members of the community.

THE CONSTITUTION OF THE AMERICAN LEGION

---

PREAMBLE

For God and Country, we associate ourselves together for the following purposes:

To uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States of America; to maintain law and order; to foster and perpetuate a one hundred per cent Americanism; to preserve the memories and incidents of our association in the Great War; to inculcate a sense of individual obligation to the community, state and nation; to combat the autocracy of both the classes and the masses; to make right the master of might; to promote peace and good will on earth; to safeguard and transmit to posterity the principles of justice, freedom and democracy; to consecrate and sanctify our comradeship by our devotion to mutual helpfulness.

ARTICLE I

The name of this organization shall be THE AMERICAN LEGION.

ARTICLE II

The AMERICAN LEGION is a civilian organization. Membership therein does not affect or increase liability for military or police service. Rank does not exist in THE LEGION; no member shall be addressed by his military or naval title at any convention or meeting of the LEGION.

ARTICLE II - SECTION II

The AMERICAN LEGION shall be absolutely non-political, and shall not be used for the dissemination of partisan principles, or for promotion of the candidacy of any person seeking public office, or preferment. No candidate for or incumbent of a salaried elective public office shall hold any office in THE AMERICAN LEGION or in any department or Post thereof.

ARTICLE II - SECTION III.

Each member shall perform his full duty as a citizen according to his own conscience and understanding.

ARTICLE III

The AMERICAN LEGION shall be organized in departments, and these in turn in Posts. There shall be one department in each State, in the District of Columbia, and in each territory of the United States. The National Executive Committee may establish additional departments in territorial possessions of the United States, and in foreign countries.

ARTICLE IV - SECTION I

Any person shall be eligible for membership in the AMERICAN LEGION who was regularly enlisted, drafted, inducted or commissioned, and who served on active duty in the Army, Navy, Marine Corps of the United States at some time during the period between April 6, 1917, and November 11, 1918, both dates inclusive, or who, being a citizen of the United States at the time of his entry therein, served on active duty in the Naval, Military or Air forces of any of the Governments associated with the United States during the Great War; provided, that no person shall be entitled to membership (a) who being in the Army, Navy or Marine Corps of the United States during said period, refused on conscientious, political, or other grounds, to subject himself to military discipline, or unqualified service or (b) who, being in such service, was separated therefrom under circumstances amounting to dishonorable discharge and has not subsequently been officially restored to an honorable status.

ARTICLE IV - SECTION II

There shall be no form or class of membership, except an active membership as herein above provided.

ARTICLE V - SECTION I

The legislative body of the LEGION shall be the National Convention to be held annually, at a time and place to be fixed by the preceeding National Convention.

ARTICLE V - SECTION II

In the National Convention, each department shall be entitled to five delegates, and one additional delegate for each thousand members, whose current dues have been received by the National Treasurer thirty days prior to the meeting of said Convention; and to one alternate for each delegate. The delegates shall be chosen at department Conventions to be held not less than two weeks before the National Convention.

ARTICLE V - SECTION III

Each delegate shall be entitled to one vote. The vote of any delegate absent and not represented by an alternate shall be cast by the majority of the delegates present from his department. Alternates shall have all the privileges of delegates, except that of voting.

ARTICLE V - SECTION IV

A quorum shall exist at a National Convention when 60% of the Departments are represented as provided above.

ARTICLE VI - SECTION I

---

The National Convention shall elect a National Commander, and five National Vice-Commanders. No two Vice-Commanders shall be chosen from the same department, and no more than three from those who served in the Army. These officers shall be members of the National Convention and of the National Executive Committee, and the chairman and vice-chairman respectively of both bodies. A Vice-Commander shall on request of the National Commander act as chairman of either of said bodies.

ARTICLE VI - SECTION II

The National Convention shall also elect a National Chaplin.

ARTICLE VI - SECTION III

---

Such officers shall serve until the adjournment of the succeeding National Convention and thereafter until their successors are chosen. Vacancies in these offices occurring between National Conventions, shall be filled by the National Executive Committee.

ARTICLE VI - SECTION IV

The National Commander shall appoint a National Adjutant. The Executive Committee shall appoint a National Treasurer, and such officials and standing committees as may be necessary, and shall authorize or approve all expenditures. All appointed officers shall hold office at the pleasure of the appointing power, and all persons having the custody of funds shall give adequate bonds.

ARTICLE VII - SECTION I

Between National Conventions, the administrative power shall be vested in the National Executive Committee, which shall be composed of the National Commander and Vice-Commander in office, and of one representative from each department to be elected as such department shall determine; provided that in 1919 the delegates to the National Convention shall elect the Executive Committee men and alternates from their respective departments.

ARTICLE VII - SECTION II

The Executive Committee shall meet at the place of the National Convention within twenty-four hours after the final adjournment of the National Convention and thereafter at the call of the National Commander. The National Commander shall call a meeting upon written request of fifteen or more members of said Executive Committee.

ARTICLE VII - SECTION III

Seven members shall constitute a quorum of the Executive Committee.

ARTICLE VIII - SECTION I

Departments shall be chartered by the National Executive Committee, and shall be composed of the Posts within their respective areas. Each department charter shall be signed by the National Commander and National Adjutant.

The amount of such annual dues shall be determined by each National Convention for the ensuing year.

ARTICLE X - SECTION III

The annual dues shall be collected by each Post and transmitted through the Department to the National Treasurer.

ARTICLE XI

The National Executive Committee after notice and a hearing may suspend or revoke the charter of a Department which violates this Constitution or which fails adequately to discipline any of its posts for any violation, and may provide for the government and administration of such department during such suspension or upon such revocation.

ARTICLE XII

Any member in good standing in a Post, removing from his Department, shall be entitled to a certificate from his Post stating his membership and the duration thereof.

ARTICLE XIII - SECTION I

The American Legion recognizes an auxiliary organization to be known as the "Women's Auxiliary of the American Legion."

ARTICLE XIII - SECTION II

Membership in the auxiliary shall be limited to the mothers, wives, daughters and sisters of the members of the American Legion, and to the mothers, wives and sisters of all men and women who were in the Military or Naval service of the United States, between April 6, 1917 and November 11, 1918 and died in line of duty or after honorable discharge and prior to November 11, 1920.

ARTICLE XIII - SECTION III

The Auxiliary shall be governed in each Department of the American Legion by such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the National Executive Committee, and thereafter approved by such Department of THE AMERICAN LEGION.

ARTICLE XIV

All acts performed and charters heretofore granted by the temporary organization of THE AMERICAN LEGION are hereby ratified and confirmed.

ARTICLE XV

This constitution may be amended at any National Convention by the vote of two thirds of the total authorized representation thereat, provided that the proposed amendment shall have been read at such Convention at least twenty-four hours before the vote thereon.

NATIONAL INCORPORATION

This Constitution is adapted conformably to the Act of the Congress of the United States of America of September 16, 1919. The Constitution provides that each State Organization shall pay to the National Governing body the sum of 25 cents annually for each individual member. It is thought that funds collected in this manner will be more than ample after the Legion is fully organized. In order, however, to finance the National Headquarters during the organization period, a fund is being raised in the form of advances from members and friends of the Legion in about twenty-five leading cities throughout the country by a Finance Committee of which John W. Prentiss who was a Lieutenant Colonel during the war, and who headed the Red Cross subscription campaign, is Chairman.

It is the intention that these advances be re-paid in the future.

WELCOME HOME CELEBRATIONS

The first formal celebration of the home-coming of the Wakefield veterans of the War was held on the evening of February 26, 1919 in the Town Hall and Armory, and proved to be even more successful than had been anticipated.

The hall had been well decorated for the event. The harmoniously blended colors of the flags of the Allies gave a splendor to the scene, while over the stage was a large arch on which was blazoned forth the words "WELCOME HOME". Throngs of citizens kept coming throughout the early evening, and long before eight o'clock all seats in the hall were taken except those saved for the men in uniform.

The exercises were inaugurated by Reverend William H. Flynn, assistant pastor at St. Joseph's Church, who offered a solemn and impressive invocation expressing the gratitude of all for the return of the boys after the rigors and hardships of the long campaign, and also voicing consolation to those who had lost loved ones during the war. The main address of the evening was given by Reverend W. R. Perkins, D.D. of the Universalist Church. He spoke in part as follows:

"There is one word that expresses what is in our hearts, - that word is GLADNESS. These brave men have returned home. Our gladness is enhanced by our knowledge of where they have been and what they have done. They have maintained the military prestige of our town and added lustre to its history. Like their forebears they come back bringing with them the wreath of victory. The debt of gratitude that we owe them can never be paid. In defending our country, in making the world safe for democracy, they have defended you and me, protected our lives, and made our firesides safe abiding places for our wives and children. Civilization was threatened, the world was tottering to its fall, when they went forth for battle for justice and freedom. As the years roll on, the valor of your deeds, and righteousness of the cause for which you fought, will grow clearer, and the world happy in the enduring peace which you have won, will bless you and your children for the sacrifices that you have made. Whatever you were before you entered the service, remember now and always that you have worn the uniform; you have marched beneath the flag; you have fought in the army of your country, and henceforth are consecrated by the baptism of fire to all that is highest and holiest in our American citizenship."

There next followed the awarding of medals, but before this ceremony, Chairman Round of the Selectmen, also Chairman of the committee of arrangements for the evening, requested the entire audience to rise while he read the honor roll of the twenty-nine boys from Wakefield whose lives had been laid down in the service of their country. As these names were slowly read the audience remained standing for a full minute in perfect silence- the most solemnly impressive tribute to the dead that could be given.

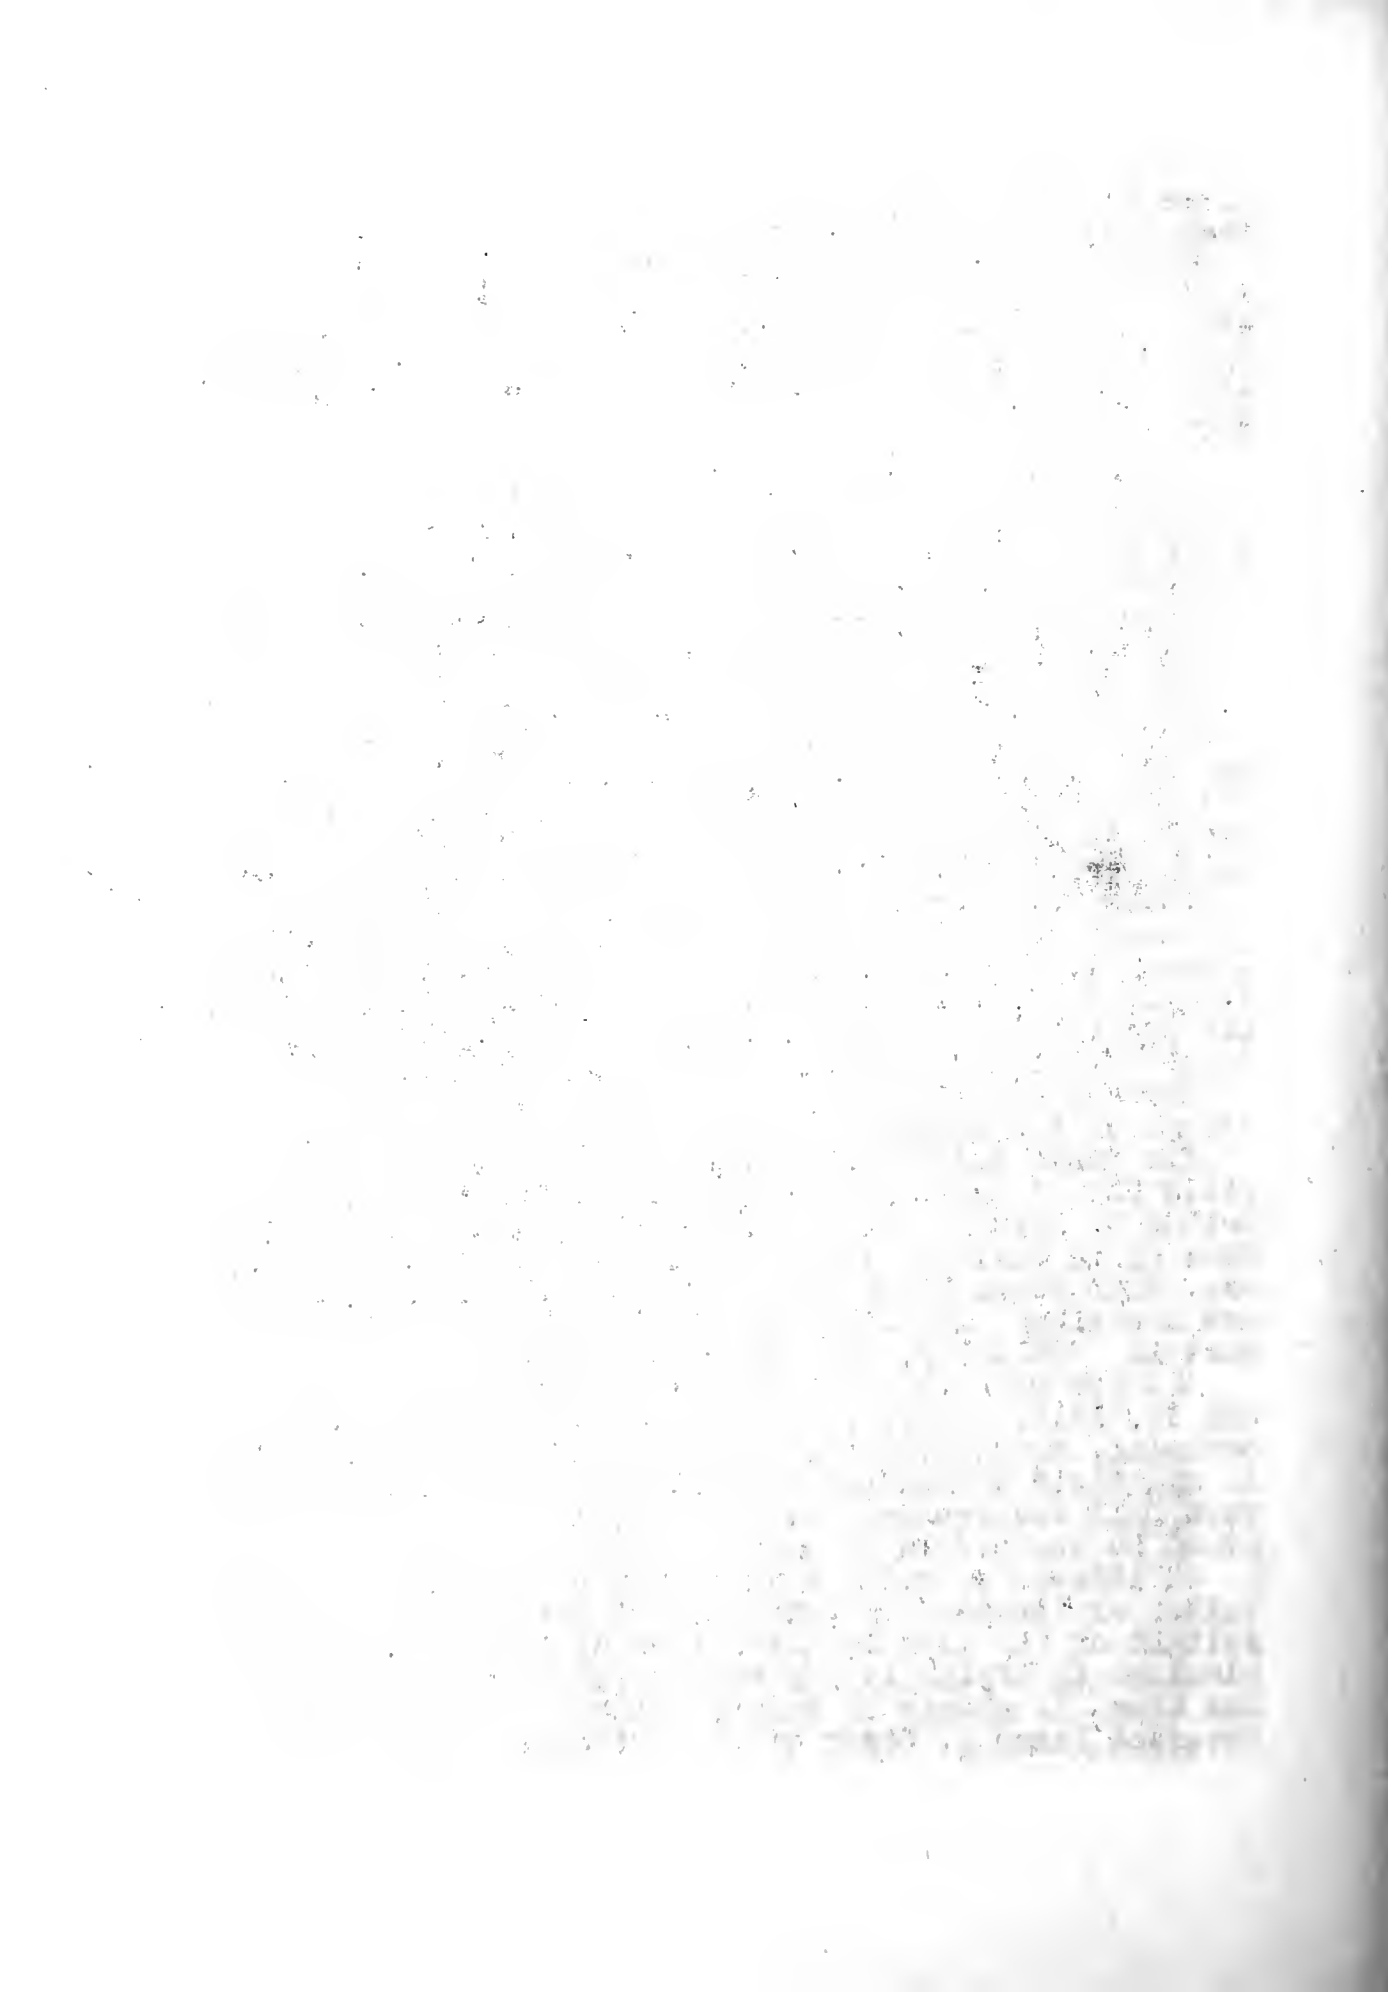

The arrangements in regard to the presentation of medals had been attended to by Colonel J. H. McMahon, who called the names. After each man had received his medal from Chairman Round, he passed across the stage to the five members of the Lady Associates of Company A, comprising Mrs. Edward J. Connelly, Mrs. Julia Thompson, mother of Lieutenant Clarence A. Thompson, Mrs. Anna Brockbank, mother of Lieutenant Gray B. Brockbank, and of Corporal John C. Brockbank, who died in France, Mrs. Barnet Gersinovitch whose son, Sergeant Saul C. Gersinovitch was still overseas, and Mrs. John M. Widell, whose husband was also in France. These ladies pinned the medals on the coats of the veterans, the whole ceremony being performed in the midst of most enthusiastic applause.

Those who occupied seats on the stage beside the speakers mentioned and the members of the Lady Associates of Company A, were Representative E. K. Bowser, Commander J. W. Poland, Post 12, G. A. R., Commander Alfred Goodwin of the Spanish War Veterans, Captain John L. Downing and Lieutenant William B. Feindel of the State Guard, and Gardner E. Campbell, Chairman of the Soldiers' Bureau, who had charge of the medals.

The music during the evening was furnished by the Wakefield Choral Society under the direction of its leader, Arthur B. Keene. The "Star Spangled Banner" was sung by Miss Effie Carlson, the audience joined in the chorus; Mrs. Ruth Gowen Fiske sang "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp the Boys are Marching" and Miss Elizabeth Gleason had the solo part in "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean."

A later reception was held to the returned veterans May 14, 1919. There were 134 service men honored on this occasion, among them being many former members of Company A, and their Commander Major Edward J. Connelly. The Town Hall was crowded, over one hundred being obliged to stand in the corridors or doorways.

An address of welcome was given by Chairman Charles E. Walton of the town reception committee, expressing the delight of the town in the return of its sons, and its pleasure in trying to pay some of the honor and respect due them. A prayer of thanksgiving was offered by Reverend James J. Cogan of the Episcopal Church, and the "Star Spangled Banner" was sung by the audience led by the Adelphi Quartet, with Miss Helen Arnold, cornetist.

The chief address of the evening was delivered by Father F. J. Halloran of St. Joseph's Church, who paid eloquent tribute to the unselfishness and heroism of the hundreds of young men from our town who bore so bravely the difficulties and dangers of the long months of the war. His speech in part follows:

"From time immemorial cities and towns have officially welcomed returning heroes of victorious armies, who by deeds of valor and prowess have brought to their homelands imperishable renown, military empire or political greatness. And yet, where in history shall we find a conquering army greeted with more spontaneous enthusiasm than meets our boys on their return? Why this universal stirring of the American heart? Many things have contributed to the emotion which quickens our heartbeats. We are proud that in the formation, equipment, training and transportation of so vast a force, in so brief a period, America accomplished the impossible. We are proud that our youth, taken from farm and shop, from college and every peaceful avocation, were able after a short period of training, not only to hold their own with the most highly developed army the world has known, but actually to break the back of that army. We are proud of the physical prowess, the technical skill, the resourcefulness, the cool courage which are the common possession of our Army and Navy. And we are proud that these young men sprang forward at their country's call without murmur, without question, without hesitation, faced with a smile the dangers and sacrifices which the future surely held for them and went forth in the spirit of crusaders who vowed to fight for righteousness, and who determined to bear themselves like men who count it a privilege to die that liberty may live, and that justice may triumph.

I dare to say that the unselfish spirit of our young manhood manifested in these last two years has rarely been equalled and has never been surpassed in this or any other country. Our soldiers have given the most impressive translation yet given of American doctrine. When the founders of the Republic issued their lofty proclamation that all men are created free and equal, and that just government must rest upon the consent of the governed, the world said, "sublime in theory, but impossible in practice." The men who issued this charter of rights themselves held slaves". When Abraham Lincoln wiped out the single blot on our Constitution, struck the shackles from four million slaves, and said: "Henceforth no man shall hold property in his brother", the world again applauded, but said, "It is an act of tardy justice, dictated by a military necessity".

When our army went to Europe they carried the principles of the Declaration of Independence and the spirit of Lincoln's proclamation.

All have some share in the victory, but everyone will admit that all the effort and the poured-out wealth on this side of the ocean, were but to support the army and navy- the two arms by which the nation struck its blows.

The opportunity for service at the front did not come to all of our troops, but all did what their country asked of them; all were ready for the last sacrifice. Among the soldiers upon whom the town bestows tonight its medal of approbation and its expression of gratitude, are men who have the proud distinction of being numbered among the victors of Apremont, of Chemin-des-Dames, of Chateau-Thierry, of St. Mihiel, of the Argonne;- magic names that will thrill mankind while time shall last. These are the men who bore the discomfort of the trenches, the terrors of No Man's Land; who faced the deadly gas attack, the high-explosive shell; the hand-to-hand struggle, the machine gun fire, raining bullets thick as hail. These were among the men who saved Paris, who stopped the Prussian Guards in their tracks; who drove the German hosts from the Marne.

We come tonight to thank the comrades who survived for facing the raging storm of battle, and saving us from the horrors and devastation of invasion; for saving from destruction the finest things in civilization. We come to tell them how proud we are that from that day at Apremont when the fearless captain of old Company A took the chevrons from his shoulders, and, seizing a rifle, lead his men into a hand-to-hand conflict with the Germans, down to the very last hour of the war, the men of Wakefield in whatever unit or capacity they served, proved themselves by every test to which valor, endurance, and high quality of soul can be subjected, to be heroes, every one.

While you and men of your character are on guard, America is safe, for you will never surrender, nor will you permit others to surrender the ideals, aspirations, and principles that now make our republic what she is.

Here in this native home of Freedom will Lincoln's prayer be answered, and "the government of the people, by the people, and for the people shall not perish from the earth".

After a musical selection by Miss Arnold and singing by the quartet the Roll of Honor was read by Chairman Round of the men who had died in the service, and the silent moment for meditation and prayer in which the whole audience joined, was as deeply impressive and moving as at the first reception several months before.

Major Connelly was first called upon by Chairman Round, and as he came before the audience, he was greeted with a spontaneous and overwhelming ovation. He spoke briefly of the great happiness and thankfulness of all the boys in being back home again. He spoke appreciatively too, of the honor that had been given to them by the town, modestly disclaiming for himself alone the applause and eager welcome, and speaking in the highest term, of the splendid courage and continual faithfulness of all the boys. As Major Connelly concluded his remarks, his wife, who was chairman of the medal pinning committee of the Lady Associates of Company A, placed the decoration on her husband's coat. The other veterans then mounted the platform to receive their medals. Mrs. Connelly was assisted by Miss Marjory Hawkes, sister of Lieutenant Edgar B. Hawkes of Company A, and Miss Martha Nelson, Miss Margaret McLaughlin and Miss May Burns, all three of whom were sisters of men who had died in service.

After the exercises in the Town Hall a dance was enjoyed in the Armory, the Wakefield Orchestra playing for the dancing. The refreshments and social part of the evening were in charge of the Lady Associates of Company A, Mrs. Kathryne Connelly being assisted by Mrs. C. L. Harlow, Chairman, Mrs. Margaret A. Riessle, Miss Elizabeth Robertson, Mrs. Mary J. Seabury, Miss Winona Edwards, Mrs. Julia Thompson, Mrs. Mary E. Widell, Mrs. Anne Munier, Mrs. Catherine Barry, Mrs. Mary B. Sargent, Mrs. Edith Montague, Mrs. Aloysius P. Butler, Mrs. Katherine McMahan, and Mrs. Carrie Gammons.

WELCOME HOME CELEBRATION, OCTOBER 13, 1919

Of all the great days that have come to Wakefield, by far the most conspicuously memorable of all was the Welcome Home Celebration on Columbus Day, October 13, 1919. It was an occasion on so large a scale with thousands of people taking part, with so varied and intensely interesting a program, perfectly carried out, and, above all, with such a glorious setting of radiant autumn weather, and with so abounding and whole-hearted enthusiasm, that this day will be remembered in the history of our town as one of its most resplendent red-letter days.

Wakefield had indeed arrayed herself in most brilliant festal attire. On all the public buildings, and on many private residences, the national colors gleamed forth. The house of Dr. S. C. Richardson, whose father was the founder of the famous old Richardson Light Guard, excited much admiration for its harmonious decorations.

The grand parade started promptly at two o'clock from the State Armory, and it was an imposing spectacle to see the long procession march slowly through the town. Gorgeous with color from the many flags and with the banners on which shone the various brilliant emblems of the different fraternal organizations, the sparkle of the bright sunlight was over everything and many bands added the gay and stirring accompaniment of music to the scene. Chief James J. Pollard headed the line with a platoon of police followed by Chief Marshal, Lieut. Col. John H. McMahon, chief of staff, Dr. J. William O'Connell, and his aides, Major George W. Braxton, Commander J. W. Pollard of Post 12, G. A. R., and Commander A. E. Goodwin of Camp 39, U. S. W. V. Then followed Chairman Charles E. Walton and members of his committee, who had charge of the celebration, accompanied by the men whose very presence in these days affords perhaps the most touching part of any procession -- the few remaining survivors of the veterans of 1861. Those who were too frail to walk rode in automobiles, but the majority of them walked steadily and sturdily along the route under the direction of Adjutant G. H. S. Driver. There, too, were the veterans of the Spanish war, followed by the impressive ranks of the veterans of the last war -- hundreds of them marching together, recalling so vividly the terrible days through which they had passed so recently. The High School Battalion made a fine appearance, as well as the long line of school children with their teachers. All the different fraternal organizations and practically all the lodges and societies in town were represented. There were splendid delegations representing the various women's organizations of the town, and those associations that had been formed just to meet the needs of the recent war, and as they passed in the great procession the thousands of spectators cheered them repeatedly.

The terminus of the procession was the park where the various divisions were grouped about the band stand.

The scene at the park was one of varied splendor and interest. Directly in front of the pagoda, which was decorated profusely and attractively with flags and streamers, stood the battleworn veterans of the Great War, who were the special and honored guests of the town, and all others who had marched in the notable parade, and scattered all about on the green grass of the park and the common, under the blue October sky, were the thousands of breathlessly interested spectators. Automobiles were crowded everywhere along the streets; the splashes of color from the uniforms of the men, the picturesque costumes of many who had participated in the procession, and the rippling water of lovely Lake Quannapowitt in the vista beyond, with the gleaming, golden sunshine all over, made a picture of extraordinary beauty.

The exercises were opened by Rev. Dr. Warren S. Perkins, pastor of the Universalist Church, who offered a prayer of thanksgiving for the safe return of the men who had gone from Wakefield, making a special prayer for consolation "for the mothers, fathers, and relatives of those who paid the supreme sacrifice". Rev. Father F. J. Malloran, pastor of St. Joseph's Church, spoke with his habitual fervor and eloquence as he gave a splendid tribute to the boys who had fought so gallantly for the flag. He spoke in part as follows:

"Veterans of the World War: Wakefield rejoices today as she gathers about her her valient sons who at their country's call went forth to battle for the honor of the flag, for liberty and justice. Like a proud mother who recounts the glorious deeds of heroic children and is conscious that their glory is her's, Wakefield today, by every means in her power attests publicly her joy, her thankfulness, her pride; her joy that her soldier sons are with her again; her thankfulness for the sacrifices they have made, for the hardships they have borne; her pride in their high achievements, their noble deeds, their undaunted spirit in camp, and ship, and field.

By this solemn, official recognition given by the town, by this outpouring of her people from every home, Wakefield strives to do honor to the heroic spirit of her young men who were willing to sacrifice all, even life itself, for the safety of their country and for the victory of Right.

Not content with bestowing on you her own encomium, she bids the best-loved general of the American army, who was the solicitous father as well as the skilful leader and idol of his troops, to come here and confirm by his judgment her own high opinion of your worth.

Well may Wakefield rejoice! Well may the old town outdo herself in manifestations of hearty welcome! For you have added new laurels to the garland of honorable traditions that she was worn through many generations.

The spirit of Revolutionary days which inspired her sturdy farmers to resist oppression, and to win for themselves freedom and unfettered opportunity, the spirit of '61 which summoned Wakefield's youth to fight for the preservation of free government, has had a new birth in our days.

We have seen our young men at a word from the President rise in mighty waves, cross the seas, and with incredible swiftness plunge into the danger; they shirked no duty, they bore hardships and privation and sickness and wounds without a murmur; they faced without flinching all the terrors of modern warfare; they took every objective set for them; their bugles sounded always the advance- never the retreat. With that American spirit, which faces a gigantic task only to conquer it, these young men but recently from civilian ranks, joined battle with the most formidable of armies and by sheer fighting power sent it reeling back in crushing defeat. There is nothing like it in history.

We are proud that so many of our own boys were with that Yankee Division which has brought imperishable glory to old New England. We are proud that others of them, fighting with the Regulars and the Marines were as brave and efficient as the best of those doughty warriors. Wherever Wakefield men went, in camp, in ship, in trench, on battlefield they measured up to the highest standard of devotedness, courage and effective service. We are proud of the important contribution which you veterans made to the fighting strength, to the effective organization and support of those superb American armies which turned the tide of battle, which seized victory out of disastrous defeat, which saved Europe from the domination of the German military caste, and which opened up the way to ultimate triumph of justice everywhere.

Alexander, Caesar, Napoleon, had not more daring, resistless soldiers than that brave host which bore the Stars and Stripes in triumph from the Marne to the Rhine. And the motive power which animated America's legion lifted their warfare to the plane of exalted, moral endeavor. The Americans were an army of crusaders. They fought for no selfish aims. Neither greed of territory, not lust for political power, nor desire for commercial advantage called them into the camps at home or drove them overseas. They were Knights of Humanity. Confident that in their valor and prowess America had a shield which no enemy thrust could pierce. They crossed an ocean filled with menace to make this world a better place for the children of men to live in. They went to lift up Liberty, trodden under foot, to save nations from threatened slavery, to cast down unscrupulous might from its throne, and to put in its place justice and righteous peace. They went to extend to the world those principles of freedom, of justice, and of righteousness which the men of the American Revolution established as the foundation of our own government.

However great may be the obstacles that stand in the way of universal realization of those ideals, we must have faith that the principles which the American Flag Stands for, which the American Army fought for will finally prevail. The human race moved forward under the Providence of God, that Divine Providence that raised up the United States of America to be the home of freedom, the haven of the oppressed, the pillar of flame to light the peoples of the world to liberty, made use of the American army to interpret to the world the lofty spirit of unselfish devotion to Right, and to the good of the human race, which is the outgrowth of truly free, democratic institutions. That object lesson which the American Army taught the world will bear fruit through the ages. Let us indulge the hope that in our own day our expectation of its expectation of its compelling force may be realized in generous measure.

Veterans, Wakefield rejoices that each one of you, whether overseas or in the camps of this country, did his proportionate share to accomplish the general results, to win the decisive victory. Each one of you took the post which authorities of your country assigned to you. Each was ready, if necessary, to lay down his life that his country might live. Today, with hearts filled with gratitude for your sacrifices and with admiration for your spirit and achievements, the citizens of the town salute you. We hail you as the victors in the most awful of conflicts. You brought into another hemisphere a flag glorious with the promise of blessings to humanity, and you brought that flag back without a stain upon its folds.

As you have vindicated the honor of that flag, as your courage has kept it floating in triumph, the country confidently looks to you, veterans, to stand unflinchingly in the years to come, for the principles and ideals which the American flag embodied. You have learned in service how necessary it is to subordinate individual inclinations and interests to the good of the whole mass. In that consists the essence of patriotism. We are patriotic only to that degree in which we are willing to sacrifice ambitions and interests which clash with the good of the whole people. It is that spirit of unselfish devotion to the general good which must prevail everywhere, if our country is to solve the grave problems now confronting us.

Surely, you who proved yourselves ready to pay the utmost price of patriotic sacrifice, will now lend the powerful influence of your example to the maintenance at home of those principles of liberty and justice for which you endured the inconvenience of the camp, the hardships and peril of the field.

Fellow citizens, on this propitious day which marks the discovery of a new world, when we gather here to thank God for the safe return of our warriors and to give them a most hearty welcome, shall we not draw inspiration from the contemplation of their generous spirit, their high enthusiasm, their noble loyalty to great ideals? Shall not the sacred memory of Wakefield's heroes who gave to their country the last full measure of devotion, whose bodies now rest in earth hallowed for all time by their sacrifices, stir us to a new sense of our obligations?

Shall we, all of us, those who served with the forces and those who served in civilian life, dedicate ourselves anew to our country's cause that we may help each in his own sphere, to keep America true to her sublime destiny.

America! Magic name that thrills the heart of the expectant world! Thee shall we serve with gladness, with zeal, with willing sacrifice. For Thou art the land of open gates, of equal rights, of noble aspirations; Thou art the country that seeks justice and hates iniquity; Thou art the home of liberty without license, of law without despotism; Thou art the hope of all the peoples of the earth. May the God of nations guide and guard thee now and through the ages."

During the progress of Father Halloran's address, Maj. Gen. Clarence R. Edwards arrived on the scene, and Father Halloran stopped to pay a tribute to him who he designated as the best loved general in the army, - a tribute that was indorsed most tumultuously by the great throng, who gave three cheers and a tiger for the idolized general.

Major Edward J. Connelly was next introduced by Charles E. Walton, Chairman of the Town's reception committee, and presiding officer at the exercises at the park. Major Connelly, of course, was greeted by continued applause and cheers. He spoke with his usual simplicity and modesty, expressing briefly his thanks to the town for its appreciation of the deeds of the men in service, and speaking words of especial respect and love for General Edwards, who was worshipped not only by the men, but by every mother and father of a New England soldier. He made an earnest appeal to the veterans to do their best to "deliver the goods" in civilian life as they had in the camp or on the field of battle.

Then came perhaps one of the crowning features of the whole program, - the appearance of Major General Edwards, hero of the Yankee Division and chief guest at the celebration. Not only at the very outset, but throughout the whole course of his address, the thousands among the spectators greeted the famous general with the most flattering tribute of affection and admiration. Although there was no carefully prepared address on the part of General Edwards, for he spoke, as always, with much informality and simple, direct, racy vigor of speech, yet he had the gift of making himself one with his audience to an extraordinary degree. Among other things, General Edwards said "A scene like this is typical and illustrative of the sustaining power of New England's beloved men. It's as fine a thing as exists in our body politic, and the thing that made men carry on in France when great odds were against them." In speaking of various traits of the American doughboy, he said "He does not stand being praised falsely, but will go the limit when his mind and heart are set on what he believes to be the right." He gave extended praise to Major Connelly, stating that he stood "like the Rock of Gibraltar" while his soldiers were singing "Hail, Hail, the Gang's all here," and he believed that the splendid deliberation and poise and courage that had been so conspicuous in Captain Connelly made him deserve to be promoted to a Major. He also, among other things, spoke with special commendation of Captain Paul H. Taylor as being the best repair man in the Ordnance Department that he met while in France.

In speaking of the many pressing post-war problems, the General said, "The most serious problems of the country is the training of the youth into citizenship. Training for citizenship is a vital necessity. Give a man a sound body and a sound mind and teach him the other's point of view. of the men thrown on the scrap heap 80 per cent are redeemable and 15 per cent of the others are useful, for we proved that in France."

In his frank praise of the work of the field men, General Edwards said: "You had a stout-hearted and game lot in the service. I congratulate Wakefield on its participation in the war, and thank Wakefield for its magnificent demonstration today. Things like this give definite hope of the future and make people smile."

General Edwards' Aide read the roll of honor of the young from our town who had given their lives in the war, also the names of those who were wounded in the service, and those who were cited for bravery and gallantry in action. It was stated that there were 750 Wakefield men under the colors, of whom 200 were in the fighting Yankee Division. It was announced, too, that 29 had given up their lives in service, 19 being killed in action, 8 dying of disease, and 2 from accidents. In the 26th Division there were 9 who died in service. In the town list there were 80 wounded, 37 cited for bravery, of whom 30 were in the Yankee Division; there were 70 Officers in the war of whom 12 were men of the Yankee Division. As the different names were read, General Edwards gave a delightful personal touch to the occasion by asking the winners of the war cross to put up their hands as their names were called, and as they did so, he spoke in a simple, kindly, merry way to each one, indeed, many of the men were familiar figures to him, and he must have been pleased and touched at the continued applause, and at the real affection that was manifested by so many of the service men.

Chairman John J. Round of the Board of Selectmen made a presentation to Corporal Harry E. Nelson Post 63 of the American Legion of two flags, - one the Stars and Stripes representing the army and the other the Union Jack representing the Navy. As he presented the colors, Mr. Round spoke of the enormous sacrifices made by these boys from Wakefield, who answered so cheerfully to the call to the colors, and he said that these flags would be a continual inspiring reminder to the generations to come. The flags were held by Bugler Daniel Galvin of the Army and Joseph Mullen of the Navy during the remainder of the exercises at the pagoda.

Presentation of medals by the town concluded the exercises on the park. Chairman Round of the Selectmen gave a short speech of presentation, and those men who had not previously received these decorations had them pinned on their breasts at this time

The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that every entry must be supported by proper documentation, such as receipts or invoices. This ensures transparency and allows for easy verification of the data.

In the second section, the author outlines the various methods used to collect and analyze data. These include direct observation, interviews with key personnel, and the use of specialized software tools. Each method has its own strengths and limitations, and the choice of which to use depends on the specific requirements of the study.

The third part of the document provides a detailed description of the results obtained from the data collection process. It includes several tables and graphs that illustrate the trends and patterns identified in the data. The author also discusses the implications of these findings for the organization and suggests ways in which the information can be used to improve performance.

Finally, the document concludes with a summary of the key points and a list of references. The author expresses confidence that the findings presented here will be valuable to the organization and hopes that they will lead to positive changes in the way business is conducted.

amid the joyous, cheering thousands of spectators. Those who pinned the medals upon the coats of the men were relatives of members of the old Richardson Light Guard:- Mrs. Kathryn Connelly, wife of Major Edward Connelly; Miss Margaret Duggan, sister of Corporal John Duggan; Miss Edith Hanley, cousin of Private John Heningar; Miss Rachel Sargent, sister of Private G. Dudley Sargent, and Mrs. Louise Montague, sister of William and James Seabury.

After the exercises on the Park were over, the procession was partly re-formed, and marched back to the Armory, the others who participated in it forming a line through which the veterans of the World War passed. One of the many gracious acts of General Edwards was his marching along on foot beside Major Connelly at the head of the procession on the return to the Armory. It was one more evidence of the fine, simple, every day humanness of the man, and it but enhanced the strong affection that was already so lavishly his from the men who had served under him.

UNVEILING OF THE TABLET

One of the impressive memorials given in the months after the war was ended was the dedication of the boulder and tablet in honor of the men and women of Greenwood who served in the World War. The affair occurred on the afternoon of May 23rd, 1920. Although the day was most inclement, the skies being particularly dark and lowering, and cold winds blowing, there was a large throng of people present, many coming from neighboring towns and cities.

Amid the waving of flags and music from the Wakefield Italian Band, the procession moved through the streets. The parade formed in front of the Union Church on Oak Street, and headed by a platoon of police under Chief James J. Pollard, marched up Oak Street and Francis Avenue to Greenwood Avenue, then down to Main Street, thence to the Schoolhouse on Main Street, where was the boulder in the very center of the Schoolhouse lawn, draped in a large American flag.

The Board of Selectmen and the various patriotic and military organizations of the town were represented. The program was one of much interest. The exercises were opened by the unfurling of a new American flag from the schoolhouse staff by Leon A. Blanchard, a veteran of the 104th Regiment, 26th Division, while Miss Helen Arnold played the "Star Spangled Banner" on the cornet, and the school children sang. After the children saluted the flag, William E. Arnold gave an address followed by Reverend J.J. Cogan of Emmanuel Church, who made the opening prayer. Reverend B.W. Riner, Pastor of the Greenwood Union Church and Chaplain of the American Legion Post, spoke with much eloquence and fervor. Major Edward J. Connelly unveiled the tablet and read the list of the names that were inscribed upon it, after which a memorial service of much solemnity was held for Robert Gibbs, the only man from Greenwood who died in the service. This moving ceremony was closed by the reverent playing of "Taps" by Miss Arnold on the cornet. The benediction was pronounced by Reverend W.S. Perkins, D.D. of the Universalist Church and as a conclusion to the afternoon program the children sang "America" while the band played.

THE HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES

The history of the United States is a story of growth and change. It begins with the first settlers, who came to the Americas in search of a new life. They found a land of opportunity, but also a land of challenge. The early years were marked by conflict and struggle, as the settlers fought to establish their communities and defend their rights. Over time, the United States grew from a small colony into a powerful nation. It was a process of constant evolution, shaped by the dreams and aspirations of its people. The story of the United States is a testament to the power of the human spirit and the ability of a nation to overcome adversity and build a better future.

The early years of the United States were marked by a series of challenges and struggles. The first settlers, who came to the Americas in search of a new life, found a land of opportunity, but also a land of challenge. They faced a harsh environment, with limited resources and a lack of infrastructure. Despite these difficulties, they persevered and established their communities. The early years were a time of great hardship, but also a time of great achievement. The settlers built a nation that would go on to become one of the most powerful and influential in the world.

The growth of the United States was a process of constant evolution. It was shaped by the dreams and aspirations of its people, who sought to create a better life for themselves and their children. The United States grew from a small colony into a powerful nation, with a rich and diverse culture. It was a process of constant change and adaptation, as the nation faced new challenges and opportunities. The story of the United States is a testament to the power of the human spirit and the ability of a nation to overcome adversity and build a better future.

UNVEILING OF THE WAR MEMORIAL TABLET.

A very appropriate tribute to the Wakefield men who had made the supreme test of their patriotism in the World War was the public unveiling of the Memorial Tablet Sunday afternoon, November 1, 1920.

The arrangements for the event were in charge of the War Memorial Committee to whom had been intrusted by the town the duty of deciding upon a Memorial that might in some lasting way signify the debt of Wakefield to these men who had laid down their lives in the war. Plans had been made some time before, and it was thought that it would be peculiarly fitting to have the dedication of the Tablet on the Sunday nearest to Armistice Day, or "Legion Sunday". Several days before the event occurred, a formal invitation was given to the people of Wakefield by the Memorial Committee to attend the ceremony, and an invitation was given also to the various patriotic organizations of the town to take part in the dedicating parade.

The afternoon of the 14th of November 1918, a quiet and reverent throng of several thousand people gathered about the boulder that had been placed on the triangle at the southern end of the common, upon which was inscribed the names of those making the supreme sacrifice. The procession was a memorable one, led by a platoon of police under command of the late Chief James J. Pollard, and with impressive music from the Woburn National Band, they marched along Main Street from the Armory to the Common, with representatives of the companies and organizations who in one way or another expressed the patriotic spirit of our town. There were Company K, 101st Infantry, with Captain Thomas J. Quinn; Corporal Harry E. Nelson, Post 63 American Legion, with Commander Ira W. Richardson, M.D.; Corporal Charles F. Parker, Camp 39 United Spanish War Veterans; H.M. Warren Camp 34 Sons of Veterans; H.M. Warren Post 12, G.A.R.; Honorary Associates of Corporal Nelson Post American Legion, with President Harry E. Clemons; Wakefield High School Battalion; a contingent from the Red Cross Society; representatives of the Public Safety Committee; Selectmen and the Clergymen of the town.

The Chief Marshal was Major Edward J. Connelly, Commander of the Richardson Light Guard, at the time the United States declared war; his aides being, Lieutenant Colonel John H. McMahon (M.V.M. retired), and Lieutenant Edward E. Hickey. At the High School building, the members of the parade were joined by women from various patriotic associations who had not marched from the beginning of the parade, and all then formed a hollow square about the boulder.

The inauguration of the exercises was made by the many school children who formed the rear of the procession, and took their place on the north side of the hollow square and sang "America",

Rev. W.S. Perkins, D.D. of the Universalist Church made a simple and reverent invocation, after which, Rev. Benjamin W. Riner, as well as being a veteran of the war, gave an address in which he stirringly expressed the sentiments of the hundreds of men from Wakefield who had taken their place in the ranks in the Great War, and emphasized the desire on the part of these veterans not to forget the real significance of those never-to-be-forgotten days. His speech follows:

" Ladies and gentlemen, I have been instructed to speak words which would express the sentiment of the ex-service men on an occasion like this, concerning those who have answered the bugle call of God's great Army beyond. This occasion is too sacred for argument or show of hands. He does best today who says little and feels deeply, for the greatest things of life are handicapped by mere words; too often the cloak of verbiage gives the wrong impression. Therefore, I shall attempt only to express the feelings and heartfelt, innermost thoughts of the ex-service man. First of all, we have not forgotten our comrades who fell in battle, who went down beneath the blue or gave way to some dread disease at home or abroad. Those lads with great dreams, lifework planned, great futures before them! Suddenly, the Call--- then heart throbs, a challenge: " Shall Germany crush the world beneath her iron heel?" Now, for a peace-loving, home-loving, expectant young man it was a struggle to leave all; kiss mother, father, brother, sister, sweetheart, wife, good-bye, and go forth to war. No, we have not forgotten. We have not forgotten those troop trains; we have not forgotten how we were suddenly thrust under military discipline, a thing so vastly different from what we had ever been accustomed to. We have not forgotten those days when the boys marched down the street of the home town with loved ones walking along the sidewalks, following as far as they possibly could. What I have just said does not mean that such was too hard for the soldier. I feel sure that I voice the sentiment of the ex-service men here, when I say that it was the home folk for which we felt so deeply. How well I remember the day I left my own home town for training camp. I can see my mother's dear sweet face as she kissed me good-bye. Bitter-sweet it was, and to me only typical of all good mothers. I can see my daddy, just as the train was pulling out, standing on a station truck, tears rolling down his care-worn cheeks, and in a broken voice shouting, " Get the Kaiser, boys "!. And I, being a married man, had other experiences. It was the wife who followed me to the last step, to her the parting word was said and the babe of three years looked questioningly into my face, unable to comprehend the full meaning. AGAIN, I repeat, we have not forgotten, and the honest ex-service men will tell you that one of the heaviest burdens he bore was the knowledge of anxious hearts, waiting, watching at home. There is a special group here today we have not forgotten. You, Father, Mother, Sisters, Wives, Children, Sweethearts, whose loved ones did not return. Believe me, we have not forgotten your wound. We are not very demonstrative we ex-service men; somehow, we shrink from display but we remember you today in tender sympathy. When our comrades fell, it was not for them we worried, but for you loved ones at home. How hard it was, and oh, how tender we tried to be when sending you the letter telling you of our comrades who had fallen. And now, I tell you how we feel about those who did not return. We feel, we do not need to pray for those who died to make the world a better place in which to live. We can risk those lads with God. The truth is, we feel for you who must wait until some new morning before you shall see the face again, that you have loved long since and lost a while!, and down deep in our hearts it is for you we pray.

Listen!. Do you not hear voices, "still, small voices" of our comrades fallen slain?. OH, MEN, what ails men?. What ails women?. Do those voices plead in vain?. Listen!, I hear a message from those whom the gold stars represent on this memorial. That message is well put in the classic lines of John McCrea:

" We are the dead; short days ago
We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow Loved and were loved, and now we lie

In Flanders Field.

Take up our quarrel with the foe;
To you from failing hands we throw
The torch; be yours to hold it high
If ye break faith with us who die
We shall not sleep, though poppies grow".

In Flanders Field.

Do you not hear the VOICE?. Tell me, what was our answer during war days?. Let McGrea tell us in other famous lines:

" Tell them, O guns, that we have heard their call.
That we have sworn and will not turn aside,
That we will onward till we win or fall,
That we will keep the faith for which they died".

Men, we did carry on, "Over there". Guns did belch forth. New hands did come to replace failing hands. But one day about two years ago, the guns ceased their roaring. I ask you, did the voice of the slain cease calling?. Do you not hear them calling now?. What are they saying. Answer---"Carry on, carry on; guns have ceased, but carry on. If you want us to sleep in peace, carry on. What have we to give in place of cannons roar?. It is for cannon to cease.

This, ladies and gentlemen, is the great question that faces every earnest ex-service man. Abraham Lincoln in that famous Gettysburg speech, raised the question that we must face today." Did they die in vain?. What answer shall we give?

In the presence of you who mourn the loss of those fallen, in the presence of God, our Father, we ex-soldiers, consecrate ourselves to the task remaining before us. And allow me to hint, that he who does not see his particular task, let him remember the days of stress when he looked up into the face of God and asked for guidance and trust . Then these shall not have died in vain".

After the reading of the Armistice Day proclamation of the American Legion by Thomas J. Kenney, adjutant of Corporal Nelson Post, Chairman Harry I. Thayer of the War Memorial Committee spoke briefly and with proper simplicity of the purpose of the gathering, and of the ideal that the committee had had in presenting the tablet to the town. His speech is as follows:

Dear friends, we have come here today to perform a beautiful and solemn duty; to do a thing which will add one more event to the history of Wakefield and the World War. And as we stand here by this veiled boulder, we realize only too well that nothing our human hands could erect would be adequate to express our gratitude for what the 800 Wakefield men did for liberty. No tablet, no fountain, no chime of bells, no beautiful building even, could possibly express our admiration for our men, as we think of their days of fighting and waiting and suffering. We comprehend all this only dimly, but such realization as we have of what they went through, we wish to keep vivid and unfading.

And even while we realize that this tablet, beautiful and permanent as it is, cannot express all that we would like to have it, yet we believe that we are expressing the thought of every citizen of Wakefield, when we say that we are glad that, from now on, the hundreds who shall daily pass this spot, and read these words of dedication, can say: "Wakefield honors her men who fought for her; she remembers them in love and in honor!"

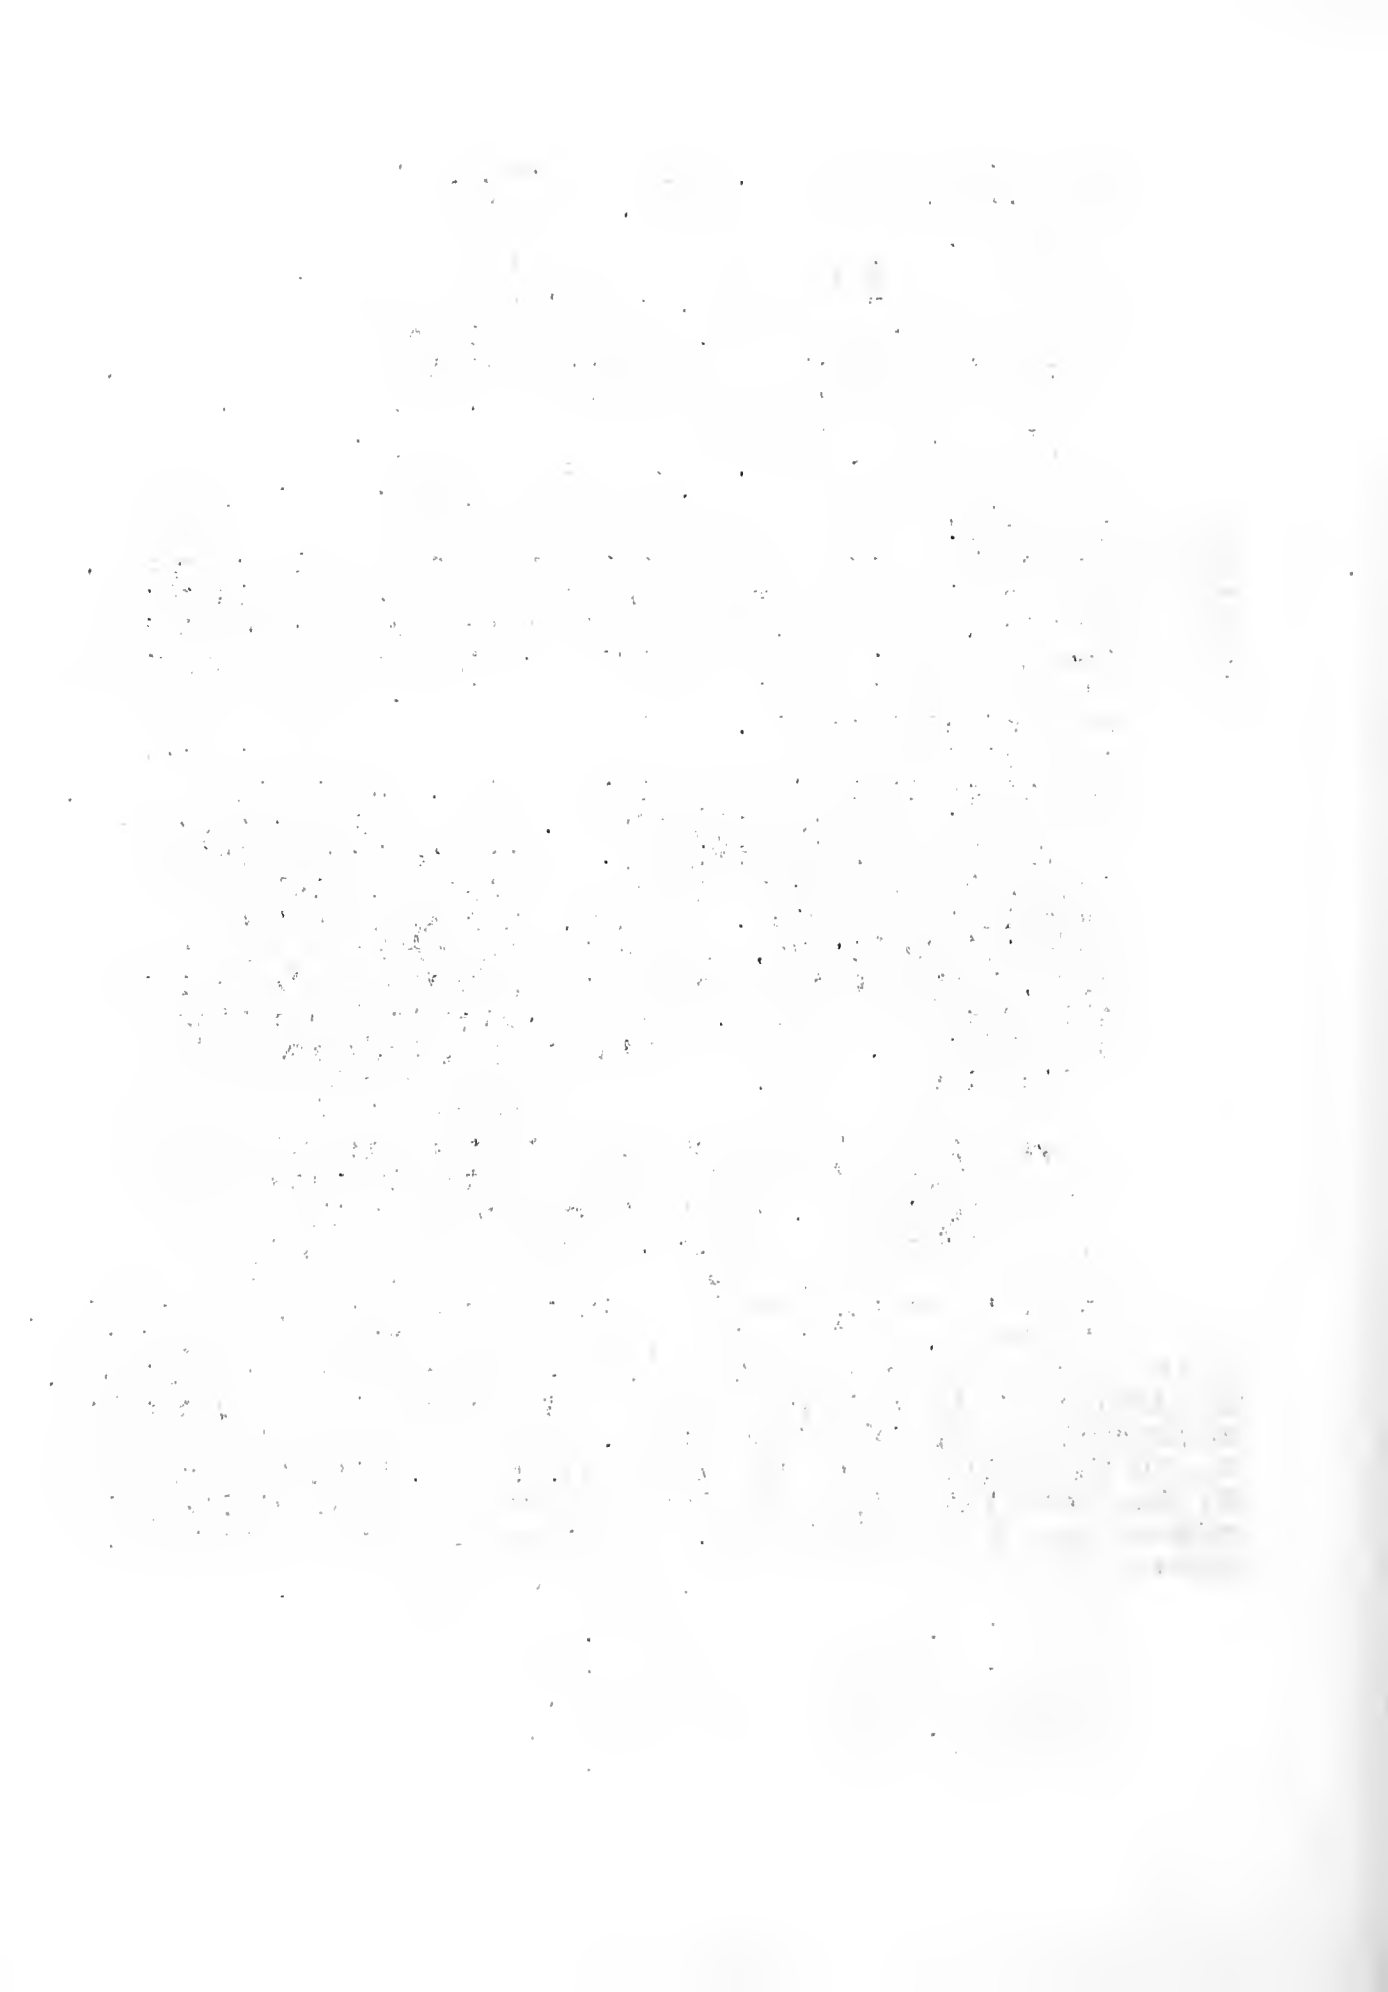

As we thus try to express today through this ceremony, our gratitude to every man and woman who was in the service, we are also aware that the presence of this bronze tablet has a significance to everyone who stayed at home and is a citizen of Wakefield. It is a message of good citizenship. It is rarely exciting to be a good citizen; there is no splendid adventure in it; sometimes it isn't even interesting. But it is our job, dull as it may sometimes seem, and nothing can separate us from our responsibility. To try to be good citizens is the least we can do to honor the Wakefield men who were in the service. And now, on behalf of the War Memorial Committee, and acting through them for the town, I have the honor and the privilege of unveiling this Memorial Tablet, which belongs to the citizens of Wakefield, and of reading to you the words of dedication upon it:-

"To the honor and glory of the men and women of Wakefield who served in the World War, and to those who made the supreme sacrifice."

The tablet was then unveiled in the presence of the waiting, expectant people, who stood with bared heads in reverent tribute as the names were read of the twenty-nine soldiers and sailors, the memory of whose devoted and heroic lives will be one of the most precious glories of our town.

In the stillness of the late autumn day, with the sunlight falling upon the brilliant colors of the flags and military insignia of many an organization, the following names were read:

|                     |                  |
|---------------------|------------------|
| Robert Baker        | Nicola De Felice |
| Herbert E. Biggs    | John P. Donegan  |
| John C. Brockbank   | John P. Duggan   |
| Joseph Buckley      | Edward M. Fay    |
| William H. Cartland | Crowell G. Fish  |
| Paul Cartwright     | John T. Burns    |

|                    |                         |
|--------------------|-------------------------|
| Michael Gibbons    | Ambrose Hughes          |
| Robert H. Gibbs    | Bert L. Johnson         |
| Alvin W. Gordon    | George W. Killorin, Jr. |
| Henry A. Heningar  | Clark R. Lincoln        |
| Harry E. Nelson    | James Martino           |
| Patrick Neville    | Andrew P. McLaughlin    |
| Erlend F. Norton   | Edward S. Merrill       |
| Albert Ray Townley | Richard P. Merrill      |
| Henry Nacella      |                         |

One of the most tenderly moving numbers of the program was the response that was then made by William H. Cartland, in behalf of the parents whose sons had died. Mr. Cartland's own son, Sergeant William H. Cartland, Jr., had been one of the very first of the Wakefield boys to give their lives on the fields of France, and his few simple, quiet words seemed fraught with a peculiar pathos.

They were as follows:

" Mr. Chairman and friends, it is with reverence that the parents and next of kin of those whose names are on this tablet, wish to express their thanks to you and your committee and through you to their townspeople for this beautiful tribute and lasting Memorial to our loved ones.

While this tablet shows only names of those who gave their lives, it is also a monument to all of our brave boys who were willing to fight and die if need be.

Lincoln said in his Gettysburg speech that it is not what we say, but what we do that counts in this world, and we all know what our boys did and we are proud of each and every one of them.

It must be the heartfelt and earnest prayer of everyone of us that never again will conditions require such a sacrifice by those whom we love."

At the close of the exercises, the school children gave a salute to the flag, and both the children and the audience joined in singing the National Anthem. The music furnished by the band, not only during the procession, but several times in the program itself, was an inspiring addition to the exercises. The whole occasion although without elaborateness or ostentation, was one of solemnity and beauty.
